St. John's Hospital was founded, in 1602, by Roger Manners, who left a rent charge of £40 per annum for the support of 6 poor men. £22 of this sum is charged on the Duke of Rutland's estate at Nether Haddon, and £18 is paid out of an estate at Wensley. Each inmate receives £5 a year, and 20s. for a new gown, and £4 yearly is given to a laundress.

Robert Bott, in 1665, left 10s. a year to be given to the vicar for a sermon at Whitsuntide, and 7s. to be distributed in bread to the poor.

In 1676, Anne Swan left 10s. per annum to be given to twenty poor widows at Bakewell.

In 1700, Robert Scholler directed 40s. a year to be paid out of his estate for the benefit of the poor. This sum is usually laid out in coals, once in a few years, and given to the poor.

St. Andrew's Charity, or Town Stock, consists of land purchased, in 1713, with sums of money left by various donors, to the amount of £150. The treasurer also accounts for 13s. as the interest of £16 left by Thos. Bagshaw, John Gell, and Thos. Barker. The annual income of this charity is upwards of £23, which is distributed in apprentice fees, in sums of one guinea to poor people of the township, and a subscription of £2 2s. to the Sheffield infirmary.

An annual sum of £2 4s., the interest of £44, is distributed amongst the poor, arising from the gift of Wm. Naylor, Mrs. May, and Mrs. Bagshaw.

A sum of 20s. yearly is charged on land at Youlgreave, from the bequest of Catherine Broomehead, in 1754, 10s. of which is paid to the vicar for preaching a sermon on the 25th Oct., and 10s. is given to the poor.

In 1754, Ellen Websler directed 40s. per annum to be given to the poor of Bakewell, out of land called the Willsough Pingles.

The residue of rents are laid out in useful books for the charity school at Youlgreave.

The Holme Meal Charity is supposed to have originated upwards of a century and a half ago, from a voluntary weekly donation of oatmeal to the poor by the Archer family of Holme House. At the sale of the estates of the late John Archer, in 1802, five pecks and one-eighth of oatmeal weekly were charged upon land within Bakewell and Holme. It is now distribnted every three or four years to the poor of this township and Great Youlgreave.

In 1798, Matthew Strutt left £10, the interest to be given to poor widows.

The Rev. Francis Gisborne—(See Bradley)—left an annual sum of £5 10s., which is usually distributed in flannel or coarse cloth, in winter by the incumbent.

Over and Nether Haddon form a joint township, which contains 2,835A. 0R. 7P. of land, principally grazing,and in 1851 had 57 houses, and 235 inhabitants, of whom 113 were males and 122 females; rateable value £3,092 15s. Over Haddon is one of the most romantic villages in the county, situated on a lofty abrupt rocky eminence, 2 miles S.W. from Bakewell, overlooking the vale of the river Lathkill. A Sunday school was erected in 1833, in which divine service is occasionally performed. It is a good stone building. The scenery round here is beautiful, the houses here are built with stone, and generally covered with slate. This township has been noted for upwards of 100 years for its productive lead mines, viz. the Mandale, which was worked by Messrs. Wakefield & Co., for more than a century, and the Lathkill, by Messrs. Alsop, Taylor, and Co., for about 20 years, both of which have been standing for the last five years, owing to being overflowed with water. In 1854, the Farcliff Hill Lead mine was established by a Company of 1,000 shareholders, in 10s. shares. They found in great quantities ore, supposed to be gold ore, some tons of which were sent to London to be tested, it was found to contain a small portion of gold and silver, but not sufficient to pay for getting, but it is expected that lead will be found in great quantities, as several large lumps, weighing more than a stone each, have already been found. The soil is a good brown loam on limestone. Lady Palmerston is lady of the manor, which is freehold, and principal owner. The Duke of Rutland, Mr. John Finney, Mr. Edward Radford, and Mr. John Finney, are also owners. Feast, Sunday nearest to 12th November. Nether Haddon, a hamlet forming the eastern side of the township, being bounded on the east by the river Derwent, contains 1,474A. 3R. 2P. of freehold land, of the rateable value of £1,309 11s. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and sole owner. It contains only two houses, of which one is Haddon Hall, an ancient baronial residence, 1½ miles S. by E. from Bakewell. At Domesday survey, Haddon is stated to be a berewick in the manor of Bakewell, and probably it existed as a strong castle prior to the conquest. This relic of past ages is one of the finest specimens of olden times in existence, and strikingly illustrates the rude magnificence of feudal lords in bygone days. It was granted at an early period by one of the Peverels to a retainer named Avenell, on the tenure of knight's service, in whose family it continued till the time of Richard I., when their coheiresses married Vernon and Basset. The heiress of Vernon, in the reign of Henry III., married Gilbert le Francis, whose son, Richard, took the name of Vernon, and died at the age of 29, in 1296. This Richard was common ancestor of the Vernons of Haddon, Stokesay, Hodnet, Sudbury, &c. The Bassets continued to possess a moiety of the manor of Nether Haddon in the reign of Edward III., but in or before the reign of Henry VI., the whole became vested in the Vernons, who purchased Basset's moiety. Sir Richard Vernon of Haddon was Speaker of the parliament at Leicester in 1425; his son, of the same name, was the last person who held for life the high office of constable of England. Sir Henry Vernon, grandson of the latter, was governor to Prince Arthur, son of Henry VIII., who is said to have resided with him at Haddon. The Haddon branch of the Vernons became extinct in 1565, by the death of Sir George Vernon, who, by the magnificence of his retinue, and his great hospitality, acquired the name of "King of the Peak." Dorothy, the younger of his coheiresses, brought Haddon to Sir John Manners, second son of Thomas, the first Earl of Rutland, of that family, and immediate ancestor of his Grace the Duke of Rutland. Haddon continued to be the chief residence of Sir John Manners and his descendants till 1641, when the grandchild of Sir John succeeded to the Earldom of Rutland on the death of George Manners, the seventh earl of that name, without male issue, after which time Belvoir, the ancient seat of the Manners, was, alternately with Haddon, the residence of the noble family. In the time of the first Duke of Rutland, (so created by Queen Anne,) seven score servants were maintained at Haddon; but shortly after this period it was finally quitted for Belvoir, since which it has occasionally been the scene of mirth and revelry. A ball was given here by the inhabitants of Bakewell, on occasion of the peace of 1802, and one in 1836, on the Marquis of Granby attaining his majority, when the Duke gave a grand treat to all his tenantry in the neighbourhood. The ancient castellated mansion of Haddon Hall exhibits the architecture of various periods, having been built at various times by the families of Vernon and Manners. The general appearance of this ancient mansion, with its turrets surrounded by woody scenery, is very picturesque. The old tower, with narrow loop-holes and gloomy rooms, is the only part that retains the strong character of the age of military despotism which succeeded the departure of the Romans. This part of the building is said to be older than the conquest; but this forms only a small part of the modern Haddon. The first great quadrangle, and the three sides of the second, are built in the style of our ancient halls—a combination of Gothic and Saxon, without those powerful and gloomy defences. The gallery in the south front, about 110 feet long, and only 17 in width, was built in the reign of Elizabeth. The great hall was the ancient dining-room. Most of the other apartments, which are numerous, are only small. About the year 1760, the house was entirely stripped of its furniture, which was removed to Belvoir castle. The chapel at the south-west angle, is entered through a porch with a pointed archway. In this stands the basin which held the holy water. It has a nave, with two side aisles; it is very ancient, but of small dimensions. Two high pews of oak, which have been richly gilt, occupy a good portion of the chapel on each side. Over the communion table is a Gothic window, with a painting of the crucifixion on one of the panes, and others exhibiting figures of saints and angels, and the date of 1427. It is said the finest specimens of the stained glass were stolen some years ago, and conveyed to the Continent. As an object of antiquarian research, Haddon Hall will have its attractions so long as it exists, and the beauty of the scenery ever excite the admiration of the traveller. Over Haddon was the birth-place and residence of Martha Taylor, a celebrated fasting damsel, who, it is said, began to abstain from food on the 22nd of December, 1667, being in her eighteenth year, said to have been occasioned by a blow received some years before; but her illness is said not to have commenced till the end of August preceding. It is said she once, after she left off eating, swallowed part of a fig, which had nearly proved fatal to her. She underwent two watches, having been attended by from forty to sixty women, who watched strictly night and day. One of these watches was appointed by the neighbouring townships, the other by the Earl of Devonshire. Four different pamphlets were published, one by Joseph Reynolds, and addressed to the Royal Society; the last extant is dated March 30, 1669. By an entry in the parish register, it appears she was buried June 12, 1684, having survived the publication of the last pamphlet fifteen years. There is no account of the sequel whether she was detected as an impostor, or whether she was a real sufferer, and having recovered, returned to her usual habits. It is probable some of these pamphlets might have fallen into the hands of the notorious impostor, Ann Moore, and suggested the leading circumstances of her impositions. She resided at Tutbury, but, it is said, was a native of Derbyshire. She pretended to have lived, without eating or drinking, from 1807 till 1813. She was subjected to a watch for sixteen days and nights in 1811, but was not detected, and again one which commenced April 21st, 1813, and continued till the 30th, when this extraordinary case was discovered to be a cheat. She died a few months afterwards, aged 53 years.

Hartle or Harthill, a small township, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.S.E. from Bakewell, contains 10 houses, scattered upon the hill sides; 78 inhabitants, of whom 44 were males, and 34 females; and 811A. 2R. 17P. of fertile land, mostly occupied as dairy farms; rateable value, £871 6s. 0d. The Duke of Rutland and William Pole Thornhill, Esq., M.P., are the owners; the former is lord of the manor. Here are some lead mines, which have not been worked to much extent for some time. This manor at an early period belonged to the family of de Herthill, whose heiress brought it with other estates to the Cockaines, in the reign of Edward III. Edward Cockaine, Esq., in the year 1599, sold this manor to John Manners, Esq., from whom it descended to the Duke of Rutland. The Hall, an ancient stone building now a farm house, in the occupation of Mr. Jno. Potter, is situated on the brow of a lofty eminence, known as Priest Hill; about 3 miles S. from Bakewell, adjoining which are the remains of a chapel, in which a chantry was founded in the year 1259, by Richard de Herthill. It is now used as a barn, at the east end are portions of the niche in which the tutelar saint was placed, and vestiges of the original doors and windows are still to be seen. Near the south west side of Harthill Moor, is an elevated ridge, which rises into three craggy eminences, respectively named Carcliff Rocks, Graned Tor, or Robin Hood's Stride, and Durwood Tor. There are also in the immediate neighbourhood other remarkable stones, or isolated masses of rock, denominated respectively the Cat's Stone, the Gorse Stone, and the Heart Stone, which latter measures eighty three feet in circumference.

Hassop, a small well built village and township, at the foot of a lofty hill, 3 miles N. from Bakewell, contains 1338A. 0R. 4P. of good land, principally on limestone, with a portion of grit and clay, and in 1851 had 19 houses and 95 inhabitants, of whom 45 were males, and 50 females; rateable value £1823 15s. Colonel Charles Leslie and the Duke of Devonshire are the principal owners, the former is lord of the manor. The large tithes was sold to the late Earl Newburgh, and the small are paid by annual agreement. Hassop Hall, is the seat and property of Col. Charles Leslie. It is a handsome mansion, situated on a fine acclivity which rises to a considerable elevation to the west. The hall is closely embowered with luxuriant foilage, surrounded with tasteful pleasure grounds and beautiful terraces, adorned with choice flowers and valuable shrubs. The conservatories and vineries arranged on terraces, and from their elevated position, have a pleasing effect. The present owner has recently built two handsome stone lodges, one on the Bakewell road and the other at the east end of the village; adjoining the latter is a handsome stone tower, he has also greatly improved and beautified the hall. Near the entrance to the hall about 1816, a handsome Catholic chapel was erected by the late Earl of Newburgh, and other members of that family; it is a substantial stone building, the roof of which extends about three feet from the walls. The interior fittings are of the most chaste and costly description; the altar and tables are composed of various marbles, elaborately worked with foilage and scrolls brought from Naples, and the altar piece is adorned with an exquisite painting of the Crucifixion, by Lewis Carracci. It contains a good organ, erected by Lincoln, of London. Hassop Hall was garrisoned for the King, by Col. Eyre, in the month of December, 1643. There is a portrait in the hall of this gallant royalist, who distinguished himself at the siege of Newark; besides others of the Eyre family, and that of Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham. The manor of Hassop was formerly in the Foljambes. The heiress of Sir Godfrey Foljambe brought it, in the fourteenth century, to Sir Robert Plumpton, of Yorkshire. Sir Robert, his grandson, sold Hassop, in 1498, to Catharine, widow of Stephen Eyre, of this place, a younger son of Eyre, of Padley. Francis Eyre, Esq., the immediate descendant of Stephen, on the death of the Earl of Newburgh, in 1814, assumed that title. The late Earl of Newburgh died October 15th, 1852, at which time the estate came into the possession of his sister Dorothy, (Lady Leslie,) who willed it to her husband; she died November 25th, 1853. This township is noted for its lead mines, of which there are several, namely, The Brightside, Backdale, Harrybuca, Waterhole, and Whitecoe mines all of which are at present worked. The Feast is held on the Sunday nearest to All Saints' day.

Birchill is a large farm, the property of the Duke of Devonshire, and in the occupation of Messrs. Lawrence and George Furniss. This farm during the year 1856, was placed in competition with six other large and highly cultivated farms in North Derbyshire, for a silver cup, value £10, given by Sir Joseph Paxton, M.P., president of the "Bakewell Farmers' Club," for the best cultivated farm in the district, was awarded to the occupiers of Birchill Farm, as will appear from the following inscription on it. "This cup was presented by Sir Joseph Paxton, president of the Bakewell Farmers' Club for 1856, to Messrs. Furniss, Birchill's Farm, for having the best managed large farm in the district." This being the most spirited competition, which ever took place in North Derbyshire, we have thought it worthy of notice.

Charities.—In 1624, Rowland Eyre, directed a rent charge of 10s. per annum to be paid to the poor, out of his lands at Taddington and Great Longstone. This sum is now paid by Colonel Leslie, who also pays 10s. annually to the poor of Rowland, left by the same donor.

Rowsley (Great) township and village, situated at the confluence of the river Wye with the Derwent, and on the road from Bakewell to Derby, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles E.S.E. from Bakewell, and 13 miles W.S.W. from Chesterfield, contains 621A. 0R. 36P. of fertile land, mostly in grass, 50 houses, and 265 inhabitants, of whom 130 were males, and 135 females; rateable value £1,074 2s. The Duke of Rutland is sole owner and lord of the manor, which is free of great tithe, and those of lamb and wool are paid by annual agreement. An ancient bridge of five arches crosses the Derwent, and a handsome modern stone bridge of two arches crosses the Wye. The Church, dedicated to St. Catherine, was erected in 1854, at a cost of £850, raised by subscriptions, towards which the Duke of Rutland contributed liberally, and also gave the site, and £70 was contributed by the Incorporated Society for building churches, upon condition that 131 seats should be free and unappropriated for ever. The church is situated on a slight elevation, about the centre of the village, and is a handsome stone edifice in the Norman style of architecture, with turret and one bell. The The interior is neatly fitted up with open pews, and will seat 150 persons. In the chancel the floor of which is laid with Minto's encaustic tiles, is a handsome memorial window filled with stained glass, to the memory of Catherine Louisa Georgiana, wife of Lord John Manners, who died April 7th, 1854, aged 23 years. The subjects represented are the Resurrection of our Saviour, and the raising of the widow's son. The Rev. John Jones, B.A., is the incumbent. In the village is a good Inn. In 1840, a handsome substantial school was erected by the Duke of Rutland, who provides a house for the teacher, and with the small payments of the children, assures to the teacher £30 per annum. The township also is entitled to partake of the benefit of Lady Manners' school at Bakewell.

Charities.—In 1700, Robert Scholler left 20s. per annum to be distributed in small sums to the poor of this township, and 10s. per annum to the poor of Pillhough.

The interest of £10 is distributed to five widows or fatherless children of this township from the bequest of Rachael Ashbourne, in 1752.

An annual sum of 2s. 6d. is paid to the poor, by the agent of the Duke of Rutland.

ALPORT, a rural village, partly situated in the township of Rowsley, in Bakewell parish, from which it is 3 miles W.S.W., and partly in the township and parish of Youlgreave, from which it is half a mile N.E.; it is situated in a valley near the confluence of the river Bradford with the Lathkill. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor. This place was formerly noted for the extensive mining establishment of the Alport Mining Company, of which the estimated value ten years ago was not less than £100,000. The ore was very rich, yielding about 75 per cent., and the average getting about 100 tons per month. The veins were very numerous, and the water was drained by means of Hydraulic engines which forced it into the Hill Carr sough, which extends to the Derwent, a distance of upwards of 3 miles. The principal one, the Guy engine, was considered as the most perfect in its construction and arrangement, for preventing concussion and economising water. George Stephenson, Esq., recommended to the Tarlargoch Company, in Wales, an engine, to be made precisely on the same principle. A splendid model of this engine may be seen at the Museum of Economic Geology, London, which was recommended to be made by John Taylor, Esq., F.R.S. This engine had a cylinder 50 inches diameter, single acting; effective pressure per square inch on the piston, about 60 pounds; length of stroke in the pump, 10 feet; plunge pole in the pit, 42 inches diameter, discharging at the pump head about 3,600 gallons per minute, having a power of 376 horses. When the immense body of water to be discharged is considered, and the entire freedom from concussion known, it must become obvious to all scientific persons, that great praise is due to the talent, ingenuity, and perseverance of Mr. John Darlington, the engineer, who, after having overcome the difficulties, made it known to the world, unpatented, that it may be made available wherever needed. Another engine, of 174 horses power, erected by Mr. Trevithic about 50 years ago, which did much work, has a 25 inch cylinder, double acting; the pressure per square inch on the piston, 52½ pounds, stroke 10 feet, drawing a box 29 inches diameter 25 fathoms deep, having from five to six strokes per minute. Another, the Blythe engine, of 127 horses power, erected about eighteen years ago by Mr. Fairbairn of Manchester, has a 36 inches cylinder, seven feet, and nine feet in the pump, drawing a box 38 inches diameter eight fathoms deep, giving five strokes per minute. A new one has been put up, with two 24 inch cylinders, single acting. The power of these engines, equalled 677 horses. The Company after working the veins for some years, found they were not sufficiently remunerative to repay the working expenses, they therefore came to the determination in 1852, of disposing of the whole of the plant and machinery, since which the works have been carried on on a small scale; several parties are gaining a comfortable living by breaking ore in the old workings, at and above the level of the Hill Carr sough, on payment of a small acknowledgement to the proprietors of the mines. A level has also been driven into a new piece of ground on the Prospect vein, where some good bunches of lead ore have been obtained; the vein is still productive, a few good dividends having been made, and it is to be hoped that the proprietors will meet with a return commensurate with their former outlay. Here are also Lead Smelting works belonging to Messrs. T. R. Barker and Rose, where the ore obtained from the various mines in this locality are smelted into pigs for the market.

ASHFORD, a township, chapelry and picturesque village, situated in a valley on the east bank of the river Wye, which is here crossed by three stone bridges, and which separates it from Bakewell; from whence s distant $1\frac{3}{4}$ miles N.W. It is surrounded by lofty hills, which are noted for their superior quarries of marble. The houses are built of stone, and roofed with slate. It contains 2505A. 2R. 12P. of land (including roads, &c.), mostly a rich pasturage, occupied for feeding small cattle, this district being noted for its quickness in feeding and its rich herbage for the dairy, and in 1851 had 173 houses, and 777 inhabitants, of whom 394 were males and 383 females; rateable value £4128 8s. 0d. The township of BRUSHFIELD is annexed to the above chapelry. The principal owners are, the Duke of Devonshire, Mr. Thos. Brushfield, Executors of the late George Morewood, Mr. John Green, and Mr. Wm. Fowler; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small and ancient structure, with nave, chancel, centre and north aisles, a low square tower and three bells. It contains no monuments of particular interest, but over the south door of the church is an heraldic representation, consisting of a wild boar, and another animal very similar to a wolf, couchant under a tree; underneath is the following inscription: "The boar out of the woods doth waste it, and the wild beast of the field doth devour it." It is supposed to have belonged originally to the Manor house, which formerly stood near the church. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £2 1s., now £102, has been augmented with £200 private benefactions, £800 Queen Anne's bounty, and £200 Parliamentary grant. The vicar of Bakewell is patron, and the Rev. James Burrow, MA., incumbent, who resides at the Parsonage house, a handsome Elizabethan residence, erected in 1854, on a good elevation overlooking the village, a little north of the church, at a cost of £1400, exclusive of the site, which was given by the Duke of Devonshire. Wm. Bagshaw, the Apostle of the Peak, the Nonconformist divine, established a Meeting-house at this place, in 1700, which is still in existence; it was thoroughly repaired in 1841. Ashford Hall, a handsome mansion, situated on a gentle elevation a little east of the village, the grounds from which slope to a beautiful lake, which fills up nearly the whole of this part of the dale, is the property of the Duke of Devonshire and seat of the Honourable G. H. Cavendish, M.P. for North Derbyshire. Church Dale, a handsome modern structure, three-quarters of a mile N.E. from the village, is the residence of Offley Shore, Esq. The Rookery, an ancient mansion overgrown with ivy, having a fine lawn in front, and closely adjoining the Buxton road, is the residence of Edmund Haworth, Esq. The house is sheltered from the north by lofty hills, while towards the east and west, noble timber trees skirt the grounds, which are laid out with great taste. Here and there a lofty beach or spreading ash intercepts the view of the swiftly passing waters of the Wye, which is crossed by an ivy clad bridge, that gives an additional charm to the whole scene. A rising woody eminence in front closes the verdant prospect, which, though not extensive, is peculiarly pleasing and enchanting. Thornbridge, a handsome mansion, on a commanding eminence, $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles N. from Ashford, and 3 miles N.W. from Bakewell, in a most delightful situation, is the residence of Wm. Barlow, Esq. Edge Stone Head, better known as the "Bull's Head," is a small inn, two miles N.W. from Ashford, at the head of Monsal Dale. A fine view of this celebrated dale, hemmed in on every side by lofty mountains, is obtained from this eminence. Through this secluded and lovely valley, the brilliant Wye speeds its rapid way amongst a succession of beautiful meadows of the fresh verdure, every where studded with cottages and groups of trees. The Baptists have a chapel in Ashford Lane, in which no service is at present performed. The congregation was first established in 1700. A neat Wesleyan chapel was built in 1830. The Feast is held on Trinity Sunday. The Devonshire Arms, kept by Mrs. Frost, is much frequented by fishing parties; who are drawn here by the excellent fishing in the river Wye. The manor, Asseford, at the Domesday survey, was parcel of the ancient demesne of the crown, and granted by King John, in the first year of his reign, to Wenunwyn, Lord of Powisland, whose son, Griffin, had a grant of free warren in this manor, in the year 1250. King Edward II. granted it, in 1319, to his brother, Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent, who resided in a mansion near the church, N.N.E., of which the foundations are still remaining. This manor having descended to the posterity of Joan, his daughter, and eventually heiress, by her second husband, Sir Thos. Holland, passed, on the death of Edmund Holland, Earl of Kent, in 1408, to Elizabeth, his sister and co-heiress, married to John Lord Neville. Henry Neville, Earl of Westmoreland, sold it in 1549 or 1550, to Sir William Cavendish, ancestor of its present noble possessor. This place has long been celebrated for the excellency and variety of its marbles, with which the neighbouring hills abound, particularly the Black Marble, which is worked into chimney pieces, monuments, tombs, columns, tables, slabs, washstands, baths, mortars, &c., of great variety and beauty. Powerful and efficient machinery for sawing and polishing have been erected. The first mills in England for that purpose were erected here by Mr. Henry Watson, in 1748. The immediate neighbourhood abounds perhaps more than any other with marbles of every variety of tint and hue, and from the opinions of many scientific persons, it appears they are considered quite equal, and in some varieties even superior to the most celebrated from foreign countries. One of the finest specimens was purchased by government, and deposited in the Museum of Economic Geology, London. Another was presented to the same Museum. They are rare and exceedingly fine productions. In the geological gallery of the British museum is an extensive and valuable collection of British marbles, regularly arranged and classified, some of which, from their close resemblance to the foreign, known as Poryhyry, Jasper, Breccia, Gialla Antico, &c., have the prefix Anglo attached, as Anglo-Poryhyry, &c. One, a rich glowing yellow with deep shadowy veins, branching transversely, is now known to some of our artists as the Arborescent marble; one of a fine rich colour, much resembles Sicilian marble; another, the Dove coral-eyed. The Anglo-Rosso-Antico, a very beautiful deep red, has been much worked for the Duke of Devonshire, particularly in inlaying a splendid table which is now at Chatsworth house. Messrs. Twigg & Co.'s Marble works are situated at the west end of Ashford, on the Buxton road, who, having introduced upon the site of the original works more powerful and efficient machinery, are enabled to compete with any other house in their line; while, for purity of design and exquisite finish, their great share of public patronage is the best proof. Their Show rooms contain many articles of taste and beauty, an inspection of which will amply repay the visitor. Marble turning is carried on to a considerable extent. The celebrated black marble in this neighhourhood is procured from extensive excavated chambers or caverns underground, similar to coal mines, and extending in some places to a considerable distance, pillars being left at irregular distances to support the roof, from which water continually oozes, so that miles may be traversed in the bowels of the earth. The old bed is now only occasionally worked, one of a closer texture and deeper black having been discovered. On the opposite bank of the river, at the distance of about one mile higher, is the noted quarry from whence the celebrated rose-wood marble is obtained. Rottenstone of an excellent quality, much used in polishing metals, horn, &c., is obtained in large quantities, from Great Finn, a huge mountain about $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.W. from Ashford, on the top of which are visible the remains of a Roman station, and one or two barrows, one of which was opened near Edgestone head, in 1832, when various skeletons, rude urns, arrow and spear heads of flint, some memorials of ancient customs, and a piece of black dressed marble, were found. An Horticultural society was established here in 1850, under the presidency of H. G. Duke of Devonshire, and holds its annual meeting in August; Mr. C. Spencer, secretary. Here is an endowed school, (See charities) with a good house and garden for the master, who has also a salary of £28 5s. 4d. per annum for which 16 boys are taught free; the average attendance is 5 ; Mr. Charles Spencer, master. The girls' school is supported by Lady Louisa Cavendish; the average attendance is about 35; Mrs. Spencer, mistress. One great Barmote court is held annually in April, at the Devonshire Arms Inn, for the liberty of Ashford, Tideswell, Peak Forest, and Hartington, of which H. G. the Duke of Devonshire is lord; Joseph Hall, Esq., of Castleton, steward; and James Longsdon, Esq., of Little Longstone, bar master.

CHARITIES.—In 1631, William Harris left £50 for the erection of a free school, and gave a piece of land (one acre and a half) called Thornley croft, for the support of the schoolmaster. He also bequeathed £13 6s. 8d. out of his estate at Alfreton, £6 13s. 4d. thereof to be paid to a minister for preaching twenty sermons in the chapel of Ashford or in the chapel of Sheldon, and the residue to be appropriated to the benefit of the free school.

William Wright, in 1656, gave 10s. yearly out of his estate at Wardlow; and Richard Johnson left a rent charge out a croft at Ilam. These two sums are distributed amongst the poor at Christmas.

Thomas Roose, in 1761, left the interest of £180, per annum 20s. thereof to be paid to the curate of Ashford, 40s. to the minister of the Presbyterian chapel, 20s. to the master of the free school, and £2 8s. to be laid out in bread and distributed amongst the poorest inhabitants.

In 1756, William Bagshaw bequeathed the interest of 20 guineas to the dissenting minister at Ashford, who receives 20s. annually as the interest thereof.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the incumbent, and laid out in course woollen or flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

BRUSHFIELD, a township and small village in the chapelry of Ashford, on the Bakewell and Buxton road, 4½ miles N.W. b. W. from Bakewell, contains 651A. 2R. 21P. of land on limestone, abounding with minerals, 10 houses and 46 inhabitants, of whom 24 were males and 22 females; rateable value £381 14s. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and owner of 600 acres, The manor, Brithrithfield, was, at an early period, in moieties, one of which was given by Robert, son of Waltheof, to the abbey of Rufford; the other was successively in the familes of Monjoye and Blount. The moiety which had belonged to Rufford abbey, was granted by Henry VIII. to George Earl of Shrewsbury. In 1628 it was conveyed by the co-heiresses of Gilbert Earl of Shrewsbury, to Sir William Armine and his lady. In 1658 Lady Armine sold it to the Bradshaws, of whom it was purchased in 1662 by the Earl of Devonshire. About 40 years ago, on turning up some land on Mr. Bloore's farm, the skeleton of a man was discovered, who from appearances had been a soldier, having a steel helmet on his head and a sword by his side.

BASLOW, a township, chapelry, and large pleasant village on the east bank of the Derwent, over which there is an ancient stone bridge of three arches. It is 4 miles N.E. from Bakewell, 5 miles N.N.E. from Haddon Hall, 1 mile (by footroad) from Chatsworth, 10 miles W. from Chesterfield, and 12 miles S.W. from Sheffield, contains 5452A. 2R. 18P. of land, and in 1851 had 174 houses, and 834 inhabitants, of whom 434 were males, and 400 females; rateable value £3,059 6s. The Dukes of Rutland and Devonshire are the principal owners, and the former is lord of the manor, besides whom are a few small owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Anne, is an ancient structure, in the later English style, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and tower, with a low spire at the western end of the north aisle, and six bells. In 1853 it was completely restored, new seated, and the chancel rebuilt at a cost of about £1200, raised by voluntary contributions. The seats are all free and unappropriated. The living is a perpetual curacy, rated at £27 6s. 8d., now £119, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, augmented with £800 Queen Anne's bounty, and £800 parliamentary grant. The patronage which formerly belonged to the vicar of Bakewell, was, in 1811, vested in the Duke of Devonshire and his heirs. Rev. Wm. Rogers Cope, incumbent. The township is free of large tithe, and that of lamb and wool is paid by agreement. The chapelry includes the hamlet of Bubnell, also the townships of Calver, Curbar, Froggatt, and Rowland, which form the north-east division of Bakewell parish. On the north-east and west of Baslow the country rises rapidly into lofty hills, on the summits of which are widely extended moors, (about 2,450 acres,) where the heath, gorse, fern, &c., give shelter to and preserve innumerable grouse and rabbits, and to the botanist an endless change of beauties are presented, while extended and almost boundless prospects are presented to the eye. In some places, scattered groups of rock, cause an involuntary shudder, for fear some overhanging crag may crush the passenger to death. The tourist and visitor will find in the village and neighbourhood excellent accommodation, and being only 1 mile by the foot road from Chatsworth house, "the Palace of the Peak," which the Duke kindly permits to be inspected, proves a main source of attraction to all parties, while Haddon Hall, 5 miles S.S.W. adds greatly to the interest of this delightful locality. The Peacock Inn, on the east side the road, 12 miles S.W. from Sheffield, kept by Mrs. Broomhead, has excellent suites of rooms commanding fine views of the house and park, and an excellent bowling green, from whence there is a direct foot road to the house. This Inn has an air of quiet retirement, and the proprietoress has the privilege of granting tickets for fishing in the Derwent. Visitors to this excellent house of entertainment, will find every thing neat, clean, and comfortable, good fare, and an attentive and obliging hostess. The Wheat Sheaf Inn, opposite the twelfth mile stone from Sheffield, and eight from Chesterfield, being in close approximation to the Park, will be found a convenient resting place for visitors and tourists; the proprietor, Mr. Ninian Ingleby, having also the privilege of granting tickets for fishing in the Derwent, which, combined with excellent fare and moderate charges, will always make it a favourite house of resort. The Devonshire Arms, kept by Mr. John White, in that part of the village called Nether Town, has good accommodation, and also a right of fishing. At any of these establishments the visitor will find every attention and comfort. Flys and other conveyances are kept for the accommodation of tourists who may wish to inspect the more distant objects of this interesting locality. Coaches from Sheffield, Manchester, Buxton, and Bakewell, pass or call at these houses constantly. The manor of Baslow was given by Henry de Curzon, before the year 1330, to Richard Vernon, from whom it has descended to its present owner. The township was enclosed under an act passed 1824. The land is chiefly gritstone, principally used for grazing purposes; the declivities and vallies are considered excellent pasture land. Formerly here was a cupola at Barbrook, but it has long been in ruins. The Wesleyans and Wesleyan Reformers have each chapels here. A substantial schoolroom for boys and girls, built of stone, was erected by the Duke of Rutland, in 1839, which is partly supported by subscription; the two noble Dukes of Devonshire and Rutland and the minister, liberally subscribe a sum of £15 each per annum. The average attendance is about 60. Mr. Richard Geeson, builder, is erecting a large and convenient house on an elevated site from whence some beautiful views may be obtained, and which it is his intention of converting into an hotel or lodging house, for the accommodation of the numerous visitors to this interesting locality. Feast, first Sunday in August.

Bubnell, a hamlet on the west side the Derwent, and small scattered village, forms a joint township with Baslow, from which it is separated by the river, contains 21 houses, and 118 inhabitants, of whom 54 were males, and 64 females; the acreage and value being included with Baslow, of which manor it forms a part. Bubnell Hall, formerly a seat of the Bassetts of Blore, and afterwards, by marriage, of Copwood, forms a good specimen of the architecture of the early part of the 17th century, and has a good view of the Derwent.

Brambley is a small hamlet forming the north extremity of Bubnell, and consists only of one farm, 1 mile N.W. from Baslow, both forming a rich grazing district on gritstone, the Dukes of Rutland and Devonshire being the principal owners.

Charities.—Henry Chapman, by will, left the Pingle close with other lands on trust, out of the rents to pay yearly to the schoolmaster of Stanton Ford, in Baslow, 20s.; to the minister of Baslow, who should preach a sermon on the 5th of November, annually, 10s.; to the poorest people within Baslow and Bubnell, 19s. yearly; and to the poorest people in Calver, Curbar, and Froggatt, 10s. yearly; to be paid on the 5th November. In 1820 these lands were surrendered at a court holden at Hartington, to Robert Barker and five others, and consists of the Pingle acre, 1a. 1r., and four allotments awarded by the commissioners under an act of 38 George III., for inclosing lands in Hartington, amounting to 3a. 14p. The whole are let for £4 per annum, of which the master of Ford school receives two fifths, £1 12s., the others, as above, 16s. each. The anniversary sermon is not preached.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The sum of £5 10s. is received by the incumbent annually, for this chapelry, and laid out in coarse woollen cloth or flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Robert Stafford, it is stated in the parliamentary returns of 1786, gave a sum of £10 to the poor of Baslow; and it is said he gave other sums for other purposes, amounting to £60. In consideration of that sum, the Rev. Edward Markland conveyed to Robert Barker and five others, the Townend Close, lying in Wheston, in the parish of Tideswell, on trust, to pay one-third part of the rent to the use of the minister of Baslow chapel, one-third part to the overseer of Baslow for the use of the poor in the township, and the remaining third part to the master of Ford school. The Townend Close, 1½ acres, with an allotment of 1A. 3R. 14P., are now let for £4 10s. per annum, paid half-yearly, and divided as above.

George White, of Bubnell, it is stated on a tablet in Baslow church, gave £3 per annum to be equally divided between the minister, schoolmaster, and poor of Baslow; and in the returns of 1786, George White's gift to the poor is stated as being land vested in the overseers, producing £2 2s. per annum, which it appears probable was from lands in Pilsley, called the Underlow Close, the Stump Cross Close, and one moiety of Handley Bank, containing in the whole, 6A. 3R. 22P., and were, by indentures dated 21st and 22nd May, 1789, conveyed to the township, now let for £18 per annum, which is received by the overseer who pays one-third part to the minister, one-third to the master of Ford school, and the remaining third to the poor of Baslow.

Minister, School, and Poor.—A security is held on the turnpike road from Nottingham to Newhaven for £25, dated 25th December, 1762, for the above purposes. It is not known from whence the money arose.. The interest, at five per cent. being 25s., is received by the overseers of the poor, of which one moiety had, for many years previous to 1826, been paid to the minister, and the remainder distributed amongst the poor; but in future, we are assured, it will be divided in three parts as above.

Margaret White, it is stated on a tablet in the church, left £20, the interest to be divided between the minister and the poor of Baslow and Bubnell. An annual sum of 10s. is now paid by the overseer of the poor out of the poor rates, and distributed by him to the poor. It is supposed to be paid on account of this charity, and that the principal sum was, at some former period, united with the funds of the township.

CALVER is a township and considerable but scattered village, on the bank of the river Derwent, and in the chapelry of Baslow 1½ miles N.W. from Baslow, and 4½ miles N.N.E. from Bakewell, from which places the road crosses the river by a modern stone bridge of three arches to Stoney-Middleton, contains 710A. 1R. 15P. of land, and in 1851 had 130 houses and 621 inhabitants, of whom 287 were males and 334 females; rateable value £1,359 8s. Col. Leslie is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and principal owner. The land is chiefly grass, and free of great tithes; the small tithes are agreed for annually. The township is noted for its lime, of which a considerable quantity finds its way to the east as far as Chesterfield, also north-east to Sheffield. Here are two kilns, worked by Messrs. Gregory, Cocker, and Co. Here is also an extensive cotton mill on the Derwent, worked by water power, consisting of two wheels of 22 feet diameter, of the united power of 140 horses, which are considered the best constructed in the county, and the mill the most complete, being a modern erection the property of Messrs. Robert Phillips Greg, and Phillip Hey Fletcher, worked under the firm of the Calver Mill Company. Gas Works were erected near the mills, in 1846. The mills, with several adjoining houses, are called Calver Bridge, where there is a school principally supported by the Calver Mill Co., and was licensed for divine service in 1850, in which the incumbent of Baslow does duty every Sunday afternoon. Calver Sough, a district at the cross of the Chesterfield and Chapel-en-le-Frith, and Sheffield and Bakewell roads, where is an inn, the Eyre's Arms. The manor of Calver was given by Henry VIII. to Rowland Shakerley, and having passed to the Tracys, was conveyed to the Stratfords, and purchased in the reign o Queen Elizabeth by the Eyres of Hassop. Feast, first Sunday in August.

CHARITIES.—Rowland Eyre, amongst other charitable donations, as stated in an inscription in Great Longstone chapel, dated 1624, gave to the poor of Calver 20s. yearly, to be paid by Thomas Eyre, his son and heir.

The sum of 20s. is annually received from the steward of Col. Leslie, by the overseer, who distributes it with 8s., the portion of Chapman's charity, received from the overseer of Baslow, and distributed amongst poor widows and others.

CURBAR, is a small scattered romantic village and township, situated in a hollow on the side of a lofty ridge of hills, of which the tops seem to overhang a continuous line of gritstone rocks, 5 miles N.N.E. from Bakewell, and 1½ miles N. from Baslow, contains 1,095A. 3R. 35P. of land, and in 1851 had 75 houses, and 371 inhabitants, of whom 168 were males and 203 females; rateable value £685 9s. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and owner of all the township excepting two small freeholds. It is free of large tithe, and the small is paid by annual agreement. The land is principally pasture, with a considerable portion of moorland, in some parts clay. At Stanton Ford, half-a-mile S. from the village, so named from a ford over the Derwent, with stepping stones placed across, is a good school, and a house for the master, and endowed with about £15 per annum, for which ten children are educated. The village is noted for several fine springs of good water. Feast, first Sunday in August.

CHARITY.—William Elliott, by will, 1803, directed his trustees to pay and apply on St. Thomas's day in every year for ever, amongst the poor inhabitants of Curbar, the interest that should arise from his share or security of £100 in the turnpike road leading from Sheffield to Grindleford Bridge. The overseer now receives the interest, £5 per annum, which he distributes to the poorest persons, in sums varying from 2s. to 10s.

FROGGATT is another small scattered romantic village and township in the chapelry of Baslow, 6 miles N.N.E. from Bakewell, and 3 miles N. from Baslow, situated on a gentle acclivity above the east bank of the Derwent, contains 420 acres of freehold land—the tithes paid by agreement, and in 1851 had 26 houses, and 135 inhabitants, of whom 66 were males and 69 females; rateable value £330. The Duke of Rutland and the trustees of Barlborough Hospital are the principal owners; the former is lord of the manor. The soil is mostly on gritstone, with some clay. Below the village, the Derwent is crossed by an ancient stone bridge of two arches, of which one is pointed. There is also another bridge of two arches over the Derwent, within the liberty. Froggat Edge, an abrupt ridge of lofty rocks on the east, from which several small rivulets constantly run; in one part a lofty cascade is formed. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small stone chapel, erected 1834. Feast, first Sunday in August.

ROWLAND, a small township and village in the chapelry of Baslow, 3½ miles N. from Bakewell, contains 294A. 1R. 0P. of land, on limestone, and principally in grass, and in 1851 had 15 houses, and 80 inhabitants, of whom 45 were males and 35 females; rateable value £475. Col. Leslie is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and sole owner, and has the great tithes; those for lambs and wool are paid by annual agreement. The village stands on an elevation, but sheltered on the north by greater heights. Here is a school, free for 12 children, to which Col. Leslie pays £5 per annum, in accordance with the will of the late Earl of Newburgh, his father. Feast, nearest Sunday to All Saints.

Beeley, a township, chapelry, and picturesque village, pleasantly situated on the east bank of the river Derwent, and on the sides of two lofty eminences 4½ miles E.S.E. from Bakewell, and 6 miles N.W. from Matlock, contains 2944A. 3R. 32P. of land, including 1538A. 0R. 8P. of common, and 211A. 2R. 21P. of woods and plantations, and in 1851, had 69 houses, and 372 inhabitants, of whom 199 were males, and 173 females: rateable value, £1162 13s. 3d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner, but Robert Arkwright, Esq., has also an estate here. By an Act for inclosing Beeley, passed 1811, land was awarded the Duke of Devonshire, as impropriator for the corn tithes, and for tithes of wool and lamb, to the dean and chapter of Lichfield. The Church, dedicated to St. Anne, at the south western extremity of the village, on a gentle eminence, is an ancient structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and low tower with three bells. In the chancel are monuments to the Greaves and Savile families, formerly lords of this manor. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £10 18s., now £98, has been augmented with £400 benefactions, and £1,200 Queen Anne's bounty. Duke of Devonshire is patron, and Rev. George S.

Outram, B.A., incumbent, who resides at the Parsonage house, a handsome stone Gothic building, erected by H. G., the Duke of Devonshire, in 1856, on the south side of the church, at a cost of about £1700. In the chancel is an old register dating as far back as 1538, by which it appears the church was built in 1375, and consecrated in 1378, and that in 1661 the stipend paid to the then minister was £11 19s. 0d. In the churchyard are two yew trees, one of which is supposed to be above 1000 years old, and the other was planted in 1737. In the centre of the village, H. G. the Duke of Devonshire, in 1841, erected a school, which he supports, except a small weekly payment of 1½d. from the children, for whom books and all school necessaries are found—about 80 attend. Mr. Emanuel Turner, master.

Beeley, Begligh, or Beglie at the Domesday survey, was in the crown, Warner-de-Beelegh, and afterwards his son Serls, held this manor about the reign of Richard I.; and after passing to the Cheyneys, of Northampton, it came into possession of Lord Vaux of Harrowden, whose youngest son, Nicholas, held it in right of his mother, and in 1560, sold it to the family of Greaves, who had been seated at the Greaves, in this chapelry from the time of Henry III. About the middle of the 17th century, the latter family sold it to the Saviles, who resided at Hill Top, formerly the Greaves'. It was afterwards in twelve shares in the families of Norman, Brown, and Wright. In 1747, William, the third Duke of Devonshire, purchased the whole. The Greaves, now a farm house, still contains many vestiges of its antiquity, several of the rooms being wainscotted throughout, and in one of which over the fire-place are the arms of the Greaves'. It is now the residence of Mr. John Lees, in the occupation of whose family it has been for seven or eight generations. Beeley Hill Top, ¾ of a mile N.E. is a bold summit above the village, containing two farms. Fallinge, a district one mile S.E. of two farms. Harwood Grange, a district, three miles E. consists of two farms, which belong to Robt. Arkwright, Esq. This Grange was given to Beauchief Abbey, in the latter part of the 12th century, by Warren de Beelegh. King Henry VIII. granted it to Francis Leake, Esq. The Methodists have a small chapel, erected in 1807. Feast, first Sunday in July.

Charities.—Robert Barker, in the county of Middlesex, carpenter, by will, 1730, gave £100 to purchase land in or near Beeley, one-half of the profits thereof to be for the curate there, the other half to be given to the four poorest housekeepers in Beeley, Hill Top, Doewood, or the Park Gate, where Robt. Randall once lived; one payment to be made three days before Beeley Feast Sunday, and the other on St. Thomas's day, to buy them dinners on the Feast Sunday and Christmas-day. Disputes having arisen about the distribution, the sum of £100 is now secured on the Chesterfield and Hernstone-lane head road, at 5 per cent. which is paid to the overseer of the poor of Beeley, who pays £2 10s. thereof to the minister, and distributes the remainder at Christmas, amongst poor settled inhabitants of the chapelry, including the place specified in the donor's will. It appears to have been the donor's intention that the moiety of the income should be divided amongst four housekeepers only.

Henry Norman, by will, gave to the poor land, stated in the return of 1786, to be vested in the Duke of Devonshire, producing 10s. per annum, but there are no documents in the township relating to it. The sum of 10s. is paid by the Duke's agent, which is supposed to be a rent charge from a small field called the Croft, which is distributed by the overseer amongst the poor, at Christmas.

Mrs. Mary Dawson, who died about 1805, by will left £20, to be distributed among the poor of Beeley, by the minister and principal inhabitants. At a meeting after her death, it was resolved not to distribute the legacy at once, but to place it out at interest for the benefit of the poor. It is now in the hands of Mr John Barker, of Bakewell, at five per cent. interest. The annual sum of £1 is laid out in flannel or blankets, which are distributed at Christmas, by the minister and churchwardens.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. for this township, is received by the incumbent, and laid out in coarse woollen cloth or flannel, and given to the poor about Christmas.

BUXTON, one of the most celebrated of our watering places, on the high road from Derby to Manchester, is a place of great antiquity, as its warm springs were undoubtedly known to the Romans, and is supposed by some to have been the Roman station Bucostenum. The road called Bathorngate, was clearly traced, by the late Dr. Pegge, between this place and Brough, near Castleton, where the Romans had a station, and several Roman coins have been found here. It is situated 12 miles W.N.W. from Bakewell, 20 miles N. by W. from Ashbourn, 10 miles S.W. from Castleton, 22 miles N.W. from Matlock, 24 miles S.S.E. from Manchester, 26 miles S.W. from Sheffield, and 159 miles N.N.W. from London.

Buxton, a township, chapelry, and market town, with Cowdale, King's Sterndale, and Staden, contains 1,513A. 1R. 10P. of land, and in 1851 had 266 houses, and 1,235 inhabitants, of whom 551 were males and 684 females; rateable value £5,700. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner. Mrs. Pickford, of King's Sterndale, is also an owner. The Church, dedicated to St. John, situated at Lower Buxton, within the township of Fairfield, is a handsome stone structure, in the Tuscan order, of admirable workmanship. It was erected under the powers of an act of parliament, and opened on the 9th of August, 1812. The east front has large columns, which support a massive pediment, and on the west is raised a beautiful tower, which is seen for a considerable distance, and is altogether a beautiful object and great ornament to the town. By the act of 51st of George III., the patronage of this chapel, and that of Baslow, is given to the Duke of Devonshire; and in lieu of this patronage, lands of the value of £95 per annum, and the patronage of the vicarage of Tutbury, in Staffordshire, are given to the vicar of Bakewell. Buxton is a perpetual curacy in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, valued in the King's book at £5, now £400. It has been augmented with £200 benefaction, £600 Queen Anne's bounty, and £800 parliamentary grant. The Rev. Robert Pennyman Hull Brown, B.A., is the incumbent. Buxton was formerly considered to be in the chapelry of Chelmorton, with an ancient chapel in the town, but it is now an independent benefice, which has been amply endowed by its liberal founder. The Churchyard, which is tastefully laid out and planted with a variety of shrubs, flowers, evergreens, &c., contains a handsome monument, erected by subscription, to Phillip Heacock, Esq., who held the important office of agent to the Duke of Devonshire nearly 50 years in this district, he died February 11th, 1841, aged 73 years. The Old Church, dedicated to St. Ann, a low stone building, erected in 1625, with a turret and one bell at the west end, and a neat stained glass window at the east end, having but little accommodation for the rank and fashion who annually visit Buxton, was fitted up for a school; it was, however, re-opened for Church service a few years ago, and Divine service is performed every Sunday afternoon and Thursday evening. The Wesleyan Chapel, Higher Buxton, a handsome stone building with large school rooms immediately behind the same, was erected in 1849. The Independents have a Chapel in Spring Gardens; the Rev. Thos. G. Potter, is the pastor; the Presbyterians one on Hall Bank, erected in 1725; and the Primitive Methodists a small Chapel in the Back lane, behind the Queen's Inn. The Catholic Chapel, Scarsdale place, occupies a portion of the house formerly the residence of the late Dr. Darwin; it has been opened about five years, is very neatly fitted up, and will seat about 60 hearers. On the expiration of the present lease, a more commodious chapel, it is expected, will be erected. Rev. Edward Macgreevy, is the priest.

Buxton Endowed School, erected 1840, is a handsome building with residence for the master, was built in the Market place, by the Duke of Devonshire; it has endowments to the amount of about £100 per annum, (see Charities). The number of children attending is from 100 to 120 who pay a small sum weekly for their use of the school books, &c., but not as a remuneration to the master, Mr. Jno. Thackaberry.

Wesleyan Day School, Higher Buxton, erected in 1851, behind the chapel, is a convenient building capable of accommodating 100 children. The average attendance is 40, who pay from 2d. to 4d. per week each, according to age.

The Market Place, Higher Buxton, is a large open space, in the centre of which are the remains of an ancient Cross, and near the Eagle Hotel, is a fountain or conduit, erected by His Grace, in 1840, for the better supply of water to the inhabitants. The Market, held on Saturday is only small, the farmers in the neighbourhood, during the season, go round daily with butter, eggs, poultry, &c., for the supply of the visitors. Fairs are held on the Monday preceding Old Candlemas day, February 3rd, April 1st, May 2nd, Sept. 8th, and October 28th. When any of the latter four fall on Sunday, they are held on the preceding day. A Feast is held on the 24th June.

Petty Sessions are held at the Eagle Hotel, the last Saturday in every month; Mr. Wm. Bennett, is clerk to the magistrates. The Lock Up is in the Back lane; Mr. Joseph Hibbert, head constable. A Court Leet annually, is held alternately at the King's Arms Inn, Buxton, and the Royal Hotel, Chapel-en-le Frith; Joseph Hall, Esq., of Castleton, clerk.

Mechanics' and Literary Institute, Higher Buxton, was established in 1855, for the instruction of all classes, and afford the means for social, intellectual, and moral elevation, to which is added a Library, Reading and News Room, the former contains about 500 volumes of carefully selected books in various branches of literature, and the latter is liberally supplied with the London and Provincial daily and weekly newspapers, and the best weekly and monthly periodicals. In addition to these, a Museum of Natural History, Science, and Art is being formed, and will contain specimens of the Natural History, Manufactures, Works of Art, Antiquities, and Curiosities of the Peak of Derbyshire, more especially; the number of members is 233. Mr. Robt. R. Duke, is the president, and Messrs. J. C. Bates, and Wm. Smith, C.E. secretaries.

THE BATHS. Dr. Jones, an eminent physician, published a treatise on the beneficial effects of Buxton waters, entitled "Buxtone's Bathes' Benefite." This curious production was issued from the press in 1572, and it appears the waters were then in high repute, and was a place of resort for the fashionable circles of the day. "Joyninge to the chiefe springe," says Dr. Jones, "between the river and the Bathe, is a very goodly house foure square, four stories hye, so well compacte with houses and offices beneath and above, and round about with a great chambre and other goodly lodgings to the number of thirty, that it is and will be a bewty to beholde, and very notable for the honorable and worshipful that shall need to repaire thither, as also for other, yea, the poorest shall have lodgings and beds hard by for their uses only. The bathes also so beautfied with seats round about; defended from the ambyent ayre; and chimneys for fyre, to ayre your garments in the bathes syde, and other necessarys most decent. And truly I suppose that if there were for the sicke, a sanctuarie during their abode their, for all causes, saving sacriledge, treason, murther, rape, and robbing of the hyeway side, with a license for the sicke to eat flesh at all times, and a Friday market weekly, and two fairs yearly, it should be the posterieties, not only commodious but also to the prince, great honour and gayne. A physician placed there continually might not only counsayle therein, how theto better use God's benefyte, but also adapt theire bodyes making artificial bathes, by using thereof as the case shall require, with many other profitable devyses, having all things for that use or any other, in a redinesse for all the degrees as before it beelonge it shall be seene of the noble Earels own performing." To the gentlemen he recommends as exercise, shooting at butts, bowling, and tossing the wind ball. "The ladyes, gentlewomen, wyves, and maydes, may in one of galleries walke, and if the weather be not agreeable to theire expectacion they may have in the ende of a bench eleven holes made, in the whiche to troowle pummetes or bowles of leade, bigge, little, or meane or also of copper, tynne, woode, eyther vyolente or softe, after theire own discretion, the pastyne Troule in Madame is termed. Lykewise men feeble, the same may also practice in another gallery of the new buyldinges, Buckstone's Bathes, Benefyte, which cureth most grievous diseases." The Buxton waters were formerly drank in considerable quantities, as appears from a letter from the Earl of Sussex, dated Aug. 7th, 1582, which says—"I have drunk liberally, beginning with 3 pynts, and so increasying dayly one pynt come to 8 pynts, and from them descendyng a pynt a day, I shall ageyne return to 3 pynts, which will be on Thursdaye next, and then I make an ende." Prior to this, the Great Hall, for the accommodation of visitors, had been erected by the Earl of Shrewsbury. By Queen Elizabeth's permission, reluctantly obtained, the earl appears to have visited Buxton four times with his illustrious prisoner Mary Queen of Scots. In a letter to Lord Burleigh, dated Aug. 9th, 1580, he says: "I cam heddar to Buxton wt my charge, the 28th of July. She hadde a harde bygynnenge of her jornye; for whan she shuld have taken her horse, he started asyde and therewith she fell and hurte her backe, wch she still complanes off, nottwithstanding she applyes the bathe ons or twyse a daye. I doo strictly obsarve hur Maties commandment, wrytten to me by your L. in restreyninge all resorte to this plase, nether doth she see, nor is seene to any more than to hur own pepell and suche as I appoynt to attende; she hathe nott come forthe of the house synce hur cumynge, nor shall nots before her departynge."—Lodge's Illustrations. About the year 1670, the old hall was taken down, and a commodious edifice built on its site, by William, third Earl of Devonshire. Dr. Robertson, (a resident Physician) in an elegant little work observes "that the amount of solid matters contained in these waters is so trifling, being in reality less than is found in almost any common spring water, that every attempt to theorize on their effects from what we know of the nature of these constituents, must necessarily fall to the ground. What we do know is, that in the cases adapted to their use, they not only cease to stimulate unduly, and cease to interfere with the action of the bowels and of the kidneys; but their use is followed by a marked improvement in these particulars, and is found to be decidedly beneficial to several of the diseases with which man is afflicted." The Natural Tepid Baths are situated between the western extremity of the Crescent and the Old Hall; and are eleven in number. They have been reconstructed in 1852, on a very extensive scale, and in a manner superior to any other in Europe. There are two plunging baths for gentlemen, and three private baths; one plunge bath and three private baths for ladies, and one plunge bath for each of the male and female patients of the Bath Charity. The dimensions of one of the gentlemen's baths which occupies a room thirty feet by twenty, and fifteen high, is about twenty-six feet by sixteen, and about four feet and a half deep, paved with gritstone. The springs flow up on the south-east side of the baths, through the fissures of the limestone. It is calculated that all the springs throw up the water, which is constantly running through the baths, at the rate of sixty gallons per minute, so that the three large baths would be entirely replenished in about two hours and thirty minutes. All the baths are commodious and provided with forcing pumps by which the water may be directed against any part affected with considerable force. Screens and water proof dresses are provided to enable any part to be pumped on without rendering it necessary to immerse the rest of the body. A convenient machine is in readiness to lower the helpless and extremely infirm into the water, and as Dr. Robertson observes, "no means are left untried to deprive the bathers of Buxton of what has been said to be necessary to Englishmen, 'a something to complain and grumble about.'" Comfortable dressing rooms, bathing gowns, towels, and every requisite needed, are provided for the comfort and convenience of the bathers. The gentlemen's private baths are eleven feet long and five feet wide, with private dressing rooms, douche-baths and every comfort and accommodation. The ladies' public bath is contained in an apartment which is thirty-nine feet long, and thirty-nine and a half feet wide. The Bath itself is twenty-three feet long and eighteen feet wide. There are eight dressing closets with every other requisite and comfort. The ladies' private baths are eleven feet long and five feet wide, elegantly fitted up with every convenience. The entrance to each of these departments is by separate corridors, each sixty feet in length, and of ample width and height, which is reached by the Crescent Colonade from the south-west corner of the Crescent, where is the newly erected St. Anne's well, for the use of the drinkers of the water. The Well-room is lofty, and lighted from above; the Well in the centre being surrounded by a ledge of marble, on which to place the glasses, supported by a partition, from within which the water is dispensed to the drinkers. A little lower down, and next to the entrance to the ladies' department is the New Well for the supply of the chalybeate water. Until the year 1818 there were no means provided to give the visitors at Buxton a bath of a higher temperature than the natural water. In that year the New Hot Baths were constructed from a plan devised by Mr. C. Sylvester. They are situated on the east wing of the Crescent, and connected with it, the Square, the Hall, and the Natural Baths, by a colonade, and are divided into two separate parts, one of which is devoted to the ladies, and the other to the gentlemen. The Private Hot Baths are lined throughout with marble, and elegantly fitted up. The other baths are floored with marble, and the sides lined with the patent white porcelain-covered bricks. These splendid baths have also been newly erected on the plan of the Crystal Palace, with ridge and furrow roof, which sheds a flood of light throughout this beautiful building, which is not only admirably adapted to the purposes intended, but forms a beautiful addition to the east wing of the Crescent and a splendid ornament to the town. The estimated cost of these improvements exceeded £20,000. Dr. Granville speaks highly of these hot baths, as well as of the Gentleman's elegant private bath, of the natural temperature, and observes, "I can conscientiously aver, from my own extended experience of mineral waters, on the continent, that persons afflicted with the diseases named, who require the aid of a suitable mineral water, will find that needful aid at Buxton, provided they abjure, on proceeding thither, the sad and interfering practice of constantly drugging their stomachs by way of treatment, and leave nature to nature alone: namely, the mineral waters, and the pure, elastic, and bracing mountain air of the Spa!" Formerly the chapel of St. Anne, the tutelar saint of these hot springs, was hung round with the crutches, &c., of those who had come lame and had returned "leaping aad rejoicing;" and it appears these relics of error and delusion were taken away and destroyed in the reign of Henry VIII. A letter, written in that reign, to Lord Cromwell, connected with the history of Buxton, and shewing the fawning subserviency of high families at that period, is a curious document:—

"Right Honourable and my in especial Good Lord,

"According to my bounden duty, and the tenor of your Lordship's letters lately to me directed, I have sent your Lordship by this bearer, my brother, Francie Bassett, the images of St. Anne of Buxton, and St. Andrew of Burton-upon-Trent; which images I did take from the places where they did stand, and brought them to my house within forty-eight hours after the contemplation of your Lordship's letters, in as sober a manner as my little and rude will would serve me. And for that there should be no more idolatry and superstition there used, I did not only deface the tabernacles and places where they did stand, but also did take away crutches, shirts, and shifts, with wax offered, being things that allure and entice the ignorant to the said offering; also giving the keepers of both places orders that no more offerings should be made in those places, till the King's pleasure and your Lordship's be further known in that behalf.

"My Lord, I have locked up and sealed the baths and wells of Buxton, that none shall enter to wash there, till your Lordship's pleasure be further known; whereof I beseech your good Lordship that I may be ascertained again at your pleasure, and I shall not fail to execute your Lordship's commandments to the utmost of my little wit and power. And, my Lord, as touching the opinion of the people, and the fond trust they did put in those images, and the vanity of the things, this bearer can tell your Lordship better at large than I can write, for he was with me at the doing of all this, and in all places, knoweth good Jesus, whom ever have your Lordship in his precious keeping. Written at Langley, with the rude and simple hand of your assured and faithful orator, and as one and ever at your commandment, next unto the King's, to the uttermost of his little power.

"To Lord Cromwell. WILLIAM BASSET, KNIGHT."

Amongst the various opinions of mankind, which are continually experiencing extraordinary mutations, so that it is difficult to say what is true or false; yet recent investigations tend strongly to shew that all hot springs have one common origin,—volcanic. There are two systems by which water is returned to the surface. One is a simple diversion of the water descending from the higher regions of the strata; when it arrives at a fault, it flows out of the brow or side of the hill. The other is occasioned by water ascending from below by hydrostatic pressure, and derived from strata which, at their contact with the fault, are often at a great depth. On a subject so abstruse, and so remote from actual observation, limited humanity may easily err, and the obtaining a knowledge of the properties and uses much more important. Much has been written on the Buxton waters. Mr. Page, a resident surgeon, in his treatise, observes they are fairly entitled to the appellation of a mild saline mineral, the temperature of which at all seasons of the year is pretty uniformly eighty-two, on Farenheit's scale. They are perfectly pellucid and inodorous; and owing, most probably, to the large proportion of nitrogen gas which they contain, devoid of that vapid taste so observable in ordinary waters when heated to the same temperature. To their purity, to the mildness and uniformity of their temperature, at all times and seasons, neither depressing the vital powers by cold nor enervating them by heat, and to their impregnation with nitrogen gas, may be attributed, in no small degree, their salutary effects. The following are the diseases to which, by a successful application of the water, a cure may be looked for:—'In that state of weakness and irritability which so generally attend on the subsidence of febrile and inflammatory affections, but more especially on the protracted stages of gout and rheumatism; in many nervous disorders, such as epilepsy, paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, palpitation of the heart, tic doloreux,' &c.; as in many anomalous complaints, originating, or complicated with, a disordered state of the digestive organs, a judicious employment of the Buxton waters will frequently be attended with the happiest effects; and this, too, in spite of chemical analysis, and the opinion of those persons who affect to doubt their virtues, because neither they nor their chemical friends have been able to discover the ingredients on which such virtues should depend." Dr. Granville, the last medical writer on these celebrated waters, seems to agree with Mr. Page, as to their beneficial effects, and when speaking of the chemical ingredients of waters, and comparing them with those of Schlangenbad, he says,—"Here, at Buxton, we have a water at nearly the same degree of heat, with fewer ingredients, still producing, not only similar, but even more energetic effects." These opinions of the author of the "German Spas," in favour of Buxton, certainly may be considered of consequence. Dr. Pearson was one of the most successful enquirers into the nature and chemical constitution of these waters, and was the first to express a doubt as to the nature of the gas which impregnated the water, which was originally considered to be carbonic acid gas instead of azote, and subjoined we give his and Dr. Murry's analysis.

The water is recommended to be taken an hour before breakfast, and again about twelve at noon. The medium quantity is about half a pint each time. If this agrees perfectly well, the doses may be increased or taken oftener, but it is seldom necessary to take more than a pint and a half every day, though, in some cases, double that quantity may be taken with advantage. In addition, walking and exercise are the greatest benefit. Their use has been, by all writers, interdicted during the actual existence of any undue determination of blood to particular organs, during the existence of all febrile and inflammatory action, and in all visceral obstructions; consequently, no invalid should have recourse to them without proper advice. The bath should not be entered immediately after eating or taking the water, as dangerous consequences may ensue. One bath in twenty-four hours is considered sufficient in the most severe cases, but once in every two or three days in general ones. Mr. Page gives the following rules:—"To go into the bath about the middle of the day; to go in when the body is warm; to go in with the feet first; to remain in the water first but a very short time; to bathe on alternate days, or miss every third day." The celebrity of Buxton has for nearly two hundred years been constantly increasing, and, consequently, resorted to by vast numbers in all ranks of life, during the season. "Strangers entering Buxton from the south must be greatly disappointed in their expectations. The Crescent and the numerous buildings by which it is surrounded, together with the whole of the modern part of the town, are hid in the deep hollow below, over which the eye passes to the hills beyond, and nothing is seen but a miserable village, placed in as miserable a country as the mind can possibly conceive. Approaching the Eagle Inn, the place improves; but it is not until we arrive at the brow of St. Anne's Hill, that the new part of Buxton, with its elegant buildings and splendid hotels, is beheld. The transition is so sudden, and the change of scene so complete and entire, that the mind, bewildered and confused, almost doubts the reality of so extraordinary a contrast. The upper part of Buxton is truly a Derbyshire village; the lower, in the elegance of its buildings, its show and its parade, approximate to Bath. Nothing can be more instantaneous, or more forcibly felt, than the change of passing from one part to the other of this fashionable bathing place; and the company who visit it during the summer season, furnish a contrast equally striking and impressive. The bloom of health, and the sallow hue of disease—the elastic bound of youth, and the faltering step of infirmity—wealth and poverty, and all the gradations that society produces between, are here mingled together; teaching a salutary lesson to the observing strangers as he passes by." The greatest part of Buxton has been built with a view to accommodate visitors, and it is said that from 12,000 to 14,000 annually visit its healthy streams. The influx of company gave an impulse to building, and many boarding houses in the upper part of the town, and some good inns for the accommodation of the more wealthy, were erected, while ample means were also provided for the comfort and convenience of the poor invalid; and here Buxton stands unrivalled in its beneficent intentions to the poor. "The late Duke of Devonshire, who watched over the rising prosperity of this spot with great interest, which induced him to buy up all the inns and boarding houses he could, to pull down and rebuild them on a larger scale and in a better style, still thought more were wanting to accommodate the vast influx of visitors who came from all quarters for a few months in the season; his Grace, therefore, determined to erect such a range of buildings as should afford ample and princely accommodation for all, whether they came simply for pleasure or health. Hence the splendid pile, the CRESCENT, dictated by such a spirit of munificence, and executed in a style of grandeur as if intended solely for the residence of a prince, was commenced about the year 1789, and completed in seven years, at a cost of £120,000. The design was by John Carr, Esq., an eminent provincial architect, who superintended the whole building." It is in the Doric order of architecture. It is composed of three stories; the lower one a rusticated arcade, forming a beautiful and convenient promenade for the visitor in wet weather, or on scorching days, and amply provided with seats for their accommodation. It is seven feet wide within the pillars, (which support the two upper stories,) and eleven feet high. The floor of the arcade is raised at least three feet above the gravelled area in front, between which communications are formed by several flights of steps. An elegant balustrade skirts the front and ends of the building, the span of which is nearly 317 feet. The divisions between the windows over the piers of the arcade, are formed of fluted Doric pilasters, that support the architrave and cornice. The triglyps of the former, and the rich plancere of the latter, are specimens of workmanship rarely excelled, and have a beautiful effect. Another balustrade, raised above the cornices, and extending all round, much enriches the building, in the centre of which is the Devonshire arms, well carved. The diameter of the inner circle of the Crescent is about 240 feet, that of the outer one three hundred; each wing measures 58 feet; and the number of windows is 378. It is built of gritstone, obtained in the locality. Its situation is low, but it is contiguous to the springs and baths, and the Hall-bank in front is most tastefully laid out in terraces and serpentine walks, intersecting each other, with ornamental vases here and there, and convenient seats at intervals, all the loftier points affording interesting views of the country. The Crescent now contains only one hotel, (St. Anne's,) several lodging houses, the post office, and one shop. St. Anne's hotel occupies the west wing, and the Assembly rooms the east wing, a noble apartment, with a projecting cornice, highly enriched with various ornaments. Over this are a number of low windows, which throw the light softly over the top part of the room, which is 75½ feet long, 30 feet wide, and the same in height. The great stables at the back of the Crescent, but elevated above it, are considered the finest in Europe; their form outside is an octagon, the opposing sides of which are equal and similar, but inside the area is a circle 60 yards in diameter, round which is a covered gallery, where the company can take exercise on horseback whenever the weather proves unfavorable for going abroad. In these stables is ample room for a large number of horses and carriages. They were built at a cost of £14,000, said to be included in the £120,000.

Promenade Room.—Since the closing of the Great hotel, the fine assembly room has been used for that purpose, and forms an agreeable lounge in damp weather, and every forenoon the Duke's band plays in front of the Crescent. Adjoining the hot baths is the News room, and under the same roof is an elegantly furnished billiard room; both of which are conducted by Mr. Wm. D. Sutton.

The Repository, kept by Mr. Turner, No. 1, Hall Bank, contains a beautiful variety of fancy articles, tastefully arranged, which the proprietor spares no expense in collecting, and consists of Italian figures, vases, and Mosaic tablets, with a variety of Derbyshire goods in spar and marbles, formed into beautiful ornaments. Besides which there are Messrs. Bright & Co., Crescent; Mr. Woodruff, Quadrant; and Mr. Webster, Higher Buxton; with several others, who have each an excellent display of the rare and beautiful productions of Derbyshire.

The Circulating Libraries, kept by Mr. Turner and Mr. W. D. Sutton, have every requisite for amusement, and instruction, being well supplied with all the newest works in every department of literature, with reviews, magazines, &c.

The Buxton Bath Charity is a most distinguishing feature of the place, and its imitation at all other watering places is desirable. By the application of this humane institution on behalf of poor patients who have not the means of obtaining the benefit of its waters except by public bounty, great numbers are relieved. This charity is supported by voluntary subscriptions and donations, and a donation of one shilling by every visitor, who is politely requested to enter his or her name on the subscription book on the first day he or she dines at any of the hotels or boarding houses. Thus a small sum, which "blesseth him that takes and those who give," judiciously applied, has been the means of restoring to health hundreds of our poorer population, who otherwise could not have availed themselves of these healing streams. Sermons are also preached in the church and at the dissenting places of worship, for the benefit of this charity. The institution is under the management of trustees. A committee of the nobility and gentry (visitors at Buxton) annually audit the accounts. A donation of £10 constitutes a subscriber for life, with power to send a patient to the full benefit of the charity annually, and every subscriber of one guinea, and the boards of guardians, of different unions, are allowed to send a patient for every guinea subscribed, who shall be entitled to receive medical advice, medicines, the use of the baths, and 5s. weekly. A subscriber of half-a-guinea, one patient, who is entitled to receive medicines, &c., and 2s. 6d. a week, and a subscriber of 2s. 6d. and under 10s. 6d. one patient, who is entitled to receive medicines, attendance, and the use of the baths, but no weekly allowance. To prevent improper cases, a letter must be addressed to the secretary, Mr. James Wardley, of the Buxton Bath Charity, with a medical certificate of the nature of the complaint, and of his or her fitness for the use of the baths. From the year 1820 to 1855, no less than 36,230 patients have been admitted to these baths, of which number 1271 were admitted during the year 1855. Below we give a statement of the receipts and disbursements for the year ending 1st September, 1855 :—

W. H. Robertson, Esq., M.D., is the physician; W. P. Shipton, Esq., surgeon; Edward Woollett Wilmot, Esq., treasurer; and Mr. James Wardley, secretary. The trustees have under consideration plans for the erection of suitable buildings as a Board and Lodging house, for the accommodation of 100 patients. Amount of subscriptions already received towards that object, £3,100, towards which sum his Grace, the Duke of Devonshire contributed £100 and the site, and a further sum of £800 was realized; being the proceeds from a bazaar held for the above object.

The Serpentine Walks are entered nearly opposite the Old Hall, and extend along the course of the Wye, northward, which is here a small but beautiful stream, made highly interesting by being deepened in places, to give a greater expanse of water, and banked up in others, to form miniature cascades, which adds greatly to the picturesque beauties of the scene. At convenient distances, seats and rustic summer houses are made for the comfort of visitors. The walks are admirably laid out and ornamented with shrubs, and thriving plantations, near to which is the Park, which occupies about one hundred and twenty acres of greensward, sloping towards the south, with walks and drives carried through it for the use of the public.

The Duke's Drive was made by his Grace, about 1795, whose constant study has been to render this highly favoured watering-place as interesting and attractive as possible. This Drive, through Ashwood Dale, leaves the Bakewell road about a mile from Buxton, and branches off to the right; it then takes a circuitous route over the high ground, and skirts the top of the crags that bound Wye Dale, commanding some fine views of wild romantic scenery. After a circuit of about three miles, it joins the old London road, and enters Buxton by the Cheshire Cheese.

A Drive for about four miles along the Bakewell road to the vicinity of Topley Pike, is exceedingly rich and beautiful, through Ashwood Dale and Wye Dale. In this direction Miller's Dale, about seven miles, may be reached, and Chee Torr, if the visitor has no objection to walk, leaving the carriage at the bottom of Topley Pike, and proceed along the margin of the river by Blackwall mill, cross the river by the stepping stones there, and take the sheep-track up the cliff and over the rocks to Chee Torr, and send the carriage round to meet them. This scenery is rich and beautiful, and will amply repay the toil and trouble. Chee Torr, Miller's Dale, Cressbrook, Monsal Dale, and Ashford, all of which form excursions by taking the road by Fairfield. and are described in their proper places. The excursions in every direction are beautiful and romantic.

Poole's Hole is a celebrated cavern situated in Hartington Upper Quarter, where it is described.

Diamond Hill, about a mile beyond Poole's Hole, is a place mostly visited by strangers for the purpose of collecting those detached crystals which are here denominated Buxton Diamonds. These crystals are often hexagonal, and their sides and angles are accurately formed, and so hard that the points will cut glass. An author, remarking on the advantages of Buxton, observes that "to the mineralogist it offers many a rare and beautiful fossil, but to the botanist it is a source of incalculable delight; for there is scarcely a plant indigenous in Britain which may not be found on the mountains or in the valleys in its neighbourhood. To the angler, the pellucid waters of the Wye and Dove furnish the beautiful tribes of trout and grayling, so celebrated by Cotton and Walton. To the sportsman, during the shooting season, the extensive moors belonging to the Duke of Devonshire, and the Earl of Derby, abounding with grouse, partridges, snipes, dotterel, plover, &c., have their attractions."

Buxton has been greatly improved within the last half century by the erection of several handsome villa residences and superior lodging houses, with good lofty rooms, many of them fitted up in the first style of elegance, and possess every comfort the most fanciful visitor could wish. The Inns and Posting houses in general are of a very superior class and afford every accommodation the tourist or invalid may require; the principal of which are the St. Anne's Hotel, Crescent; the Old Hall; the Grove, Lower Buxton; the George, Square; the Shakespeare, Spring Gardens; the White Lion, Spring Gardens; the Royal Hotel, Winster Place; and the New Inn and Yorkshire Hotel, the Sun, and the Cheshire Cheese, at Higher Buxton.

The Gas Works are situated in the township of Fairfield, near the river Wye, and were erected in 1851 by a company of £10 shareholders, with a capital of £2000. The gasometer will contain about 14,000 cubic feet of gas, and there are 4 retorts, but the works are about to be enlarged by an additional outlay of £1,000. Mr. John Smilter, is the secretary.

Visitors have abundant means of transport to all parts of the kingdom, for which see Coaches and Carriers, &c., in the Directory. The High Peak railway passes within 1½ miles of Buxton, and the proprietors have a station at 1 mile distance. The contemplated line of railway, to be applied for during the present session of parliament, which will come within a short distance of Buxton, will open an easy transit to all parts of the country, and doubtless cause an increased number of visitors here.

Antiquarians all agree that Buxton was a Roman station, and Watson supposes it to have been on the hill above the Hall, which is known by the name of the Stene or Stane Cliffs. Several Roman baths have been found here, and one so lately as 1781, in digging the foundation of the present Crescent. Major Rooke, also, in 1787, found remains which he conjectured to be those of a Roman temple. From these circumstances, and from the meeting of at least three of their roads at the same point, there is little doubt of a Roman station having existed in this spot; and there is some foundation for supposing the name of it to have been Aquæ, as Aquæ Sextioe, in Provence, and Aquæ Solis or Sulis, in Somersetshire were names given by the Romans to places distinguished by their warm springs. The river Wye rises a little west of Buxton, from the north east side of Axe Edge, and separates this from Fairfield township, in Hope parish, which, after passing Buxton, is joined by another branch on the east side of Combs Moss, near Fairfield, passes King's Sterndale, a little south of Wormhill, through Miller's Dale, Monsal Dale to Ashford and Bakewell, and skirting Haddon park, falls into the Derwent near Rowsley.

Cowdale, 1½ miles S.E. from Buxton, consists of a few scattered houses.

King's Sterndale, a small village on the Wye, 2½ miles S.E. from Buxton, contains two large farms the property of Mrs. Elizabeth Pickford, who also has a neat residence on the estate. A new Church, dedicated to Christ, was erected here in 1848, in the early English style, and contains nave, chancel, porch, and turret with one bell. It will seat about 120 persons, all of which are free. The Parsonage, which was erected about the same time, is situated a little S.W. from the church, and cost about £1,100. The living is a perpetual curacy, and the Rev. Jph. C. Bates, B.A., is the incumbent.

CHARITIES.—Buxton School.—On a brass-plate in Buxton chapel, there is the following inscription, dated 1674, of benefactors to the town of Buxton, for the uses under expressed, amounting to £300, with which sum the donors purchased £15 per annum in fee clear of all charges, viz. :—£12 for the schoolmaster of the said town, for teaching Latin, English, and writing; 50s. for repairing the highway from Buxton Butts to the stone that standeth on the hill Cockard, and so on to Shallcross Brook, in June and July; and 10s. to be spent by the trustees at the making up of their accounts, on the 29th September, yearly, for ever. A suit in chancery was, in 1792, instituted for the regulation of this charity, but not prosecuted with effect; from this time till 1817, the school appears to have been suspended, when the old chapel of Buxton was converted into a school room, and re-opened. The lands now belonging to this charity in Buxton and Hartington, consist of 35A. 1R. 4P., let for the annual sum of £64 1s. 6d.,and in 1819, a sum of £750, part of a balance in favour of this charity, was laid out in the purchase of £712 11s. 8d. navy 5 per cent stock. On the reduction of the dividends in that stock, the Duke of Devonshire and others, as trustees, became possessed of £748 4s. 3d. new 4 per cents. The dividends on the stock amount to £29 18s. 6d. per annum, making the whole income of the charity £94 per annum, which is received by Mr. Wilmot, the treasurer, who keeps the accounts. In 1819, it was ordered the schoolmaster's salary should be £100 a year, which exceeds the income, and in the year ending 25th of June, 1826, a balance of £117 16s. 9d. against the charity, had been advanced by Mr. Heacock, as the agent of the Duke of Devonshire. The treasurer's accounts are audited on 25th June, at a meeting of the trustees. The schoolmaster, with the assistance of an usher, appointed and paid by himself, instructs on the National system in reading, writing, and arithmetic, all the poor children, usually about 120; of the chapelry of Buxton, the only charge being 1s. a year for firing, and 1s. a year towards books and stationery. The schoolmaster is prepared to teach the Latin language to any children whose parents require it.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley).—The annual sum of £5 10s. for this chapelry, is received by the minister, and laid out in coarse woollen or flannel, given to the poor about Christmas.

CHELMORTON, a township, chapelry, and indifferent village, situated at the foot of a lofty hill, 5 miles S.W. from Tideswell, 4½ miles S.E. from Buxton, and 7 miles W. from Bakewell, contains 1,954A. 1R. 23P, of land, and in 1851 had 54 houses, and 238 inhabitants, of whom 130 were males, and 108 females; rateable value, £1,404. This chapelry includes the township of Flagg, and formerly that of Buxton, of which the detached parts—i. e. Cowdale, King's Sterndale, and Stadon—of that township, are still considered as in this chapelry. The principal owners are the Duke of Devonshire, Rev. Wm. Marsden, Messrs. Jno. Bateman, Joseph Swanwick, Robert Hargreaves, Charles Finney, and Priestcliff School. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a very ancient stone structure, being erected A.D., 1111, and is said to stand on the greatest elevation of any church in England. It contains nave, chancel, aisles, and embattled tower with 4 bells, surmounted with a spire. The living is a perpetual curacy, certified value £7 15s. 4d., now £80, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, and £1,200 Queen Anne's bounty; is in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, and patronage of the vicar of Bakewell; Rev. James Coates, incumbent, who resides at the Parsonage, a neat house west of the church. At the inclosure of Chelmorton and Flagg, under an act passed 1805, land was awarded, in 1808, in lieu of all tithes, to the Duke of Devonshire, the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, and the incumbent. The manor is parcel of the Queen's manor of the High Peak, of which the Duke of Devonshire is lessee. The Talbot family had a mense manor in Chelmorton, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, in which they were succeeded by the Eyres, of Hassop. It now belongs to Colonel Leslie. There was a chapel here as early as the year 1282, at which time the prior of Lenton, in Nottinghamshire, had two-thirds, and the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield the remainder of the tithes, and they were jointly bound to provide books and ornaments for the chapel, and the dean and chapter a priest with a stipend of five marks. The Independents have a chapel, which is also used by the Methodists. On the summit of the hill west of the village are two barrows adjoining each other, the circumference of the largest being about 240 feet, which was opened in 1782, when several human skeletons were discovered in rude stone coffins. Ill Willy Water rises from a spring on a Lowe, and passing through the town falls into a Swallow in the limestone, and goes a long distance before it appears to the day again. Ditch, Flatt, and Shellow, are scattered farms, from $\frac{1}{4}$ to 1 mile W. from the village. The feast is on New Year's day.

CHARITIES.—Mrs. Ann Bagshaw, it is stated on a tablet in Chelmorton chapel, left the interest of £5 to the poor of Chelmorton. 5s. is received from a farm belonging to Mrs. Johnson, which formerly belonged to Mr. Buxton, the grandfather of the late Mr. Johnson. The overseer, on our enquiry, stated that it was intended to make application for the money to Mrs. Johnson, in order to place it on some good security.

William Hodgkinson, by will in 1814, gave to his executors £40, in trust, to be placed out on real security for the use of the poor of Chelmorton. In 1815, this sum was placed by his executor, Mr. Sampson Marsden, on the security of a mortgage of lands at Eyam. The interest, £2 per annum, is received by the overseer of the poor, and distributed yearly amongst widows and other poor.

CHELMORTON SCHOOL.—William Brocklehurst, who died in 1792, gave £101 4s., secured on the tolls of a turnpike road leading from Buxton, and another sum of £200 secured on the tolls of a road leading to Cheadle, during his lifetime, for the purpose of applying the interest for ever for the increase of the salary to the schoolmaster of the charity school at Chelmorton. By indenture, 1818, the executors and residuary legatee of John Buxton, conveyed to trustees a cottage and plot of land of 12 yards in length and 10 yards in breadth, at the east end of the town of Chelmorton, for the residue of a term of 500 years, commencing 5th August, 1785. John Lambton Stonehouse, as the representative of William Brocklehurst, surrendered to the said trustees the above two sums, on trust, for the use of a schoolmaster. The cottage mentioned is divided into two dwellings. On an inclosure of common lands, under an act passed in 1805, about one rood was allotted to this cottage, now let for 7s 6d. a year. The two sums still remain invested in the same securities. The security of the Buxton road bears interest at 5 per cent., which is very irregularly paid. At our inquiry five years' interest was due. The Cheadale road bears interest at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., which is regularly paid. The income averages about £13 per annum, for which about 21 poor children of Chelmorton are instructed in reading, writing, arithmetic, and the church catechism. We are informed an annual sum of £2 was paid to the schoolmaster by Mr. Michael Buxton till his death, about 49 years ago, supposed to have been made in respect of Farthing Field, but we have not been able to obtain any further information relating to it.

FLAGG, a township and scattered village in a fine open district, in the chapelry of Chelmorton, from which it is distant 1 mile S.E. and 6 miles W. from Bakewell, contains 1,771A. 3R. 29P. of limestone land, and in 1851 had 48 houses, and 239 inhabitants, of whom 126 were males, and 113 females; rateable value, £1,358 17s. 9d. The principal owners are the Duke of Devonshire, Messrs. Jno. and Chas. Finney, Jas. Beech, Thos. W. Evans, Esq.; Rev. H. K. Cornish, Mr. Thos. Needham, and Mr. George Dunn. It is within the Queen's manor of the High Peak, of which the Duke of Devonshire is lessee. The Unitarians have a chapel, built in 1838, and the Primitive Methodists one, erected in 1839. Feast, Sunday after 6th of July.

CHARITIES.—John Dale, eldest son of George Dale, who was the heir-at-law of Thomas Dale, conveyed in 1807 to Robert Duke and six others, on trust, in consideration of £12 12s., a croft, in Flagg, called Piper's yard, or Dale croft, by estimation one acre, then let for the yearly rent of 32s., for carrying into effect the will of the aforesaid Thomas Dale. At the inclosure, about one rood was awarded to the croft, and now let for £4 per annum. The rent, with 20s. received from Syth Dale's charity, is distributed on St. Thomas's day amongst widows and fatherless children.

CHELMORTON CHAPELRY CHARITIES.—Mrs. Syth Dale, in 1667, according to a tablet in Chelmorton chapel, gave £1 18s. 6d. yearly out of her estate in Flagg, to be distributed every Christmas-day, by the curate and the executors of John Buxton, of Chelmorton, and William Bagshaw, of Flagg. The sum of £2 is now received from the owners of different parts of the estate which formerly belonged to Mrs. Dale. One moiety is received by the minister of Chelmorton on Christmas-day. and distributed to poor persons at the chapel, that day, after divine service. The other moiety is received and distributed by the overseer of Flagg, on St. Thomas's day.

Robert Dale, by will, 1742, gave £40 to the poor of Flagg and Chelmorton, to be invested on landed security in three trustees, the parson of Chelmorton to be one, to be divided at Christmas or Candlemas. An annual sum of 40s. is received for the use of this chapelry, in respect of a public house in Chelmorton, called the Duke of York, and lands adjoining. The two annual sums are distributed shortly after they are received, amongst the poor of the respective townships.

Adam Lowe, by his will, in 1801, gave £1 yearly to the poor of Chelmorton and Flagg, out of land lying at Chelmorton. Thomas Lingard, the owner of two pieces of land called the Old Field and the New Piece, which contain about 3½ acres of land, distributes annually, at Christmas, to two poor women at Flagg, 2s. each, and the residue amongst poor persons at Chelmorton.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity, (See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the incumbent, and laid out in coarse woollen cloth or flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

LONGSTONE, (Great) a chapelry, in the parish of Bakewell, which includes the township of Great Longstone, with the hamlet of Holme, the township of Little Longstone, and part of the township of Wardlow, which together contain 4630A. 0R. 23P. of land, and in 1851 had 184 houses and 909 inhabitants, of whom 457 were males, and 452 females; rateable value £5,097 2s. 3d.

GREAT LONGSTONE is a large and pleasant village, situated on an eminence, sheltered on the north by a range of lofty hills, 3 miles N.N.W. from Bakewell. It forms a joint township with Holme. The village consists principally of one long street; the houses are mostly built of stone, and covered with thatch, and when viewed from the N.E. present a pleasing appearance. It contains 3,004 acres of land, and in 1851 had 120 houses, and 564 inhabitants, of whom 281 were males, and 283 females; rateable value £3,980 5s. 4d. The Chapel, dedicated to St. Giles, is an ancient stone structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and small tower. It contains several monuments to the Eyre family, Earls of Newburgh; the living is a perpetual curacy of the value of £200; the vicar of Bakewell patron; Rev. George Chinnery Tooth, incumbent, who resides at the parsonage, a neat house erected about 1830. Tithes were commuted in 1846, the hay and corn for £72, and lamb and wool £36 17s., and at the inclosure of the Commons in 1820, 24A. 1R. 30P. of land was allotted to the Vicar of Bakewell, in lieu of tithe. The Dean and Chapter of Lichfield are owners of all the tithes except the vicarial. Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and principal owner, which is mostly freehold, the copyhold, small fine certain; William Henry Wright, Esq., is also an owner, with several smaller owners. At the enclosure of this township with Little Longstone and Wardlow townships by an act of 1810, 14 acres of land were awarded in 1824 for the support of a schoolmaster, now let for £10 13s. per annum, to which a bequest of William Wright, in 1656, and an annual contribution of £5 from the Duke of Devonshire, is paid to the master for teaching 20 poor children; the school room was built by subscription, and the master has a house and garden rent free; the Wesleyan Methodists have a small chapel erected in 1842. An ancient stone cross supposed to be the old market cross, stands at the west end of the village. The feast is held on the first Sunday after the 11th day of September. Longstone Hall, is a large ancient brick mansion, nearly surrounded by trees at the west end of the village, the seat of Miss Elizabeth Carliell,and the property of William Henry Wright, Esq., of Lympstone, Devon, whose family have been possessed of a considerable portion of the land in this place since the reign of Edward III. The family of Rouland, or Roland, had a house and lands here in the fourteenth century, which passed by marriage to the Staffords of Eyam. In the Rolls of Parliament, we find Godfrey Rouland, who styles himself "un pauvre and simple Esquyer," praying "convenable et hasty remedy" against Sir Thomas Wendesley, John Dean, vicar of Hope, and others who are stated to have come to the petitioners house at Longsden with force and arms, to have carried off goods and stock to the value of 200 marks, to have made the petitioner prisoner, and carried him to the castle of the High Peak, where he was kept in custody six days without victuals or drink; after which they are stated to have cut off his right hand, and then to have released him.

HOLME, a hamlet and joint township with Great Longstone, 3 miles S.S.E. from Longstone, contains 476A. 0R. 12P. of land; the houses are included with the return of Great Longstone; rateable value £1,000 15s. 10d.; the soil on limestone is principally in pasture. Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and principal owner. Holme is situated on the bank of the Wye, north from Bakewell, where are the Lumford Mills, which form a suburb to Bakewell. Holme Hall, an ancient house in the Elizabethan style built in 1626, is the seat and property of Thomas John Gisborne, Esq. At the enclosure allotments were given in lieu of tithes to the vicars of Bakewell and Hope.

LONGSTONE (LITTLE) is a small village and township in the chapelry of Great Longstone, situated on high ground, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.N.W. from Bakewell, $\frac{1}{2}$ mile W. from Great Longstone, contains 1006 acres of land, and in 1851 had 29 houses, and 154 inhabitants, of whom 71 were males, and 83 females; rateable value £630. The land is principally on limestone, and occupied as grazing land. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and principal owner. William Henry Wright, Esq., and several others are also owners. The Wye on the west flows through a deep vale of singular beauty, called Monsal Dale, a fine view of which is obtained from a small Inn, the Bull's Head, erected upon the Edge stone head, where the Wye is seen rolling its silvery waters from the north, here and there shaded by fine ash trees, until passing beneath a rustic bridge, it soon turns westward, and winding round a bold promontory, is lost to view in this direction; leaving this romantic scene the road passes down a steep declivity on the east side of the Wye, the banks of which are spread with nature's carpet of richest hues, and form a pleasing contrast to the stupendous mountains on each side, whose venerable heads seem nearly destitute of verdure. "The Wye," observes a fair author, "seems to have changed its characteristics under the influence of this sylvan vale, and no longer foams over a rocky channel or forces its way through narrow defiles, but expands its glossy surface to the smooth banks of the beautiful meadow land that divides it from the base of the mountain. Two or three rustic dwellings in harmony with the scene diversify the level of the valley; they are shaded by the finest ash trees that grow in Derbyshire, whilst their descendants grace the rising hills in little groups, and single trees, and throw their shadows on the green bright turf from whence they spring! The mountains rising above them, from which the rocks start in light pinnacles, or rounded turrets! The shining ivy at all seasons of the year decking their silvery sides with its evergreen beauty. The river after having spread itself in beautiful expanse, winds eastward out of the dale: its termination hidden by the projecting head land across the broadest part of the river, the very sort of bridge that unites with the features of the scene communicates with the opposite bank: large blocks of native marble tagged together by their own inequalities, through the apertures of which the water glides, their surface blanched by the sun, and polished by the frequent overflow of the rapid stream, their little hollows and interstices covered with moss of the greenest hue; and the impetuous Wye even there in its chosen repose, fretting and bubbling around them, as if to resent its interruption. In the provincialism of the county these stones are called (lepping) leaping stones, thirty-two of which form this rustic bridge. The sweet solitude of this valley, this Derbyshire Temple, has no gloomy abstraction. A fine road leads down the side of the mountain, and continues along the dale, meeting the course of the river; few would choose to descend its steep declivity in a carriage, but no one would regret alighting to walk with such objects around. The most seducing quietness pervades the soft domain; the water steals along so gently, that scarcely a murmur meets the ear; the birds select it for their early nests; the lambs sport upon its narrow sheltered meadows; in its bright waters the heavy fleeces of their dams are washed, and upon the banks, one who loves the calm and quiet recreation, that in which old Isaac Walton most delighted, may there be seen in solitary enjoyment. I cannot imagine that any stranger who first surveys the pastoral beauties of Monsal Dale from the heights above, its deep yet smiling seclusion, but feels a passing thought, if not a wish to become a resident, for there the fury passions of mankind sink to rest, and all the gentle ones are soothed to balmy happiness." The Dale contains three farm houses and three cottages, and on the north is closed by a lofty mountain at the foot of which is Cressbrook Cotton Mills, in Litton township. William and James Longsdon, Esqrs., have both neat residences here; the family have resided and had considerable property in this locality several centuries, and are descended from Matthew a son of Thomas, rector of Bakewell, who settled at Longstone previous to the reign of Edward I., and was called "De Parva Longsdon," and his posterity afterwards Longsdan. The tithes were commuted in 1846, on hay and corn £48, and lamb and wool £10, which belongs to the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, and at the inclosure of the Common in 1820, 6A. 3R. 8P. of land was set apart in lieu of the vicarial tithes. This manor was purchased by the Countess of Shrewsbury, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and the almshouse erected by her at Derby is endowed with £100 issuing out of it. The Independents have a small handsome stone chapel here, erected in 1844. The Feast is held at the same time as Great Longstone.

WARDLOW, township and small village in the chapelry of Great Longstone, and partly in the parish of Hope, 5 miles N.N.W. from Bakewell, and 2 miles E. by S. from Tideswell; the entire township contains 620A. 0R. 23P. of land, and in 1851 had 35 houses, and 191 inhabitants; 65 inhabitants are in Bakewell parish, and 22 houses and 126 inhabitants in Hope parish; of the population 105 were males, and 86 females; rateable value, £486 16s. 11d. The Bakewell portion of land is 225A. 0R. 7P. of the rateable value of £196 3s. 3d. The Duke of Devonshire is principal owner and lord of the manor, in which only a small portion is copyhold, held on small fine certain. It is a bleak and naked district, having no edge rows and very few trees, principally occupied as dairy farms; the land rising gently from the village to a bold eminence at the S.W. end of the township. A Sunday school was erected here in 1835, in which divine service is occasionally performed by the perpetual curate of Longstone. On making a turnpike road through the village in 1759, a circular heap of stones was opened, in which were found the remains of 17 human bodies entombed within stone coffins, apparently got from a quarry about 1 mile distant; but of the deposit nothing is known. Anthony Lingard who murdered Hannah Oliver, by strangling her, after suffering the extreme penalty of the law, was hung in chains, near this village, April 1st, 1815. The Feast is held the first Sunday after September the 11th.

Wardlow Heys is a portion of land let off in gates at stated rentals to the inhabitants for the feeding of sheep and cattle.

Wardlow Mires, a district which contains about 25 inhabitants, is partly situated within the hamlets of Great Hucklow, Litton, and Wardlow in Hope parish.

GREAT LONGSTONE.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Frances Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. for the chapelry, is received and laid out by the Incumbent, in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, which is distributed amongst the poor in the chapelry.

Rowland Eyre, Esq., of Hassop, as stated on an inscription in Longstone chapel, dated 1624, among other charities, gave 20s. to the poor of Great Longstone, to be paid three days before Christmas, and three days before Easter. The steward of Col. Leslie now pays the 20s., which is distributed on St. Thomas's day.

William Wright, by will of 1656, gave 40s. yearly to 40 of the poorest people in Great Longstone, for ever, to be paid on St. Thomas's day; £5 yearly to be paid to ten of the poorest male children in Great Longstone, to every one of them 10s. to pay for learning where they should like best; 30s. yearly for the maintenance of divine service in the chapel of Great Longstone; 10s. to the poor of Ashford; and 10s. to the poor of Wardlow, to be issuing out of his estate at Wardlow. The owner of the estate now pays the above sums. Divine service for some time has been omitted, but the present minister proposes to perform the service on St. Thomas's day, and claim the 30s. in future. £5 to the male children is paid to the master of Longstone school for ten poor children.

Thomas Wright, Esq., of Great Longstone, left the interest of £22 10s. to be given as a dole to the poor of Great Longstone and Holme, on the Purification of the Blessed Virgin. This sum is lent on a security of the turnpike road from Chesterfield to Hernstone-lane-head, at 5 per cent. interest. The sum of £1 2s. 6d. per annum as interest, is distributed on Candlemas day, by the chapelwardens to poor persons of the township, of which Holme forms a part.

Captain Henry Wright, of Ballybough Bridge, in the county of Dublin, by will, 1762, after giving to his nephew Thomas Wright, of Longstone, Derbyshire, and if he should die before the age of 21, or have no children, to the youngest son of his good friend George Venables, Lord Vernon, all his bills and bonds subject to the payment of his debts, funeral expenses, and legacies bequeathed as follows:—"it is my desire that a sufficient sum be taken out of my fortune as will completely clothe three poor old men, and three poor old women of the parish of Longstone, with a shilling, and great coat, facing them of different colour; on the 29th September, for ever. I also give 12 sixpenny loaves and sixpence in money to 12 old house-keepers, inhabitants of Longstone, with two pounds of beef each, on the 1st of January for ever." A sum of £500 was set aside and was for many years in the hands of Lord Vernon, by whom complete suits of clothing were provided for three poor men, and three women of Great Longstone, but it does not appear the other directions were complied with; about the year 1810, a copy of the donor's will was obtained from Ireland, and applications on their behalf were made to Lord Vernon, and to his brother the present Archbishop of York, who had become the residuary legatee under the will; the Archbishop being desirous of fulfilling the donor's intentions, and of applying the £500 in the purchase of lands to be secured to the charity. By indenture dated 7th June, 1824, a farm at Aston Edge, in the parish of Hope, was conveyed to John Thomas Wright, of Lympston, in Devonshire, and James Longsdon, of Longstone, and their heirs, 44 acres of land with farm house, outbuildings, for the sum of £725 in trust for the objects of the above charity. The sum of £151 10s. 11d. required to make up the purchase and expenses, was made up by several of the inhabitants who joined in a promissory note; at the time of our investigation the sum of £120 still remained on the note. When the whole sum is paid it is proposed all the objects specified in Captain Wright's will be carried into effect. The rent of the farm at Aston Edge is £28 16s. per annum, and the trustees appoint the objects of the charity, and audit the accounts.

Holme Meal Charity. (See Bakewell), one moiety of a payment of five pecks and one eighth of oatmeal to be paid weekly. Instead of a weekly distribution of oatmeal, an annual payment equal thereto is made, such moiety being received from the agent of the Duke of Devonshire by the overseers of the poor of this township, is laid out in the purchase of oatmeal, and distributed once a week during five or six weeks, usually in January and February.

Great Longstone School is said to have been erected about the year 1787, with a house for the master, and a small garden. On the enclosure of lands by an act of parliament passed in 1810, for Great and Little Longstone, and Wardlow, the commissioners were required to allot so much of the wastes in Great and Little Longstone, as in their judgment should be equal to the clear yearly value of £10 which allotment should be vested in the Most Noble William Duke of Devonshire, and nine others, including the curate, for the time being, on trust, to apply the rents for the benefit of a school-master within the townships of Great and Little Longstone. The commissioners by their award in 1824, allotted to the trustees on Great Longstone common, 11A. 3R. of land, and 2A. 2R. on Little Longstone common, both of which are let for £9 a-year; they also allotted in respect of the school, 22 perches now let for 13s. The trustees pay the rents to the schoolmaster. The master also receives £5 per annum from the donation of William Wright, out of an estate at Wardlow; and a voluntary gift of £5 per annum from the Duke of Devonshire, and he instructs 25 poor children appointed by the trustees.

LITTLE LONGSTONE.—Ralph Rider, by will, 1709, gave to his wife Mary, the house at Monyash in which he dwelt, with two little closes of land called Dowsaslacke and Buxton-lane-Pingle, for her life; and after her death he gave the reversion:—one moiety to the poor people of Monyash, and the other moiety to the poor of Little Longstone, to be disposed of to them by the overseers of the poor of the respective places for ever; who were to let the places on 2nd February, yearly. The building being in a dilapidated state, was about 1813, removed by the tenant who pays £8 per annum rent, of which the moiety is distributed here in small sums amongst the poor on Candlemas day.

William Wright's donation of the annual sum of 10s. is paid from his estate at Wardlow, and distributed by the chapelwardens, amongst the poor of this township.

WARDLOW.—William Wright's donation, (See Great Longstone). The annual sum of 10s. is paid out of his estate here, which is distributed by the principal inhabitants to the poor on Christmas day.

Monyash, with One Ash, a scattered township, and ancient village and chapelry, 5 miles W. from Bakewell, 13 miles N. from Ashbourn, in a low situation at the cross of the Ashbourn and Bakewell and the Taddington and Longnor roads. It is a compact village, built with stone, chiefly roofed with slate, and contains 3,001A. 2R. 12P. of freehold land, and in 1851, had 103 houses, and 473 inhabitants, of whom 248 were males and 225 females; rateable value £2,027 1s. 8d. Robert Henry Cheney, Esq., of Sheffnall, Salop, is lord of the manor and considerable owner. The Duke of Devonshire, Jno. Melland, Esq. Stephen Melland, Esq., Mr. Jas. Bridden, Mr. Thos. Blore, Mrs. Green, and Mr. Moses Tunnicliff, are also owners. It is principally on limestone, and on the high land poor and cold; yet superior management has effected much here, and good turnips and other produce are grown with advantage. The Church, St. Leonard's, is a perpetual curacy, annexed to the vicarage of Bakewell, and in the peculiar jurisdiction of the dean and chapter of Lichfield, value £104. It has been augmented with £200 benefactions. and £1,200 Queen Anne's bounty. The vicar of Bakewell, patron; Rev. Henry Charles Smith, B.A., incumbent, who has 76A. 0R. 6P. of glebe land. The Church is an ancient structure, with side aisles and a square tower, containing three bells, surmounted with an octagonal spire, which rises to a considerable height, and is seen at a great distance. The Duke of Rutland receives the large tithe, about £45. At the enclosure, land was allotted for the lamb and wool. About the year 1200, Robert de Salocia, and Matthew de Eston were lords of this manor, called Manies. William de Lynford, described as the King's valet, obtained a grant of a market on Tuesday, and a fair for three days, at the festival of the Holy Trinity, in his manor of Moniash. The manor, at a later period, belonged to the Earls of Shrewsbury. On the death of Lord Gilbert, in 1616, his great estates in Derbyshire descended to his daughters and coheiresses, Mary, wife of William, Earl of Pembroke; Elizabeth, wife of Henry, Earl of Kent; and Alathea, wife of Thomas, Earl of Arundel. In the year 1640, Philip, Earl of Pembroke being possessed of two of these shares, sold them to John Shallcross, Esq., who, in 1646, resold them to Thomas Gladwin, Esq., of Tupton Hall. The granddaughters and coheiresses of Gladwin brought this estate in moieties to Sir Talbot Clarke, and Dr. Henry Bourne. In 1721, the Clarkes sold one-third of this manor, and Dr. Bourne, in 1736, another one-third, to Edward Cheney, Esq. In 1735, Mr. Cheney had purchased the remaining third of John Gilbert, Esq., of Lockoe. Mr. Gilbert possessed it by devise, from the Savilles, who had purchased it in 1638, of Henry, Earl of Kent. Monyash chapel was originally founded as a chantry chapel, about the year 1200, by Robert de Salocia, and Matthew de Eston, who endowed it with lands for the celebration of Divine service on Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. In the year 1280, Archbishop Peckham ordained that, in addition to the lands given by the inhabitants at the foundation, they should add one mark, and that the dean and chapter of Lichfield should pay the remainder. It also appears that a chantry was founded here by Nicholas Conyson and his brother, which, in the reign of Edward VI., was valued at £3 6s. 3d. per annum. In the church are memorials to Thomas Cheney, Esq., of Ashford, dated 1723, father of Edward Cheney, Esq., and to the families of Sheldon and Palfreman. The markets and fairs have long been disused. The market was held on Thursday, and fairs on the Saturday preceding the second Tuesday in February, the 14th of May, the Monday before the second Wednesday in September, and the 19th of October. Two Great Barmote courts are held at the Bull's Head, annually, viz., the first Tuesday in April, and first Tuesday in October, at which all pleas of debts and disputes as to title relating to lead mines within the hundred of High Peak are determined. C. S. B. Busby, Esq., of Chesterfield, steward of the court; Jas. Longsdon, Esq., of Little Longstone, bar-master. John Grattan, who died in 1711,. left a cottage and some ground adjoining, to the Society of Friends, which was converted into a Meeting house with a grave-yard; it is vested in trustees, and has lately been considerably altered and improved. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel, erected in 1835. In 1750, a school house was erected by subscription, and at the enclosure in 1771, award signed 1776, 14 acres of land were allotted as an endowment to the school, producing £18 17s. 6d., but there are 20A. 2R. 17P. of land belongs the school now in the occupation of the master, for which 16 poor children are instructed. In the village, is an ancient stone Cross. Feast, first Sunday after St. Martin.

One Ash Grange, a manor and large farm, exceeding 800 acres, nearly one mile S.W. from Monyash, the property of the Duke of Devonshire; is occupied by Mr. Henry Bowman, whose ancestors removed here about 1698, from Westwood Hall, near Leek, Staffordshire. The house is situated in a retired hollow, near the head of the Lathkill Dale, noted for the beautiful scenery of the banks. The river Lathkill rises at the base of a lofty over-hanging mountain, and within a cavernous opening, only 16 inches in height and 4 feet wide; after passing this orifice by crawling on the belly, it soon becomes an extensive arched cavern. This manor, Aneise of Domesday, was given to Roche Abbey in Yorkshire, by William Avenell, lord of Haddon. After the Reformation it seems to have been given to the Shrewsbury family. Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury sold it in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, to Sir Thomas Gargrave. Summerhill, a large pleasant farm, ¾ mile S.W. from Monyash, with plantations near, is the property of Mr. Bowman. The hills and whole district have a bleak appearance, there being no hedge rows; the partition fences, dry stone walling without any mortar. In Rucklow Dale, are some extensive quarries of grey marble, of which blocks of almost any size can be obtained; it is much admired for its variegated surface. It is noted in Domesday book that Oneash was considered as a penal settlement to which refractory monks were sent, and where a peculiar species of Monk's rhubarb has lately been found, which has been sent to various places.

CHARITIES.—Monyash School.—The inhabitants of Monyash being desirous to have a school, andas a means for this object, and to provide a salary for the master, conveyed to Edward Cheney, the lord of the manor, divers small pieces of land of the common ground, which had been inclosed, for the sum of £75, which was deposited with William Goodwin in 1799, he previously having had £200 subscriptions from the Duke of Devonshire, and others, in his hands. The lord of the manor, with the consent of the freeholders, set out a piece of waste ground in the centre of the village, containing 30 yards by 20, lying before the ancient pool, on which it was determined to build the school, and that a salary of £10 a-year should be raised for the master, who should instruct all the children of the legal poor of Monyash, in the English tongue, writing, and arithmetic; the master to be appointed by the trustees then named. By an inclosure, at which it had been agreed land to the value of £6 per annum should be awarded to the school. In 1766, the commissioners set out 14A. 32P. to the school, which with two small fields, containing about an acre, said to be the Rake Lane allotment, and a field, rather more than an acre, which George Goodwin, who died in 1782, left to the school, (added to which is a small plot of land purchased for £7 by the trustees with a part of Hugh Goodwin's bequest, for which interest is paid,) let for £18 17s. 6d. The schoolmaster instructs 16 poor boys and girls in reading and writing.

Ralph Rider's charity, (See Little Longstone.) The annual sum of £4 is received by the overseers from this gift, and is distributed to the poor with others.

John Bartholomew, in 1720, gave the widows and fatherless children of Monyash 20s. yearly, charged on the Hill's close, to be divided on the feasts of St. Thomas and the Purification.

George Goodwin, in 1724, gave to poor persons who had no weekly pay, 10s. a-year, to be divided by his executors, which he charged on the Wheat Lands, now the property of Henry Barker, Esq., whose tenant pays the 10s. to the overseers, which is distributed with others.

Hugh Goodwin, in 1825, gave the interest of £10 to be distributed to poor persons of this township. A part of this has been expended in the school land, for which 5s. interest is paid; the remaining portion does not appear to be accounted for. This, with the above sums, is distributed on Candlemas-day amongst the poor

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity, (See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen and flannel cloth, which he distributes to the poor about Christmas.

Thomas Palfreyman, of Crag Hall, Cheshire, gave, on the 14th November, 1823, £100, to be laid out in land, the yearly interest to be given to the poor of Monyash; also a further sum of £5 5s. to erect a tablet in the chapel, mentioning the particulars and where the land is purchased. Thomas Bateman, Esq., of Middleton, near Youlgreave, received the above sums from Miss Elizabeth Palfreyman, sister of the donor, who died in January, 1824, and was buried at Monyash. The money was placed in the savings' bank at Bakewell. At the time of our enquiry, February, 1827, was about to view a field on sale, for its investment. About Christmas, 1825, a year and a half's interest was received, and distributed in flannel and cloth with Gisborne's charity.

SHELDON, township, chapelry, and small village in an open district, 3 miles W. from Bakewell, contains 1061A. 1R. 31P. of land inclusive of 70A. 3R. 15P. woods, &c., and 26 acres of roads; and in 1851 had 48 houses and 197 inhabitants, of whom 89 were males and 108 females; rateable value £948 10s. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner, which is partly copyhold. The Chapel is a small ancient edifice with turret and one bell, situated in the centre of the road passing through the village, dedicated to All Saints. The living, a perpetual curacy united with Chelmorton, vicar of Bakewell patron, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £600 Queen Anne's bounty, and £200 parliamentary grant, and is in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. The Duke of Devonshire gave about half an acre of land for a burying ground, which was consecrated in 1853; it is situated a little east from the Church. This was from an early period part of the manor of Ashford. Griffin, son of Wenonwyn, alienated it in the reign of Henry III. to Geoffrey de Pickeford; it was afterwards re-united to Ashford, and was a chapel of ease to Bakewell. The tithes were commuted in 1847. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, erected in 1848.

CHARITIES.—Mary Frost, by a codicil to her will, 1755, gave to three trustees and their executors, £200 on trust, to be placed on the best security, and to expend one moiety in binding out apprentice one or more of the poorest boys of Sheldon to some honest trade; and the other moiety in binding out in like manner, boys of the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith; for particulars of which see that parish. The £100 applicable to Sheldon, remained in the hands of William Bossley, and that also of his son Mr. Alexander Bossley, who died in 1826; since which his executors have made out an account by which it appears the sum of £212 is due to the charity of Sheldon, 4 per cent. interest having been allowed for the money from 1774 to 1827, and 25 apprentices had been put out with premiums of £4 each. It is proposed to lay out £193 15s. of the above sum in the purchase of land in the parish of Tideswell, producing a rent of £7 15s. per annum, to be conveyed to new trustees; the perpetual curate to employ the rents agreeable to the donor's will.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity, (See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the incumbent, which he lays out in coarse woollen and flannel, and distributes it to the poor about Christmas.

TADDINGTON AND PRIESTCLIFFE form a joint township and chapelry, with Blackwell township annexed, together contain 2855 acres of land, principally limestone, and in 1851 had 117 houses and 488 inhabitants, of whom 248 were males and 240 females; rateable value £1890.

TADDINGTON is a considerable and ancient village on the Bakewell and Buxton road, 4 miles S. from Tideswell. The Church, St. Michael's, a perpetual curacy, certified value £10 10s., now £90, has been augmented with £800 Queen Anne's bounty and £800 parliamentary grant, and is in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. It is a small neat structure, with a spire, situated in a field on the north side the village. The vicar of Bakewell, patron, and Rev. Wm. Hy. Hugall incumbent, who resides in the parsonage, a neat residence near the church, erected by the late Rev John Henry Coke, in 1840. William de Hamilton died seized of a third part of the manor of Taddington, in 1286. It is now considered as parcel of the Queen's manor of High Peak, on lease to the Duke of Devonshire. The following are scattered farms:—Taddington Field is a large farm, the residence and property of Mr. Wm. Bagshaw. Five Wells, 1½ miles W. Wheel, Upper and Nether, 1 mile S.E. from Taddington. Col. Leslie is the principal owner and lord of the manor. Lord Denman, Mr. Wm. Clay, Mr. Wm. Bagshaw, Messrs. Wm. and Geo. Wilkinson, James Beech, Esq., Mr. James Redfern, and Tideswell school are considerable owners. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1833.

PRIESTCLIFFE, OR PRESTLEY, is a small village, 1 mile N. from Taddington, consisting principally of farm-houses, and Priestcliffe Ditch, a farm 1 mile W. Here are many small freeholders. On the western side of the lofty conical hill of Priestcliffe, in a dark coloured ferruginous soil, are found a few quartz crystals similar to the Buxton diamonds.

CHARITIES.—Michael White, by will, 1789, gave £15 a year, for ever, for the instruction of 12 poor children of the liberty of Taddington, in reading, writing, and accounts, and 40s. a year to be distributed amongst the most needy persons of the township, on the 24th of December, yearly, for ever, and he charged all his lands in Taddington with the payment. By indenture, 1799, Alice White and Martha White, sisters, and devisees in fee of the said Michael White, granted to John Bateman and four others, and their heirs, a rent-charge of £17 per annum, to be issuing out of certain lands in Taddington, on trust to pay £15 part thereof for instructing 12 poor children of the township, or some of the neighbouring parishes, in the principles of the Church of England, the boys to read, write, and cast accounts, and the girls to read, knit, and work plain work; and to divide the residue £2 amongst the most necessitous poor born within the township. The premises subjected to this deed are now the property of the descendents of the late John Bateman. Of the rent charge £15 is paid to the schoolmaster elected by the trustees, who instructs 12 poor children of Taddington and Priestcliffe, and the remaining £2 is distributed at Christmas amongst poor persons of Taddington. A school was erected by subscription in Taddington, about 1805.

William Higgingbottom and Ellen his wife, as stated on a benefaction table in the chapel, gave 10s. a year to the poor of the liberty of Taddington, to be paid out of the lands called Tym's crofts. We are informed that Ellen had only a life interest in the land, and was incapable of creating any permanent charge thereon; and that 5s. is now distributed amongst the poor of the township.

Charles Hayward, in 1773, left 5s. to the poor of Taddington, to be distributed in bread, on the 4th of January, for ever; to be paid out of certain housing and lands in Taddington; 5s. is distributed yearly on account of this charity.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley).—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, for this charity, is laid out in purchasing coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Rev. Roger Wilkson of Wormhill, in 1714, gave all his lands at Biggin, in the parish of Hartington, for the benefit of a free school, for maintaining a schoolmaster to teach gratis all the family of Wilkson that shall reside at Taddington, or in the parishes of Bakewell and Tideswell; and for 10 more poor children in Priestcliffe, Taddington, Blackwell, and Brushfield; to trustees, on trust, after the death of his wife, and after all his legacies were discharged, to raise so much money as would make his land at Biggin worth £20 a year for ever, for the use of the above, provided the curate be not schoolmaster; and further, "it is my will, that if there be any of the Wilksons qualified for masters they may be chosen before any other; and I also bequeath £3 a year for a schoolmaster at Wormhill, that shall be elected by the said trustees of Priestcliffe school." By indentures dated May, 1715, John Buxton, in consideration of £445 paid by Elizabeth Wilkson, widow of the donor, conveyed a messuage and outbuildings in Chelmorton, containing 37A. 3R. 24P., which, together with copyhold premises in Biggin, containing 6 acres, were surrendered by the donor to the uses of his will, at a court at Hartington, holden 24th Oct., 1691. Mr. George Wilkson, the late schoolmaster, was at a court holden at Hartington, 19th Oct., 1820, admitted to the lands at Biggin, in trust for the school, being 7A. 2R. 2P., an allotment on Alsop Moor having been added was let for £1 a year. The freehold estate at Chelmorton comprises a house and outbuildings in the village with 65A. 0R. 25P. of land of which 27A. 1R. 4P. was an allotment made under the Chelmorton enclosure act, about 1821, exclusive of 7A. 2P. sold for the payment of expenses. These premises had been let on lease, for 21 years, by the schoolmaster for £60 per annum, now said to be worth £70. The annual value thereof is about £80 per annum. Mr. Geo. Wilkson, the late schoolmaster, received the rents, against whom an information was filed in the court of Chancery, in 1804. This suit was settled in 1846 against the late Mr. Geo. Wilkson, and in 1847 a handsome school with a house for the master was erected of limestone; it is now taught on the National plan. There are 30 free scholars.

Rev. Roger Wilkson, also by his will, gave to his two nephews Jno. and Wm. Wilkson, and their heirs certain lands, and he charged the land he had given to John with 8d. every Lord's-day, and the land given to William 4d, every Lord's-day, when the land should come into their hands, to be laid out in twelve-penny worth of white bread every Sunday. The weekly sums of 8d. and 4d. are respectively paid in respect of the above lands. Four three-penny loaves are sent every Sunday to Taddington chapel and given to four poor persons attending divine service.

BLACKWELL is a small scattered village and township, in Taddington chapelry, 4 miles S.W. from Tideswell, 7 miles W.N.W. from Bakewell, forms a romantic district on limestone, contains about 1000 acres of land, and in 1851 had 10 houses and 28 inhabitants, of whom 11 were males and 17 females; rateable value £715. Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and owner of nearly all the township. This manor was given by William Peverel to the priory of Lenton, in Nottinghamshire, in the reign of Henry I. It appears by Pope Nicholas's Valor, that the manor consisted of four Oxgangs of land, then valued at £1 5s. per annum. This manor was granted in 1552, to Sir William Cavendish. In 1641 it was included in the Earl of Newcastle's estates, and then valued at £306 0s. 4d. There was another manor in Blackwell, which was the property and residence for several generations of the ancient family of Blackwall, the last of whom having become greatly involved in debt, an extent was issued at the suit of the crown, in the reign of Charles II, for the enormous sum of £130,632 7s. 10d. The manor was seized and granted to the family of Hope. Lady Margaret Hope, daughter of the Earl of Haddington, was possessed of it in 1702—now both belong to his Grace the Duke of Devonshire.

CASTLETON parish, consists of the townships of Castleton and Edale, which together contain 10,068A. 3R. 9½P. of land and had in 1851 289 houses, and 1333 inhabitants, of whom 670 were males, and 663 females; rateable value, £5815 19s.

CASTLETON is a neat, pleasant, and interesting village and township, situated at the western extremity of a beautiful valley embosomed in lofty hills and celebrated for its wonderful cavern and natural curiosities. is 6 miles E.N.E. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, 6 miles N. from Tideswell, 12 miles N.E. from Buxton, 24 miles N.W. from Matlock, 16 miles W. by S, from Sheffield, 27 miles S.E. from Manchester. 20 miles W.N.W. from Chesterfield, and 36 miles N.N.W. from Derby. It contains 2905A. 3R. 9½P. of land, and had in 1851, 195 houses, and 867 inhabitants, of whom 441 were males and 426 females; rateable value, £3,395 19s. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor under the crown, and the principal owners are, Robert How Ashton, Esq., Joseph Hall, Esq., Francis B. Champion, Esq., Rev. John Champion, Wm. Needham, Esq., and Mrs. Martha Tym, besides several smaller owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Edmund, is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £6 7s. 6d.; now, £186, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, and £600 Queen Anne's bounty. Bishop of Chester is patron and impropriator, and the Rev. Hugh Ford Bacon, MA.., incumbent. The tithe was commuted in 1842, the impropriate for £100, and the vicarial for £56; of the tithe of lead ore, two-thirds are paid to the Bishop, and one-third to the vicar. The church is a large stone cemented edifice, with a low tower and peal of eight bells of superior tone; about 25 years ago, it was thoroughly repaired at a cost of £500, when a beautiful arch, separating the nave and chancel, was discovered and brought to view; —in the chancel is a handsome painting of the "Adoration of the Magi," by Vandyke, which was given by Capt. Hamilton. In 1853, a handsome stained glass window was placed in the chancel, by subscription to the memory of the late Rev. C. C. Bates, who was vicar of this parish for 35 years. There is also a library in one of the vesteries containing upwards of 2,000 volumes. The Rev. F. Farran, who was vicar here 38 years, and died 3rd Oct., 1817, bequeathed a number of books for the use of the parishioners, to which have been added a considerable number of volumes by Capt. Hamilton and Miss H. Farran; they consist of historical, theological, and biographical works, and here is a copy of Cranmer's great Bible, printed in 1539, and a copy of the Breeches Bible, so called from its translation of Gen. iii. chap. 7. v., printed in 1609, and with it are bound the Psalms in metre, by Sternhold and Hopkins. In the church is a monument to Charles Potts, Esq., who died in 1725; one to Micah Hall, who died in 1804, and one to John Mawe, Esq., of London, mineralogist, he died 26th Oct., 1829, in his 63rd year, and was interred in the parish church of St Mary-le-Strand.

Here are several good Inns,—the principal of which is, The Castle, commercial and posting hotel, which is well fitted up with every convenience, and affords excellent accommodation for visitors; Mr. Peter Kirk, proprietor. Here are three manufactories of spar ornaments, with museums, in which the most beautiful tables, vases, and obelisks, &c., are to be found with some of the greatest natural curiosities in the county, among which are splendid incrustations, called the Lions of the Peak—A chain and padlock cut out of black marble, without a joint except the lock; a large marble table composed of about 200 specimens of various descriptions; with a variety of petrefactions and antiques. The lovers of geology will here find Mr. Hall, successor to the late Mr. E. Hall, who was for about 70 years a practical geologist. At this establishment may be seen geological specimens and maps, one of which has been published and denominated the "Midland Coal Field of England," extending from the north of Leeds to Coventry, and from Nottinghamshire to Lancashire and Cheshire. The late Mr. E. Hall read a paper before the British Association for the advancement of science, at the Cambridge meeting in 1845, on the geology of Derbyshire, which elicited the plaudits of the association; especially of Professor Sedgwick, who was a pupil of Mr. Hall's in the early part of his geological researches. The late Mr. John Mawe of the Strand, London, who published various treatises on mineralogy and geology, for many years spent about two months every autumn at Castleton, where he acquired that thorough knowledge of the district which rendered his publications and his museum very attractive. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel erected in 1805, and the Primitive Methodists one erected in 1833. Here is an Endowed school, which is now taught on the National plan, and Sunday Schools are attached to the places of worship. Here are two lodges of Odd Fellows, and several Benefit societies. Feast, first Sunday in September. The village of Castleton is closely hemmed in on three sides by lofty and precipitous hills which consist of huge masses of mountain limestone thinly covered with verdure, through which the grey rock frequently protrudes. Close upon the village, is the steep eminence on which the castle is situated, which, in the Domesday survey is described as, "Terra Casteli, W. Peverel, in Pecke fers." This estate belonged, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, to Gundeberne and Hundine. The expression in the survey seems to import that this castle, which gives name to the parish, was built by Wm. Peverel to whom William the Conqueror had given the manor amongst other estates. The castle afterwards acquired the name of Pec or Peke, or Peak Castle. It was forfeited with the manor, by Wm. Peverel, the younger. King Henry II. gave them to his son John, afterwards king. During the absence of King Richard, this castle, pursuant to an agreement of Longchamp, Bishop of Ely, and John, the Earl of Mortyne, was placed in the hands of Hugh Nonant, Bishop of Coventry. Hugh Neville was appointed governor of this castle in 1204. In 1815, it was in the hands of the rebellious barons; William Earl of Derby took it by assault, and was made governor by the king. In 1374, it was granted with the honour and forest of Peak, by Edward III., to John of Gaunt, and became parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster. Sir Ralph Shirley, who died in 1466, was constable of Peak Castle. In the reign of Henry VII., the castle was held under the Duchy by Robert Eyre, Esq., of Padley; in the reign of Henry VIII., successively by Robert Thornhill and Wm. Gallins; in the reign of Edward VI., by Godfrey Somersall; and in that of Elizabeth, successively by John Eyre, Esq., and Godfrey Foljambe, Esq. The Duke of Devonshire has the nominal appointment of Constable of the Castle, and is lessee of the honour or manor and forest of Peak, of which Castleton was formerly considered a member. Courts are now held for Castleton as a distinct manor, extending over many of the townships of the Peak.

There was formerly an hospital of royal foundation, for certain paupers, and a chaplain, endowed with lands valued in 1377, at £3, and four bushels of oatmeal: it was situated about half way between Castleton and Hope. The castle was a small structure situated on a bold eminence 260 feet high, and was inaccessible on account of precipices on every side, except the north, and even here the approach was necessarily made by traversers, to obviate the steepness of the ascent. It appears to have originally consisted of a plain wall, enclosing an area of moderate dimensions, with two small towers on the north side, and a keep near the south-west corner, being a square tower measuring 39 feet outside, and 19 feet by 21 within; the walls and a portion of this keep are still remaining. Mr. King, who has minutely described this castle, in his "Archœlogia," imagines that it was erected during the Saxon Heptarchy, but others suppose that it was built by Wm. Peverel. It is said a splendid Tournament was held here in the time of the first of the Peverels, on the following occasion:—"William, half-brother of Pain Peverel, Lord of Whittington, in the county of Salop, had two daughters, one of whom, named Mellet, was no less distinguished by a martial spirit than her father, and, by her declaration, was resolved to marry none but a Knight of great prowess; and her father, to confirm her purpose, and to procure a number of visitors, invited all the young men who were inclined to enter the lists, to meet at Peverel's Place, in the Peak, and there decide their pretensions by the use of arms, declaring at the same time, that whoever vanquished his competitors should receive his daughter, with his castle at Whittington. Guarinede Meez, a descendant of the house of Lorraine, and an ancestor of the Lords Fitz Warrine, vanquished his opponents,—a son of the King of Scotland, and a Baron Burgoyne, and obtained the prize for which he fought." It is difficult to imagine how this was at any time possible, for the very limited dimensions of the site, the few remains of outbuildings, the peculiarity of its situation and the difficulty of access to it, all concur to induce the supposition, that it was merely a strong military position to flee to in case of danger, and never the established residence of a feudal baron.

From the Castle Hill is a beautiful view of the surrounding country. To the west appears Mam Tor: to the north, Losehill; and to the west, Winhill; names derived, as tradition reports, from the event of a battle fought by two contending parties who had been posted on those hills. At the foot of Winhill is seen the village of Hope, forming a pleasing feature in the expansive scenery. This rocky precipice forms the roof of Peak's Hole, which stands foremost among the wonders of Derbyshire. A narrow path by the side of a clear stream leads from the Castle Inn to this celebrated place. A high bank on the right intercepts the view of this singular orifice, until the traveller is near enough upon it to be fully aware of its dimensions and feel the power of its grandeur; it then bursts upon him, and fills his mind with sensations of awe and terror. The entrance into Peak's Hole is formed by a depressed arch 116 feet wide, 43 feet high, and in the receding depth 90 feet. Within this gulph a number of band and twine spinners are employed, which has a singular effect. Proceeding 180 feet, you are shewn stalactites, which the guide calls petrified water; 60 feet beyond this, there is a tremendous piece of detached rock, called the Round of Beef. Here lights are supplied, and after proceeding 160 feet, down a gentle declivity to the interior apartments of this tremendous hollow, the light of day, which has been gradually softening, wholly disappears, and the further passage is explored by the light of candles. The way now becomes low and confined, and must be passed in a stooping posture, when a spacious opening, called the Bell House, again permits the standing upright, beyond which, at the distance of 80 feet, the cavern seems to be entirely closed in every part; but upon a near approach, a low passage under the rock is discovered; this opening is just large enough to admit a boat, and the passenger must lie down in it while the guide ferries him over a distance of about 54 feet under the rock. Beyond the water, a spacious vacuity, 200 feet in length, 180 in breadth, and in some parts 120 in height, opens in the bosom of the rock but, from the want of light, neither the distant sides nor the roof of it can be seen. In the passage at the extremity of this vast cavern, the stream which flows along it spreads into what is called the second water. This can generally be passed on foot. Near the termination of this passage is an aperture, distinguished by the name of Roger Rain's House, from the circumstance that water is incessantly falling in large drops through the crevices of the roof. Beyond this opens a spacious cavern, called the Chancel, where the visitor may be accommodated with music, which issuing from a quarter where no object can be seen, every thing around being still and peaceful, is calculated to awaken attention, and powerfully impress the imagination with solemn ideas. At the conclusion of the strain, the performers appear ranged in the hollow of the rock, about 60 feet above the station of the spectator. The place being illuminated with a number of candles, bears a resemblance to a singing gallery in a church or chapel, from which the cavern has its name. From the chancel, on proceeding 100 feet, is a fissure called the Devil's Cellar, from which is a descent by 22 steps, a distance of 50 feet; then proceeding 90 feet further, you arrive at the Half-way House, as the guide calls it; here is a stream of fine clear water, and in proceding to the end of the cavern, this small rivulet is crossed five times. Passing along the water side 330 feet, the Four Natural Arches are arrived at. Here the beholder cannot fail to be struck with the beauty and correctness of these arches, having the appearance of a gateway to an ancient monastery or abbey. After proceeding 90 feet, you come to a vast concavity in the rock, resembling a bell in shape, and denominated the Great Tom of Lincoln. The distance from this part to the termination of the cavern is 120 feet. The rock was some time ago blasted 50 feet further, in the expectation of discovering other caverns, but none were found, and the water is only a few inches from the rock. Its extreme length is 1,200 feet, and its depth from the surface of the mountain about 600 feet. It ranges entirely in limestone strata, which are full of marine exuviæ, and occasionally exhibits an intermixture of chert. The stream that flows through the cavern buries itself at Perry Foot, about three miles west from Castleton, on the Buxton road; it afterwards passes through Speedwell mine, and reissues into day at the great entrance into Peak's Hole.

Speedwell Mine, one mile west from Castleton, on the Buxton road. The entrance into this extraordinary place is close by the road side, at the opening into the Winnetts. The subterranean excavation that communicates with the immense cavern beyond, was the work of a company of adventurers. The lead veins in this part of Derbyshire are known to run from east to west; it was therefore, imagined that a drift cut from north to south would intersect them and a field containing abundance of ore. The enterprise was a bold one, but unfortunately for the parties concerned, it failed. Mr. H. Moore, whose Excursions in the Peak contains much valuable information, says, "Three sets of workmen were engaged in this undertaking, five to each set, by which means the work was carried on night and day for eleven years. Each man used one pound of gunpowder per day, (for the whole excavation was effected by blasting.) The quantity used amounted to 51,645 pounds. The sum expended in this undertaking amounted to £14,000 about 62 years ago. The principal proprietor, a Mr. Oakden of Staffordsbire, was ruined by the undertaking." 106 steps carried down a rocky passage leads to the inmost recess of Speedwell mine. On arriving at the bottom of this long descent, the visitor is carried in a boat along a channel hewn in the heart of the rock, for 700 yards, when he enters a void, vast and dark, called the Devil's Hall. Leaving the boat, a platform, erected above the level of the canal, is ascended; standing on the verge of a tremendous gulph of unfathomable depth,—above an immense cavern, whose lofty recess no light has yet been able to penetrate —a sensation of awe takes possession of the mind. After proceeding to the depth of 90 feet, commences a pool of waters, not unaptly termed the Bottomless Pit, whose compass may in some measure be conceived by its having swallowed upwards of 40,000 tons of rubbish, occasioned by the blasting of the rock, without any apparent diminution in its depth. The superfluous waters of the canal fall through a water-gate into this profound cauldron, with the noise of a mighty rushing torrent. The effect of a Bengal light, discharged in this cavity, which is said to be nearly 200 yards below the surface, is extremely magnificent and striking. Beyond this fissure, the canal has been driven to a great extent, but in this part little occurs to entitle it to observation. This mine is sometimes called Navigation Mine, from the waters having been collected so as to float a boat for conveying the ore, and otherwise rendering the work less laborious. From this subterraneous place of retreat, the visitor is conducted back—when he will not fail to welcome the light of day.

The Winnetts or Winyates, a deep winding narrow chasm, about 1 mile in length, and which till about 40 years ago was the only direct communication between Castleton and Buxton and Chapel-en-le-Frith. A tolerable good carriage road passed through this ravine, but the steepness of the ascent rendered it inconvenient to travel upon, in consequence a new road was made along the base of Tray Cliff, and forward by Mam Tor, which has increased the distance from the top of the Winnetts to Castleton nearly a mile and a half. The magnificent views of the country which this circuitous line of road affords, may perhaps more than compensate the tourist for the additional distance. The scenery of the Winnetts is wild and dreary, but yet interesting; a more romantic and diversified district is scarcely to be met with throughout this extraordinary region. A narrow ravine amidst perpendicular rocks of limestone, projecting abruptly in different shapes, seems to preclude the access of man. Many of these rocks are above 1,000 feet in height, and as they contract the rugged sides of the chasm, a continual stream of air rushes amongst them sweeping violently against the cavernous rents with which they are indented. From the ceaseless current of air that passes through it, the ravine has received its name, pronounced by the inhabitants of the Peak, Winyates. When the tempests arise, the noise of the wind in the chasm becomes loud and awful, and is heard at a great distance, while the sky is frequently blue and serene. In this valley of precipitous rocks the comparatively verdant spot on which the village of Castleton is situated, terminating the most fearful of the declivities of the Winnetts, assumes a rural, and even a pastoral character, being skirted with wandering sheep, which, in a region where grass is nowhere plentiful, are sometimes found grazing on the green moss that here and there enlivens the limestone rocks among the Winnetts themselves.

Cavedale.—At the foot of Castle Hill, and close to the Tideswell road, is Cavedale into which you enter through a rocky portal, scarcely six feet wide. This place is considerably on the ascent, and from the singularity of the rocks on each side, and the richness of the soil by decomposition, is productive of many novelties in botany, particularly a great variety of lichens. In proceeding up, several veins are observable, from which lead ore has been obtained. From this point the castle, seated on the extreme verge of a narrow ridge of rock, rises high above you, and here forms a landscape which, for picturesque wildness, has not its equal in any other part of this mountainous district; and yet, where the two sides of the dell closely approach each other, a pleasing view of the tower and the church is admitted through the rocky vista. Proceeding still further up the glen, another contracted pass, similar to the first entrance, admits you into a somewhat more open valley, where the regular basaltic column of toadstone, mentioned by Mr. Mawe, in his Mineralogy of Derbyshire, is situated. Here are several springs of excellent water, which find their way to Peak Cavern, and cause the continual dropping noticed at Roger Rain's house. At one of these mountains, known by the name of Holland Twine, some splendid stalactites have been found. The visitor may, instead of returning the way he came, proceed a little higher up the dale, and turning to the right, a footpath down the mountain before you leads into the part of Castleton known by the name of Goosehill, where stands Goosehill Hall, the residence of the Rev. H. F. Bacon, the vicar of Castleton.

Mam Tor, Mother Mountain, or Shivering Mountain, is perceived at some distance on the left, towering above the other mountains, and having an elevation of full 1,200 feet above the level of the valley. Mam Tor is an ancient British name, and the Shivering Mountain, a title it has received in modern times, from the circumstance of its being composed of shale and micaceous grit in alternate strata. The former is continnally decomposing under the action of the atmosphere, and falls in large quantities down the face of the precipice to the valley below, which is to a considerable extent covered with its ruins. The lines of an ancient encampment, which occupied its summit, are still in excellent preservation, with the exception of a number of yards, which have been destroyed by the mouldering of the shale. This has also caused large quantities of the grit to fall, the noise of which, in its descent, is sometimes so loud as to be heard at Castleton, though about a mile and a half distant. This mountain forms the summit of Tray Cliff, and the new road from Castleton to Buxton passes its base.

The Fluor Spar Mine.—To the right of Mam Tor, about 140 yards from the road is the entrance to this mine, so famous for its production of that mineral, noted by chemists and geologists of the greatest celebrity as unparalleled by anything of the kind yet known to the world. The entrance is an arched descent of 123 steps, to the depth of 60 yards, and in several places sparry incrustations cover the roof. Having arrived at the bottom, proceeding about 300 feet, on a perfectly safe and easy road, is the grand chrystalized cavern which is shewn to great advantage by the light of 28 candles in a chandelier suspended from the roof. The height of which is about 80 feet. This splendid and magnificent cavern, for beauty and size, exceeds anything of the kind in England; the variegated colours and beautiful crystallizations which it displays can scarcely be imagined, and when seen, fill the mind of the spectator with wonder and astonishment. Here are also specimens of the Encrinites and other fossil remains, which, for beauty and perfection are not to be equalled in the Peak. Proceeding a few steps from this cavern, you come to a small cavity, where the guide shews the visitor that wonderful production, the Fluor Spar, as it is imbedded in limestone rock, provincially called Blue John, which had for a length of time been looked upon as unworthy of attention; its qualities have at length began to be fully appreciated, and its known rarity has enhanced its value. It is to be found in the splendid palaces of the nobility, manufactured into exquisite vases, obelisks. &c. In this cavity are some beautiful stalactites suspended from the roof, which greatly resemble the pipes of an organ, hence the place has been called the Organ. Returning from this cavity, and proceeding along the grand crystallized cavern about 60 feet, to the large cavern called the Dining-Room, by an easy declivity of 330 feet, through a range of caverns in a serpentine direction, the sides of which are covered with marine substances. Along this passage, and in the Dining-Room, nature is seen in its most awful and terrific forms. Proceeding 120 feet, over huge masses of limestone, the visitor is ready to conclude that his cavernous expedition is at an end; he is then conducted through a small aperture in the rock, and proceeding about 60 feet enters the Variegated Cavern, which is seen to great advantage by a Bengal light, with which the guide is always provided. This cavern, for the rich variety of its crystallizations, singular variegations, and great height, will amply repay the curious by a visit. Below appears a terrific gulph. Visitors are seldom conducted beyond this cavern, although it has been explored much further; and should the intrepid stranger be desirous, the guide will conduct him on a difficult passage to the distance of 450 feet, where there is a cavern which surpasses all the others in extent.

Odin Mine.—At the foot of Tray Cliff, which forms the western boundary of this dale, extending 3 miles W. by N. from Castleton, is the ancient lead mine called Odin, after the chief Saxon deity. The road into this mine is a level, worked horizontally for more than a mile. The lead ore produced here yields more than three ounces of silver to the ton; but it differs much in various parts of the workings. This mine also produces fine calcareous crystallizations, blend, barytes, crystallized fluor, manganese, sulphate of iron, &c. Robt. How Ashton, and Co., are the owners.

The Bradwell Cavern, to which Mr. Micah Hall is guide, with Eldon Hole, in Peak Forest, Chee Tor, and the Ebbing and Flowing Well, usually shewn from Castleton, will be fully noticed in their respective places.

CHARITIES.—James Whittingham, of Manchester, by will, 1792, after various legacies to be paid, directed £100 to be paid on trust, to be placed in good security, to apply the interest for the instruction of 12 boys and girls, and also £100 towards the paying for a place of worship for the Methodists. Of this nothing has been received. George Heap, took possession, about 1811, of the real and personal estate, the latter having been sworn under £300. We are informed some of the legacies have not been paid to the different branches of the testator's family, and nothing in respect of charitable uses.

Edward Bennett, by will, 1720, gave the rents of his farm at Castleton as follows,—viz., 40s. a year to be distributed amongst the needful poor of the hamlet of Castleton, and the remainder of the rent to bring up and maintain three poor children with schooling till the age of 14 years. The premises consist of a close called the Furlong, and three parcels of land, altogether 3A. 2R. 13P., let for £8 6s. per annum, of which £2 is paid to the churchwarden and overseer shortly before Chrsitmas, and by them distributed to the poor. The residue is paid to a schoolmaster.

Richard Bagshaw, in 1749, devised the house and garden in Castleton, then used as a schoolhouse, also certain lands in Edale, being of the yearly value of £6, to his sons, Richard, William, and John Bagshaw, their heirs, on trust, to pay the rents and profits to a schoolmaster, for teaching 12 poor children of Castleton to read and write. The school premises consist of a dwelling-house and a small garden, with a building for a school room, and apartments as above. The residue of the lands mentioned consists of 65 acres of old enclosure in Edale, let for £16 per annum, from which the tenant receives an allowance of £2 a year for lime. The land is stated to be of indifferent quality and in a bad situation.

Potts' Gift.—Two small houses in Castleton are supposed to have been given by a person named Potts, towards the support of the school. The master is appointed by Sir William Bagshawe, and receives the several rents. No children have been appointed to be taught free in respect of the gift of Edward Bennett; 12 are taught free for Bagshaw's gift; and for Pott's three. Besides these, the master usually has a few for whom he makes no charge. The whole are instructed in reading, writing, and accounts.

Alice Stavcley, in 1781, gave to the poor of Castleton £5, to be put into the hands of the overseers of the poor, who should pay the full interest thereof to such poor as had no weekly pay.

Mark Stavely, in 1785, gave to the overseers the sum of £5, to be placed at interest, and given as the above.

Thomas Dakin, in 1706, gave £5 to the poor; in the hands of the overseers. These several sums have been many years ago carried to the account of the township; and the sum of 15s. is paid yearly out of poor rates as the interest, which, with the other charities above-named, is distributed on St. Thomas's day amongst poor persons not receiving relief, in sums varying from 2s. to 5s.

Robert Howe, in 1818, gave to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of Castleton £40 on trust, to be placed on good security; the interest to the ringers, and to the poor annually. This sum was, by the legacy duty, reduced to £36, now in the hands of Robert How Ashton, Esq., at five per cent. of which 18s. is paid to the overseer, which is distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Champion Bray, of Hope, who died in 1825, gave by his will £100, secured upon the turnpike from Sheffield to Chapel-en-le-Frith, the interest to be distributed as follows:—viz., to each of the townships of Castleton and Hope, the interest of £40; and to the township of Edale, £20.

Samuel Needham, of Rushop Edge, by deed enrolled, charged a close called South Edge, in Chinley and in Kemshill, in Peak Forest, with the payment of the following sums annually:—to the poor of Peak Forest, £6; of Castleton, £6; of Chapel-en-le-Frith, £2; and for playing of harpsichord in Peak Forest Church, £14; but we have not found the deed. The owner of the premises lays out £6 in the purchase of linen, which is distributed on the 16th of February, amongst poor persons not receiving parochial relief.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—£5 10s. is received by the vicar and disposed of in the purchase of flannel, which he distributes about Christmas to the poor of this township.

EDALE is an extensive township and chapelry, in a beautiful dale 3½ miles N.N.W. from Castleton, 6 miles N.E. by N. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, consists of the scattered houses and hamlets of Nether Booth, Oller Brook, Grinds Brook, Barber Booth, and Upper Booth, and contains 7080 acres of land, with 55 acres of roads and waste, 28 acres of river course, and had in 1851, 94 houses and 466 inhabitants, of whom 229 were males and 237 females; rateable value £2420. Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and owner of 1400 acres; Lord Scarsdale, F. B. Champion, Esq., Rev. John Champion, Rev. Hy. Clark, Robt. Creswell, Esq,, Mr. Lorenzo Christie, and Mr. John Shirt are also owners. The Chapel, dedicated to Holy Trinity, is situate at Grinds Brook. The living, a perpetual curacy of the value of £126, endowed with £8 per annum, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, and £400 Queen Anne's bounty; patronage vested in the freeholders of Edale, Rev. George Henry Spurrier, B.A., incumbent. The tithes were commuted in 1841, from which the Rev. Wm. Bagshawe, as lessee for the impropriate receives £50, and the vicar of Castleton, £28 10s.; here is a small parsonage house. The Chapel, originally erected in 1633, and rebuilt in 1812, is a plain substantial structure, and has a day and Sunday school in connection with it. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small chapel. In a pleasant part of the dale, Lorenzo Christie has a manufactory for doubling cotton, worked by steam and water power of 27 horses. Rev. Wm. Bagshawe, the Apostle of the Peak, ejected from the vicarage of Glossop, established a dissenting meeting here. The river Edale rises from Edale rocks and the south side of Kinder Scout, with other branches from the east side of it, and passing Hope, has its confluence with the river Noe, which runs from Castleton; after which at Mytham Bridge, 2 miles S., they unite with the Derwent.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Robert Turie, in 1720, gave to the inhabitants of Edale, a rent charge of 40s. yearly, issuing out of his farm at Jack End, in the parish of Hope; therewith to have six of the poorest children of Edale taught to read English, nominated by the minister of Edale, and subject to the said rent charge; he gave the said farm and lands to the corporation of Queen Anne's bounty, for the use of the minister or curate of Edale. This rent charge is paid to the schoolmaster by the incumbent.

John Ashton devised certain lands which he directed should be for ever held by the persons therein described, at the rent of £17 per annum, to the intent that his trustees should yearly, amongst other things, pay to the schoolmaster of Edale, the yearly sum of £1, for the teaching of English or grammar to such poor child or children as the curate of Edale should think fit; and having disposed of £14 per annum, out of the said rents, he directed that the residue, after the payment of all expenses, should be laid out in English bibles, prayer-books, or church catechisms, to be disposed of amongst the poorest inhabitants of the places before mentioned. The yearly sum of £4 is paid over to the incumbent, who pays £1 to the schoolmaster; and occasionally books are sent to distribute amongst the poor.

Joseph Tym, who died 5th April, 1768, gave by his will to the schoolmaster of Edale, the interest of £50 for teaching four poor children; and likewise to the poor inhabitants of Edale, the interest of £50 towards clothing poor women and children in linsey, every St. Thomas's day. The interest £4, is equally distributed as above.

Joseph Champion in 1784, gave to the minister and chapelwardens of Edale, £70 upon trust, to place the same out on real or personal security, and yearly for ever to pay one half the interest to the schoolmaster, and lay the other out in the purchase of so many penny loaves as such interest should weekly amount to; to be distributed on Sunday morning after divine service, to poor people attending, except prevented by old age or infirmity. The above sum is lent on mortgage of an estate at Little Hucklow, at 5 per cent. interest, and applied as above.

Elizabeth Bowden by indenture 1819, granted to Charles Cecil Bates and others, and their heirs, a messuage and two cottages at Whitmore-le-Booth, in Edale, and various lands, containing by estimation 6A., and other rights belonging to the said premises, and a plot of land containing $3\frac{1}{4}$ perches in the village of Grinds Brook, upon trust, to permit the said Elizabeth Bowden, and her heirs, to erect a school house on part of the said premises, for teaching poor boys and girls reading, writing, and arithmetic, and a residence for the master under the control of the said trustees; the master to reside in Edale, and be a member of the Church of England; that they should pay to the master a moiety of the clear rents, for instructing as many poor boys and girls as the trustees should calculate right at the ordinary price of teaching; and that the said trustees should pay the remaining moiety half-yearly, to the widow unmarried, (if any,) of the curate of Edale; if there is no such widow, the rents to accumulate for 21 years, the trustees to lay the same out in the public funds, the interest to be appropriated for the widows, and the original moiety paid to the schoolmaster; and she ordered the trustees to make out an account of the said charity, to be affixed on the outer door of the chapel of Edale, on the Sunday next after the feast of Sr. John the Baptist. The premises with the exception of the school and a cottage, let for £2, for which no rent has lately been paid, are let for £14 per annum; seven poor children are taught free, and there remained at our investigation, a balance of £28 6s. 3d. due to the widows' fund; £53 0s. 9d. having been expended from that fund in repairs of the farm buildings.

Nicholas Green, in 1700, left all his lands and tenements in Whitemore-le-Booth, in Edale, the yearly profits thereof to be equally divided between the poor of Edale and of Peak Forest, to be distributed among them every St. Thomas's day. The property is called Bowden Fields, containing 5A. without any buildings thereon, and is now let for £5 per annum; the trustees distribute their part at the chapel in Edale, to poor persons, and the other moiety is sent for distribution to Peak Forest.

Ellen How, in 1702, gave the sum of 40s. per annum, charged upon a parcel of land called Little Cow Hay, in Crowden-le-Booth, in Edale, one moiety thereof to be paid to the preaching minister of Edale, and the other to the poor of Edale, every St. Thomas's day. The owner of Little Cow Hay, pays the 40s. and one moiety is distributed to the poor as above.

Thomas Cresswell, in 1705, gave the sums of 10s. yearly, to the preaching minister of Edale, and 10s. yearly to the poor of Edale, to be paid on St. Thomas's day.

Thomas Hall, by will, gave a rent charge of 20s. issuing out of a piece of land called John Tymlorn; this is paid by the owner, and is distributed on Good Friday and St. Thomas's day.

Robert Pursglove, in 1700, gave the sum of £20 to Nicholas Cresswell and two others, the interest to be distributed by them to the poor of Edale, on St. Thomas's day.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The yearly sum of £5 10s. is received by the incumbent of Edale, which is laid out in flannel or coarse cloth, and distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

Champion Bray's Charity.—(See Castleton).

Wm. Belfitt & Richard Cooper, Grind's Brook, Thur. night

CHAPEL-EN-LE-FRITH, is an extensive parish and ancient market town, pleasantly situated on an eminence, and embosomed in the mountains which bound the extremity of the county, 6 miles N. from Buxton, 10 miles S. from Glossop, 15 miles N. W. from Bakewell, 14 miles S.E. from Stockport, 22 miles W.S.W. from Sheffield, and 167 miles N.N.W. from London. The parish comprises 9,800 acres of land, principally arable and pasture land, and in 1851 had 711 houses, and 3,214 inhabitants, of whom 1677 were males, and 1,537 females; rateable value £9,526 2s. 2d. It contains the townships of Bowden Edge, Bradshaw Edge, and Combs Edge, the whole of which are occasionally called Bowden Chapel, and are separate townships for the highways; but for every other purpose are united. It has no township of its own name, the town being principally in Bradshaw Edge. The Duke of Devonshire is lessee of the manor under the crown, and the principal owners are John Slack, Esq., Thomas Slacke, Esq., M.D., H. M. Greaves, Esq., P. Arkwright, Esq., W. B. Greaves, Esq., Guy Gisborne, Esq., Adam Fox, Esq., J. S. Partington, Esq., Joseph Marriott, Esq., H. Bowles, Esq., A. B. Jackson, Esq., Edward Buckley, Esq., Samuel Webster, Esq., Mr. John Marchington, Mr. Thomas Bennett, Samuel Needham, Esq., Miss Jane Wood, Mrs. Jane Kirk, Richard Broom, Esq., besides several other small freeholders. Here is 74A. 3R. 5P. of glebe. Tithes have all been commuted; the incumbent's portion being £14 6s. 8d. per annum. The Church, dedicated to St. Thomas-a-Becket, is a perpetual curacy, certified at £16 16s., now £150 in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield; it has been augmented with £400 benefactions; £400 Queen Anne's bounty; and £300 Parliamentary grant. The freeholders and resident householders are patrons, and the Rev. George Hall, B.A., incumbent. The Church is a neat stone edifice, in the later style of English architecture, with a square embattled tower, in which are 6 bells. The tower with the south front, were re-built by the parishioners early in the last century; it was also repewed by the parishioners in 1828, at a cost of £500, and in 1856 a good clock was presented by J. Slack, Esq., which were placed in the tower with two dials, at the expense of the parishioners, the whole amounting to a cost of £200. The parsonage house is a handsome stone residence, erected in 1849, a little W. of the church. A chapel was originally built here by the inhabitants, and consecrated by Bishop Savensby, between the years 1224 and 1238. By a record of the year 1317, it was then deemed a parish church. In the year 1719, Thomas Bagshaw, Esq., gave lands then let for £20 per annum, (now £62,) to the minister of Chapel-en-le-Frith. The market which was held on Thursday, is now obsolete; but here are ten fairs, viz.—Thursday before February 14th; March 3rd and 22th; Thursday before Easter; April 30th, Holy Thursday, and the third Thursday after, for cattle; July 7th for Wool; Thursday after October 11th, and Thursday before November 23rd for cattle. The Feast, Sunday after July 7th. A Savings' bank was established 19th November, 1840, and is held at the New Town Hall, and the deposits amounted 20th November, 1855, to £23,645 6s. 2d., belonging to 682 depositors, of whom 481 did not exceed £20, 40 did not exceed £50, 75 not exceeding £100, 4 not exceeding £150, and 14 above £150; with 18 Friendly societies, and 8 charitable societies. During the year, £6,146 14s. had been deposited. Actuary,—Rev. E. Glossop.

The Town Hall, in Market street, is a large handsome stone building, erected in 1851, at a cost of upwards of £2000, the cost being defrayed by Thomas Slacke, Esq., M.D.

The County Court is held at the Town Hall, and the district comprises the following places, viz.—Aston, Bamford, Buxton, Bugsworth, Chinley, Castleton, Derwent, Disley, Edale, Fairfield, Fernilee, Hartington Upper Quarter, Hope, Hope Woodlands, Ketlesholme, New Mills, Peak Forest, Texal, Thornhill, Whaley and Wormhill; J. T. Cantrell, Esq., Judge; P. Hubbersty, Esq., (of Wirksworth,) and Wm. Bennett, Esq., registrars; Mr. William Marsh, high bailiff; and Mr. William, Crossland, assistant bailiff.

Petty Sessions are held at the Town Hall, every month, but the magistrates meet weekly for the transaction of business. The division for magistracy business comprises the whole of the Chapel-en-le-Frith union, and also Bradwell, Hayfield, Beard, Ollerset, Whitle and Thornsett. The resident magistrates are John White, Esq., Thomas Slacke, Esq., John Slack, Esq., and H. M. Greaves, Esq.; Messrs. Bennett & Cheek, clerks.

A Court Leet is held annually in October before Joseph Hall, Esq., of Castleton, at the King's Arms and Royal Oak Inns, alternately.

A Lock-up Prison, was erected at the cost of £550, in 1845, defrayed from the county rate. It contains four cells, and has a residence for the superintendent, Mr. Elijah Beacroft.

The Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, at Chapel Town End, erected 1831, is a good substantial building, will seat about 400. In 1853, a Sunday School was erected by the Wesleyans, at a cost of £558, which will accommodate about 450. The Primitive Methodist (Bethel) Chapel, erected in 1852, at a cost of £700, is a handsome stone building and will seat about 400. The Presbyterians formerly had a chapel here.

A Subscription Library was established in 1843, and is held at Mr. Wm. Carrington's. National Schools, for boys, girls, and infants, is a handsome stone building, erected by subscription in 1839, at the cost of £1200, to which the Rev. W. Bagshawe, M.A., was a liberal contributor. In 1853, the boys school was enlarged at a cost of £100, defrayed by subscription, about 230 children attend. The Mechanics' Institution established 1853, is held at the Town Hall. The Library contains 200 volumes, Mr. Peter Bramwell, secretary, and Mr. W. Lingard, librarian. In the Market place is an ancient stone cross, which is ascended by a flight of four steps. The town is supplied with gas from Messrs. Bennetts' cotton factory. The Excise Office is held at the King's Arms Hotel. Here are several Lodges of Ancient Foresters and Odd Fellows.

William Bagshaw, an eminent nonconformist divine, known by the name of the Apostle of the Peak, resided at Ford, in this parish; he published a work called the "De Spiritualibus Pecci," being notices concerning the work of God, and some of those who have been workers together with God, in the hundred of the High Peak, 1702. The Rev. John Ashe, a dissenting minister of some note, nephew of William Bagshaw, and born at Matcalf, in this parish, published an account of his uncle, with his funeral sermon, 1704.

£1 5s., one-third of the £4 2s. received as interest, and the sum of £2 17s., the residue thereof to be distributed amongst the poor of the parish; and they further awarded that the minister of the said parish should yearly, on St. Thomas's day, read prayers, and preach a sermon in commemoration of the donor's death. Of the sum of £82, a part appears to have been lost about 1786, reducing it to £67, afterwards secured on mortgage, which, in 1825, was paid off. Of the yearly sum, £3, the minister still receives £1 5s., and the residue is laid out in woollen cloth and linsey, and distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Samuel Wood, by will 1763, gave to the Rev. John Byron and Edw. Bennet, £200, upon trust, that they and their executors should place the same out on the best security; and should lay out one-fourth part of the interest thereof in wheaten bread, and distribute the same on each Sunday of the year by equal proportions, in the parish church of Chapel-en-le-Frith, amongst poor widows and poor fatherless children not receiving weekly pay; and that they should lay out one-fourth in wheaten bread, to be distributed in the Protestant Dissenting chapel, called Chinley Chapel, as above, and one other fourth to the minister of Chinley chapel, for permitting six poor widows to sit on the north side of the chapel, seat-free; and that they should lay out the remaining one-fourth part in woollen cloth, and distribute the same for ever, to poor belonging to the hamlet of Bowden Edge. The £200 was secured by the trustees on the tolls of the turnpike road from Nottingham to Newhaven. The interest has been paid irregularly; in some years nothing has been received, and in others, sums of £8, £9, £10, or £12, on account; but it is understood that the amount of one year's interest at five per cent. will be in future paid, and will be distributed agreeable to the donor's will.

Thomas Hibbert, who died in 1676, gave £60, the interest thereof, being £3, to be applied annually for the purpose of binding a poor child a parish apprentice, and to be paid to the overseers of the poor of the townships of Fernilee, Taxall, Coombs Edge, and Whaley, in rotation; and he charged "the said annual rent charge of £3," upon his estate at Folds, in the township of Fernilee. The tenant of the estate pays the sum of £3 to the overseers of this township every fourth year, and is applied with other charities for placing out apprentices.

Henry Kirk, by will, 1703, gave to his nephews Thomas Kirk and Henry Kirk, all his personal estate, and devised to them and their heirs, his capital messuage at Eaves in this parish, with the land and closes thereto belonging, upon condition, that in respect thereof, they should pay the sum of £100 on trust, for the placing forth two of the poorest male children of the parish, yearly, apprentices in husbandry, or other manual occupations. The owner of the estate called Eaves, pays £5 per annum to the overseers when required, for the purposes of the apprentices' fund.

John Frith, by his will, 1775, gave to Peter Steel, and two others, the sum of £125 upon trust, that they or their survivor of them should apply one half of the clear interest in putting out one of the poorest boys belonging to the parish, an apprentice, and the remaining part thereof, in woollen cloth, to be yearly for ever given to the poor of the parish, on St. Thomas's day. One moiety of the interest is applied in clothing for the poor; and the other moiety has been paid when called for. From £2 10s. to £5 has been paid as premiums with the boys.

Mary Frost, by a codicil to her will, 1755, bequeathed to four persons £200 upon trust that they should place the same out on the best security, and apply one moiety of the interest in binding one or more boys apprentices, of the poorest inhabitants of the hamlet of Sheldon, and the other moiety for binding one or more boys of Chapel-en-le-Frith parish.

In the Parliamentary returns of 1786, it is stated that the sum of £100 given by Mary Frost to this parish, was then vested in Samuel Frith, Esq.; and on a tablet in the church, it is stated that the sum of £100 was laid out on a mortgage of land at Waterfall, in the parish of Alstonefield, Staffordshire. We have applied to Mr. Firth, but can obtain no information whatever on the subject, or discover any evidence of payment in respect of this charity.

John Badiley Radcliffe, by will, 1784, reciting that he was entitled to the sum of £847, on bond, which was promised to be paid on the 24th June, then next; directed that the sum of £350 part thereof, should be paid to his father Thomas Radcliffe and another, their executors in trust, to place the same out at interest on land security, and apply the sum of £10 13s. 4d. part of the interest, for the benefit of the poor of Peak Forest, the poor of the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith, the poor of Great Hamlet, Phoside and Kinder, and the poor of Beard, Ollerset, Whittle, and Thornset, in the parish of Glossop; and which he left as a satisfaction for his part of the charity mentioned to be charged on the property given to him by the will of Sarah Bower, deceased, and he directed that the remainder of the interest should be for the benefit of the poor of Beard, Ollerset, Whitle, and Thornset. The charity of Sarah Bower was void by the statute of 9th George II.

The sum of £350 is secured on certain houses in the township of New Mills, and in Whittle, in the parish of Glossop, and was secured by indentures dated 24th and 25th May, 1823, at 4½ per cent. On St. Thomas's day the receiver of these sums goes to Peak Forest, and from thence to Chapel-en-le-Frith, and to the chapelry of Hayfield, which comprises Great Hamlet, Phoside and Kinder, at each place meets the overseers, and according to their recommendations, at each place distributes the above named sum of £2 13s. 4d. On the 2nd Wednesday in January he goes to New Mills, and distributes the residue of the interest in that township, which comprises Beard, Ollerset, Whittle, and Thornset.

Elizabeth Scholes, by will, 1734, directed that a sum of £52 should be by her executors put out, and the interest paid to the churchwardens of Chapel-en-le-Frith for the time being, and laid out in buying twelve loaves, weekly, to be distributed every Sunday immediately after Morning service in the Church, to poor housekeepers or poor children. The yearly sum of 50s. is transmitted to the churchwardens, who provide therewith six twopenny loaves on fifty Sundays in the course of the year.

Needham's Charity—(See Castleton.)—£2 to which this parish is entitled, is laid out in the purchase of linen cloth. This is sent to the incumbent, and distributed about the 14th of February, amongst the poor.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—£5 10s. received in respect of this charity is laid out by the minister in the purchase of flannel or woollen cloth, and distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

Dorothy Suite, as stated on a tablet in the Church, died 1670, and left £20, the interest to be given to charitable and pious uses. We have not been able to obtain any information respecting this gift.

Rev. Wm. Bagshaw left £20 per annum, for the benefit of the National school, which is paid by the incumbent. He also left £40 per annum to the Chapel-en-le-Frith Auxiliary Bible society, to be paid by the treasurer.

Post Office at Wm. Carrington's, letters arrive from Stockport by mail, (gig) at 8.30 a.m., and despatched at 6 p.m.; Money Orders granted and paid from 9 am. till 5.30 p.m., and on Saturdays till 8 p.m.

CHARITIES.—Mary Dixon, by will, 1696, devised to Henry Kirk and three others and their heirs, a messuage with lands thereto, at Horderon, in Chapel-en-le-Frith parish, (which were devised to her by her late husband, Edward Hudson, subject to the payment of a rent charge of 20s., to be distributed on St. Thomas's day,) upon trust, that they should apply the clear rents of the said premises, the above-mentioned rent charge being first deducted, viz., 20s. thereof amongst the poorest inhabitants of the said parish on St. Thomas's day, and the residue of the said rents to the use of a schoolmaster, to instruct the children of said parish, as well petties and incipients as grammarians, and those that should have attained to further proficiency in learning. The property is called Lee Field, and consists of a small house with outbuildings, and 17A. 1R. 20P. of arable and pasture land, besides five or six acres described as brow, wood, or clough land, and unproductive.

Robert Kirk, by will, gave Hazle Croft, the rent thereof, in case his niece, Mary Jackson, should die without issue, to be paid yearly to the schoolmaster who should teach in the school built in Cromwell Croft, on condition that he should teach three of the poorest children yearly. Mary Jackson died 29th November, 1763. The Hazle Croft contains about three-quarters of an acre, and is let for £2 10s. per annum. The school was formerly kept in a building erected by subscription, on a plot of land for which a small rent was paid, but the estate has been sold. The present master keeps the school in his own house; and in respect of the above donations, 19 children are taught reading and writing free, and are then removed, though it appears Mrs. Dixon contemplated establishing a grammar school.

John Marchington, by will, 1630, gave 20s. yearly to be paid to the parson and churchwardens of this parish, on Friday, three weeks after Ascension day, for ever, towards the education of five poor children of the parish, the same issuing forth of a messuage in Chapel-en-le-Frith. This messuage, formerly called Bradley House, on the south-west corner of the churchyard, is divided into two tenements, and is the property of George Chapel, who has since 1818, refused to pay the rent charge, on the ground that, by the deed of sale to Clarissa Ibberson, his wife, in 1809, the premises were conveyed free of incumbrance. Upon inspecting the title deeds, it appears that the charge is not noticed in that of 1809; but in all previous deeds it is expressly mentioned, and from 1809 to 1818, the payment was regularly made; and we consider that George Chapel is liable to make good the arrears now due, and pay the rent charge in future.

Mary Bagshaw, wife of William Bagshaw, of Ford, by will, 1749, directed that her trustees should pay into the hands of her husband the sum of £100, which she directed to be laid out in the purchase of lands to him and his heirs, upon trust, that the rents should be applied for the teaching of eight poor children to read, belonging to the parish.

John Frith, who died in 1782, had given the sum of £20 to the Bowden head school, now in the hands of Robert Needham, who pays 16s. yearly as the interest. The above two sums, amounting to £5, are paid to the Bowden head school, erected by subscription, about 1776, for the residence of a schoolmaster or schoolmistress. The house, with a garden adjoining, is occupied by a schoolmistress, rent free, who instructs for the above payment 14 children appointed from the neighbouring parts of the parish, to read, and the girls knitting and sewing.

William Walker, in 1625, bequeathed £40 to the poor of this parish, which was laid out in the purchase of 2A. 3R. of land, called Lesser Lane, now let for £4 per annum, and is under the management of the churchwardens and overseers, who distribute the money on St. Thomas's day, with the five following charities.

George Bowden, in 1663, left to the poor, in land, £2 per annum, which is paid as a rent charge out of a pasture field at Upper End, in the township of Wormhill, parish of Hope.

Francis Bradshaw, in 1635, left to the poor, in land, 10s per annum, which is paid as a rent charge out of Bradshaw Hall estate.

Edward Dain, in 1699, left to the poor, in land, 10s. per annum, which is paid as a rent charge from a piece of land called Broad Lee, in this parish, which was purchased by the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, for the augmentation of the curacy of Baslow.

John Vernon, who died in 1730, left 10s. a year to the poor of this parish, charged upon his estate at White Hills. The owner pays the money, which is distributed as above.

Francis Gee, by will, dated 1st October, 1670, gave to his wife Elizabeth, and her heirs, his land and housing at Roeside, in this parish, they paying thereout yearly for ever, 20s. to Thomas Gee, and two others, in trust, for charitable uses, to be disposed of on or before the 21st December, yearly.

Francie Gaskell, by will, 1718, bequeathed to the minister and poor of this parish £100, the use thereof to be paid as follows,—viz. 20s., yearly to an orthodox minister at Chapel-en-le-Frith; 40s. yearly to the poor of Bradshaw Edge; 20s. yearly to the poor of Coombe's Edge; and 20s. yearly to the poor of Bowden Edge. By an indenture dated 1722, it appears £20 was paid by Arnold Kirk and Ralph Gee, and others, trustees of the above charity, towards a house about to be erected by subscription for the minister; in consideration thereof, Thomas Shuttleworth conveyed to the said trustes a piece of land, on part whereof the said house was built for the minister, and it was provided the said house should stand a security for ever for the said legacy. The residue of the legacy, about £80, the interest thereof, is distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Thomas Barber, by will, in 1687, gave to the poor of this parish land vested in Albany Wallis, producing £2 per annum, which is paid as a rent charge out of an estate called Clough, in this parish, and the sum carried to a fund for providing woollen cloth for the poor, distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Francis Moseley, by will, 1704, gave to the use of the poor of this parish the residue of a sum of £600, and of all other his personal estate, after his debts, legacies and funeral expenses were paid, to be laid out at the discretion of his executors, German Buxton and James Carrington, and the survivor of them and his heirs, either at interest or in land, the annual produce thereof to be applied in buying convenient clothes for the oldest and more decrepid people, either male or female, within the parish. We have not been able to learn what was the amount of the residue, as applicable to the poor; however, it appears £50 and £20 were appropriated to this purpose by his executors, of which the £20 was laid out in a rent charge of 18s. issuing out of certain lands called Broken Banks, distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day. The £50 was laid out with £100, a legacy left by Mr. Mosely for the incumbent of the parish, and by indenture, 1818, three closes called Whickeside, were conveyed for £150 to trustees. The premises consist of nearly 30A. of land called Rushup Edge, let for £28 10s. yearly. Two-thirds of the rent are paid to the incumbent, and the remaining third, £9 10s. is received by the parish officers, and carried to the fund for providing the poor with woollen cloth.

Parish Land.—One acre and a half of land was enclosed from the waste by the parishioners about the year 1806; it is now let for £6 per annum, which is carried to the fund for providing woollen cloth and linsey for the poor, distributed on St. Thomas's day.

William Barber, by will, 1666, directed that one-third of his personal estate should go to his executors—viz. his wife and John Heywood; and he gave them power to dispose of the same for pious or charitable uses for this parish. It appears £82 were received as the one-third part of this bequest, which was, for several years, given to a Dissenting minister, as it was said, contrary to the donor's will. By an award, 1728, made by John Hall and four others, churchwardens and overseers, the arbiters stated that they considered the intention of the donor was, that the third part of his said goods was intended by him for the use of a Church minister that should serve the cure of the parish church, and to the use of the poor of the parish, and awarded that the parson of the parish, and his successors, should receive yearly, on St. Thomas's day, the sum of

The life and character of John Ashe was also published by the Rev. James Clegg, minister of the Presbyterian chapel, in 1736. On the extinction of the elder branch, the descendants of William Bagshaw above mentioned, became the representatives of the Bagshaw of Abney.

In the parish register, is an entry which records the preservation of one Phœnix, a girl about 13 years of age, a parish apprentice with William Ward, of Peak Forest, who on March 13th, 1716, went from George Boden's house, Laneside, towards her master's house; sat down on Peaslow, between two rutts, and staid there till the Monday following, when she was found alive about one o'clock, by William Jackson, of Sparrow Pitt, and William Longden, of Peak Forest, and after a slender refreshment of warm milk, was carried to her master's house; she eat no meat during the six days, two of which, the 15th and 16th, were the most severe for snowing and driving, in the memory of man.

At Barmoor, about 2 miles E. is an ebbing and flowing well, and on a hill 2 miles S. are the vestiges of Roman encampment, near which human remains have been found; from this place is a road to Brough.

Bowden Edge township extends from Chapel-en-le-Frith, about 3 miles N. and E., and contains 232 houses, and 977 inhabitants, of whom 534 were males, and 443 females. Bowden Hall, long the seat of the family of Bowden, who had large possessions in this and the neighbouring counties, was taken down some years ago. In 1844, John Slack, Esq., erected the present mansion on the site of the old hall, which is a handsome structure in the Tudor style, from designs by Richard Lane, Esq., of Manchester. It is delightfully situated on a bold acclivity, one mile E. from the church. The thriving plantations in the adjoining grounds adds greatly to the picturesque beauties of the scene. It commands a fine view of the vales of Chapel-en-le-Frith and Bugsworth, both of which present lovely but dissimilar features, and are divided by Eccles Pike, a conical hill of considerable elevation; the huge forms of the Chinley hills are seen in the distance, stretching their naked backs to the northern sky, and the bleak head of Coomb's Moss, upon which still rests the remains of a Romish camp, from the horizon to the south and south east. This estate passed from the Bowdens, of whom George, who died in 1680, appears to have been the last male heir, to the Degge family, of whom Sir Simon Degge, who died about 1765, was the last male heir; afterwards it was the propertyof Robert Hibberson, and is now the seat and property of John Slack, Esq.

Slack Hall, three and a quarter miles E. from the church, is a handsome mansion, erected in 1836, in a commanding elevation, the property and seat of Thomas Slacke, Esq., M. D.

Ford Hall, an ancient mansion, two miles north from the church, the seat and property of Henry H. Greaves, Esq.; it was long the residence of the Bagshaw family. The Rev. William Bagshaw, the Apostle of the Peak, resided here, and also Samuel Bagshaw, Esq., who died in 1804.

Sparrow Pit, a small village on the Castleton road, 2½ miles east from Chapel-en-le Frith, partly on Peak Forest.

Bradshaw Edge constablewick forms a principal part of the town of Chapel-en-le-Frith, and extends 3 miles west to the extremity of the county, and near to Whaley Bridge contains 399 houses, and 1,891 inhabitants, of whom 966 were males, and 925 females. The Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire Railway Co. have extensive stone quarries in this township. Bradshaw Hal, 1 mile west, formerly the property and seat of the ancient family of Bradshaw, of whom President Bradshaw was a branch. All the Derbyshire Bradshaws have descended from this place. George Bradshaw, the last of the elder branch, died in 1735; his sister and heiress married Galliard. The co-heiresses of Galliard married Smith and Bowles, and this estate became the property of Humphrey Bowles, Esq. It is now a farmhouse, in the occupation of John and George Lomas.

Cromwell House, a neat mansion, the seat of George Henry Hopkins, Esq.

Eccles House, 2 miles N.W. from the town, is the seat and property of Davenport Goodman, Esq.

Horwich House, 3 miles W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, a large handsome mansion, the seat of John Welch, Esq.

Ollerenshaw Hall, 2 miles W., is at present unoccupied.

WHITEHOUGH, a small village, 1½ miles N.W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, built in 1840, near this place, and at Whitehall is the extensive paper manufactory of Messrs. Joseph Hughes & Sons, who reside in a handsome stone mansion here, the property of the Manchester and Liverpool District Banking Co. Davenport Goodman, Esq., Joseph Barnes, and George Hollinshead, are the owners.

New Hyde Mill, near the east extremity of the town, is an extensive cotton factory, having a steam engine of 30 horses power, the property of Misses Alice, Nancy, and Sarah Ann Bennett.

Stodhart Lodge, ½ mile W. from the town, is the picturesque residence and property of John Bennett, Esq.

COOMBS EDGE township extends 3 miles S.W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, contains 80 houses, and 346 inhabitants, of whom 177 were males, and 169 females. Mr. Thomas Walton, of Tunstead, in this township, has in his possession a human skull supposed to be the head of a female, a Roman catholic. It has been at Mr. W.'s residence upwards of 200 years.

Bank Hall, a handsome stone residence, in the Italian style of architecture, 1½ miles S. of Chapel-en-le-Frith, is the seat and property of Mrs. Hannah Webster. In 1781, Samuel Frith, Esq., the owner, was sheriff of the county.

Cadster Hill, a paint and colour manufactory, 2 miles W., having a steam engine of 16 horses power, in the occupation of Mr. Charles Robe.

The Ridge, 1 mile S. from the town, formerly the seat of a branch of the Bagshaw family, passed in marriage with the daughter of the last male heir, to Fitzherbert, and by sale to the father of the Rev. Thos. Gisborne, of Yoxall, now the property of Guy Gisborne, Esq., and residence of Mr. James Lomas.

Rye Flat, a neat house, the residence of Anthony Bellott Jackson, Esq.

A Reservoir, which covers 80 acres of land, for supplying the Peak Forest Canal, is in this division.

CHAPEL-EN-LE-FRITH POOR LAW UNION consists of 17 parishes and townships, all in this county, and has 23 guardians, who meet every Monday fortnight at the Board-room, at 11 o'clock. The Union is divided into two registration districts—viz; Chapel-en-le-Frith and Buxton. The Workhouse, situated at the west end of town, is a substantial stone building, erected in 1840, at a cost of £3,500, will give accommodation to 100 paupers, the average number of in-door paupers being about 25. The district embraces an area of 106 square miles, and a population of 11,496. The annual cost of the Union is about £2,118. The places comprised in the Union are—Aston, Bamford, Brough, and Shatton, Buxton. Castleton, Chapel-en-le-Frith, Chinley, Bugsworth and Brownside, Derwent, Edale, Fairfield, Fernilee, Hartington (upper quarter), Hope, Hope Woodlands, Peak Forest, Thornhill, and Wormhill. Chairman, Thomas Drinkwater, Esq. Clerk and Superintendent Registrar, Mr. Wm. EDENSOR parish contains the townships of Edensor-with-Chatsworth, and the township of Pilsey, which together comprise 4829 acres of tithe-free land, and in 1851 had 138 houses and 685 inhabitants, of whom 340 were males and 345 female; rateable value £4049.

EDENSOR, a township and small beautiful village, 2½ miles E.N.E. from Bakewell is situated within Chatsworth Park, the entrance to which is through handsome gates, with ornamental lodges; on the north and south it is closely screened by lofty treees; to the east, the view opens upon the domains comprised within the park; and on the west it is sheltered by lofty hills. The roads are kept in the most complete repair, and every spare plot in the neatest order. Light iron rails are in some parts placed to prevent intrusion. The cottages are mostly newly built, in the Tudor, Elizabethan, and Swiss styles, of the CHARITIES.—DARLEY SCHOOL.—Anthony Taylor, as stated on a tablet in the Church, left £40 to build a school, and £60 more for teaching of poor children to read and write.

Mrs. Ann Phinney, in 1703, left £60 to the said school, for teaching poor children.

Mrs. Rebecca Bromley, it appears by a memorandum dated 11th June, 1778, gave £10, and that £5 was, with the consent of the inhabitants of Darley and Little Rowsley, paid by the churchwarden of Darley, in order that the produce of the said £15 might be applied for teaching one poor child of the above two places at the Free school of Darley. The £40 given by Anthony Taylor was expended in building a school adjoining the church. In 1809, the other small sums, amounting to £135 were, with £100, given for the poor of this parish, and £20 for the Sunday school, by the will of Mr. Thos. Garratt, and a further sum of £5, the origin of which does not appear, vested in the purchase of £260 stock, in the navy 5 per cents., in the names of the Rector of Darley, and 4 others; on the reduction of this stock from 4 to 5 per cent., the trustees became possessed of £273 new 4 per cent. stock; the dividends £10 18s. 4d. are received by the rector, who makes the following distribution,—to the schoolmaster, £6 10s. 3d.; to the poor for Garratt's charity, £4; and to the Sunday school, £1. This sum exceeds by 11s. 8d. the amount of the dividends. The school having been found too small, a subscription has been raised, to which an addition has been made by the National School Society, and new school buildings have been erected, consisting of two school rooms with apartments for the master and mistress. At our inquiry, these building were not completed. A sum of £500 was given by the Rev. Benjamin Lawrence, the late rector, as a further endowment, which was laid out on the 1st of February, 1827, in the purchase of £523 11s. 2d. new 4 per cent. stock, in the names of the said rector, and three others, and it was intended a further sum of £87 2s., arising from other donations lately given to the school, should be invested in the same stock. The National system is now introduced, and all the children of Darley, including those of Wensley and Snitterton, admitted; and the Day and Sunday schools united under the same master and mistress.

Thomas Garratt, of Hornsey, in the county of Middlesex, Esq., by will dated 23rd June, 1791, gave the rector and churchwardens of Darley, and their successors, £100 on trust, to invest the same in government securities; and on St. Thomas's day in every year for ever, to distribute the dividends amongst 20 poor housekeepers; and he also gave to the trustees of the Sunday school at Darley, £20, to the use of that school. The distributions to the poor are confined to persons not receiving parish relief, in sums varying from 3s. to 5s.

Rev. Frances Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the rector, and laid out in coarse woollen and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

WENSLEY AND SNITTERTON, form a joint township, situated in the Wirksworth Hundred, and together contain 2004A. 3R. 27P. of land, and in 1851 had 135 houses, and 557 inhabitants, of whom 287 were males, and 270 females; rateable value, £2586 15s. 4d. Peter Arkwright, Esq., Andrew Brittlebank, Esq., John Else, Esq., W. E. Nightingale, Esq., Henry Southern, Esq., the Misses Southern, Mr. Wm. Frost, and the Chesterfield Corporation, are the principal owners; the former in lord of the manor. The soil is mostly on limestone. Tithe, to the amount of £75, is paid by agreement. The district abounds in lead, and several mines are worked, the principal of which are the Bird Nest, Windmill, and Mill Close, from which there is a level for carrying the water to the Derwent. About 535 load is got per annum, from which no tithe is paid, but every 25th part goes to the lessees of the King's Field, and 6d. per load is paid for lot and cope. John Alsop, Esq. is bar-master.

WENSLEY, a considerable, but irregular-built village, on a lofty eminence above the Derwent, commanding some extensive views, 1½ miles E. by N. from Winster, and 1½ miles S.S.W. from Darley. The Methodists have a chapel, built of stone, in 1830; will seat 150. The Wesleyan Reformers have also a neat brick chapel on Oker side, erected by subscription, in 1854, at a cost of £130; will seat about 90.

SNITTERTON, said formerly to have been called Snipetown, from the quantity of snipes frequenting this part. It is a district of scattered houses on a lofty range of hills. The Hall, a handsome ancient stone mansion, with pointed gables, in a valley 1¼ miles N.W. from Matlock, is the seat of Robt. Sybray, Esq., and the property of John Else, Esq. Lea Wood, a good farm house, near the hall, was erected in 1843, by Mr. John Garton, and is occupied by Mr. Wm. Yeoman. Cowley Hall, half a mile S. from Darley, is a neat and good residence, in the occupation of Mr. Clement Sarby.

At Cross Green, a commanding eminence, a district Church, dedicated to St. Mary, has been erected to accommodate 226 persons, of which only 12 seats are appropriated. The Rev. Benj. Lawrence, (late rector of Darley,) who died Feb. 18th, 1838, left £1,000 towards building this church, on the condition, that it was commenced within two years after his decease. The late rector soon obtained subscriptions amounting to £1,400, including £150 from the Lichfield Diocesan Church Building Society; and the first stone was laid 17th February, 1840, by Peter Walthall, Esq., and it was consecrated 19th June, 1845. It is a perpetual curacy, value, £60; the Rector of Darley, patron, the Rev. William Belcher, incumbent. It is a neat stone structure in the Norman style, with a tower, spire, and one bell, said to be a copy of a church at Troyes, in Normandy.

Oker Hill, a lofty eminence, said to have been a Roman station. Rents derived from it are, by Act of Parliament, applied to the poor rate. Various reasons are assigned for the name Oker; the most propable appears to be, that the Britons were driven from the lead mines in this district, with great slaughter, by the Romans, who afterwards erected a station here, called it Occursus or the hill of conflict, since Occuror or Oker hill. At Oker hill are two sycamore trees, said to have been planted by two brothers, conditionally that they should part for ever after these trees were planted; tradition states that this was the case and each taking a different direction, never met again.

CHARITIES.—Ann Phinney, by will, gave to six poor widows, the sum of £200, to build them a house to live in; and made her nephew Henry Fanshaw, her sole executor, who, by deed, dated 28th March, 1721, purchased of Thomas Bagshaw, Esq., four cottages for £68 15s.; and two others from John Wall, for £27, to make six houses for poor widows. £14 was expended in fitting up the said six houses with garden walls, &c., so that the sum of £90 5s. remainded of the said £200 to be laid out in land, in the names of trustees for the purposes aforesaid. Thomas Southeran, as surviving trustee, conveyed the above houses to five other trustees, of whom John Allsop is the survivor. This charity is in its present state, productive of very little advantage; the houses are very small and inconveniently situated, and one of them about 1796, was thrown down by the bursting of the dam of a mine; the proprietors of the mine re-built the walls and the roof of the house, but laid no floors; it is cousidered that if part of a balance of £42 11s. 4d. in the hands of Mr. Allsop, was applied in altering the houses, and adapting them for three poor widows, it would be more useful, and what might remain of that balance added to the sum of £90 5s., which was in 1793, lent to Thomas Gregory, on mortgage of Butt's Close, in Darley, at 5 per cent, amounting to £4 10s. 3d. Mr. Gregory not having paid the interest, the property was sold.

Godfrey Hayward, of Wensley, by indenture dated 22nd June, 1732, in compliance with the request of Sarah his deceased wife, granted to Joseph Hayne, overseer of the poor of the hamlets of Wensley and Snitterton, and his successors, a clear yearly rent-charge of 20s., to be issuing out of two messuages situate at Broad Stones, in Wensley, with a DARLEY, OR DARLEIGH, parish contains the township of Darley, principally in the High Peak Hundred, and the township of Wensley-with-Snitterton, in Wirksworth Hundred, which together contain 7004 acres of fertile land (including plantations, &c.). with a portion of limestone and light soil, mostly occupied in dairy farms, and had in 1851, 433 houses, and 1932 inhabitants, of whom 984 were males, and 948 females; rateable value, £6,118.

DARLEY, a pleasant rural village and township, usually called Church Town, is three miles N.W. from Matlock, to the south-west of which is Bridge Town, on the banks of the river Derwent, which is crossed by a good stone bridge of 5 arches. The river divides the two townships and the village of Bridge Town, the western side being in Wensley and Snitterton. It contains 4,999A. 0R. 13P. of land, and in 1851 had 298 houses, 1,375 inhabitants, of whom 697 were males, and 768 females; rateable value, £3,601 4s. 8d. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and the principal owners are, Jph. Whitworth Esq., Mrs. Eliz. Potter, Mrs. Mary Potter, James Dakeyne, Esq., James Milnes, Esq., R. B. Barrow, Esq., Rev. D. Vawdrey, Mrs. Mary Goodwin, and Miss E. J. Barker, besides several other small freeholders. The Church, which is dedicated to St. Helen, is a rectory, valued in the King's book at at £9 13s. 1½d., now £434, formerly in the north and south medieties, which were united in 1690. Bishop of Lichfield, patron, Rev. Daniel Vawdrey, M.A., incumbent. The church is an ancient Norman cruciform structure, and as seen through the trees, has a very rural appearance. It contains nave, chancel, and transepts with a handsome pinnacled tower and five bells. In 1854, it was thoroughly restored, at a cost of £1,600, raised by subscription, when it was new pewed and had a porch and chancel added. In the north aisle stands the pulpit, a handsomely carved stone one, presented at the restoration by P. Walthall, Esq. It contains two handsome stained glass windows, one of which is a memorial to Emma V. Milnes. Several specimens of the coffin-shaped slabs, a very perfect one of later date is built in the wall of the porch, has a bugle-horn suspended from the shaft of the cross with which it is decorated; underneath the horn are some slight traces of an animal, but not sufficiently distinct to be figured. Against a window in the south transept inthe church, is a recumbent figure, carved in sandstone, representing a Knight, wtih curly hair and beard, sword by his side, holding in his hands a heart, and having a rose at his feet; the legs are crossed in the same manner as in effigies supposed to represent Crusaders. It is supposed he is John, of Darley, who resided in this neighbourhood. Here are several antique monuments to the Rollesley and other ancient families; and a marble tablet to Thos. Garratt, of London, who gave to this church its communion plate, and was a great benefactor to the poor of Darley and Matlock. In the interior of the south side of the church is a chantry, or confessionary, which was founded in the reign of Henry I., or Stephen. An ancient stone font also stands in the south aisle. The Rectory, near the church, is a neat stone residence, rebuilt in 1850, and has 126 acres of glebe. The tithes were commuted in 1838, for £253. In the churchyard is an ancient yew tree, 33 feet in circumference, now in course of decay, supposed to be about 2,020 years of age. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each chapels here. Here is a National school, where about 150 children receive instruction, for which they pay a small trifle weekly. Darley Dale, a district containing several scattered houses, situated on the road from Bakewell to Matlock. Two Dales, or Toad Hole, a pleasant, secluded village, on the Chesterfield road, 1 mile S.E. from Darley. Sydnope forms the eastern extremity, where an extensive flax mill was erected by Jas. Dakeyne, Esq., in 1826, and is now worked by a water power of about 60 horses, and gives employment to a large portion of the population. Farley, Hackney Lane, and Over Hackney, 1½ miles S. consist of scattered houses. Tinkersley and Little Rowsley, extend 2½ miles to the north. Darley Flash forms the north-east extremity. Stancliff, an excllent quarry of gritstone, the property of Jph. Whitworth, Esq. Four lions, weighing 5 tons 10 cwt., were sculptured from stone got at this quarry, by Wm. G. Nicholl, at a cost of £600, they are placed at the two front entrances of St. George's Hall, Liverpool, on an elevation of 16 feet from the level. The Hall itself was built with stone got at this quarry. The farm, occupied by Mr. John Wall, of Fallinge, has been in the occupation of their family for upwards of 600 years. Darley Hall, ½ mile N.E., is a neat stone residence, the seat and property of Mrs. Mary Potter. The Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock Branch of the Midland Railway passes through this parish and has a small station here, and also one at Little Rowsley. The Odd Fellows have a lodge here, held at the Square and Compass Inn. Fairs, May 13th and October 27th, were formerly held on the moors at Darley Flash, for cattle and sheep, but are now disused. Feast held the 4th Sunday in August, when subscriptions are made to augment the Charity School endowment.

greatest diversity of architectural proportions, no two being exactly alike. The well arranged gardens attached, give an additional charm to this interesting village of rural beauty; every thing tends to show his Grace's taste, good feeling, and liberal disposition towards those in humble circumstances. The township contains 2255A. 3R. 25P. of land, and in 1851 had 60 houses and 346 inhabitants, of whom 160 were males and 186 females; rateable value £2598 2s. 6d. His Grace the Duke of Devonshire is sole owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is situated in the centre of the village on elevated ground, and is approached by a flight of steps. It is a venerable stone edifice, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and square tower containing 4 bells. It was given at an early period by Fulcher, ancester of the Shirleys, to the monastery of Rochester, in Staffordshire. In the chancel is a very elegant monument to the first Earl of Devonshire, which is composed of several figures the size of life, sculptured in relief, and of the most elaborate workmanship. A table monument has two recumbent figures, one clothed in the dress of the times, the other representing a skeleton. "There is something," says Mr. Rhodes, "strikingly impressive in this representation of a man who appears to have just passed from time into eternity, with all the habiliments of life about him, and the bare ribbed image of Death, which lies at his side, awfully intimating the transition that must soon be made. The sculptor has here bodied forth a lesson of mortality which is extremely simple, yet full of pathos and instruction." The following is a monumental inscription to Henry, son of Wm. Cavendish, Knt.: "Sacred to the memory of Henry, eldest son of Wm. Cavendish, Knt., of Chatsworth, in the county of Derby; and of the much celebrated Elizabeth Hardwick, of Hardwick, in the same county, who afterwards married her fourth husband, George, sixth Earl of Shrewsbury. He was a strenuous and brave man, and particularly distinguished himself among the English volunteer commanders, in the campaign of the Netherlands, in the year 1578, in which he displayed perseverance, skill, diligence, activity, and fortitude. When, however, his military engagements gave place to the enjoyment of ease, he indulged in the liberal and sumptuous use of his fortune, in such a manner as to retain the character of splendour and festivity and avoid the reproach of luxurious indolence. Having deposited within these walls, in this county, his arms and his mortal remains,—his body lies here awaiting, instead of the clarion of fame, the trumpet of the resurrection. He died the 12th day of Oct., 1616." Another monumental inscription remembers William Cavendish, the second son of the same parents, who also here put off his earthly dress. "He was a man born to fill every honourable station, and, in the simplicity of his virtue, deserving, rather than courting glory; whom, when James I. of blessed memory, King of Great Britain, had honoured, first with the titles of Baron Hardwick, and afterwards Earl of Devonshire, he appeared not so much to do honour to the man as to the title. He was laborious and faithful to the highest degree. Whilst most active he seemed to be doing nothing, and succeeded in everything, while to himself he arrogated nothing. As he has left it in charge to be buried without pomp or parade, his son has erected this monument with greater affection than expense. He died at Hardwick, on the 3rd March, 1625, and was buried at Edensor, to whom the costly and splendid monument before mentioned, was erected by William, second Earl of Devonshire." There are several other monuments and tablets, particularly one, with a Latin inscription engraved on a handsome brass plate, to the memory of "John Beton, of Scotland, son of that illustrious and very excellent man, John Beton, of Anthmuty, grandson of the celebrated Cardinal of the Church of Rome, great grandson of James Beton, the Right Rev. Archbishop of St. Andrews, and Lord High Chancellor of the kingdom of Scotland, &c. He was a faithful and confidential servant of the unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scots. He died of a dysentery in the year 1570, aged 32 years 7 months. His brothers, James, the Right Rev. Archbishop of Glasgow, and Andrew Beton, Comptroller of the Household, placed this perpetual remembrance of the event, by the wish and command of the Queen his most kind mistress." The living formerly a vicarage, valued in the King's books at £4 13s. 4. is now a donative, returned at £300, in the patronage of the Duke of Devonshire and incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Hall, M.A., who is also chaplain to his Grace. The vicarage is a handsome stone mansion, a little south from the Church. Here is an excellent school established in 1734; the old school was taken down and rebuilt about 20 years ago, in a style to correspond with the other buildings; it is supported entirely by the Duke of Devonshire. The average attendance is 30 boys, 26 girls, and 23 infants. At the western entrance to the park, adjoining the road from Bakewell and Baslow, stands Edensor Inn, Family Hotel and Posting-house. It is a stone building with a handsome portico, pleasantly situated at a short distance from the Church, and was erected by the late Duke of Devonshire for the accommodation of tourists, and kept by Mr. William Jepson, who enjoys the right of fishing in the Derwent from Baslow to Rowsley. Omnibusses, flys, &c., are kept in constant readiness, and the house is fitted up with excellent accommodation, including a public Coffee-room for ladies and gentlemen, and is distant 4 miles from Bakewell, 16 from Castleton, 20 from Ashbourn, 14 from Sheffield, 10 from Chesterfield, and 10 from Matlock.

Calton Lees and Calton Houses form a small retired hamlet, about 1 mile south-east from the village. The manor of Edensor was, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, the joint property of Lovenot and Chetel; when the survey of Domesday was taken, it belonged to Henry de Ferrers. The mense seniority was for several generations vested in the Shirley family. Afterwards it was in the Foljambes, whose heiress brought Edensor to Sir Robert Plumpton. Sir William Plumpton, grandson to Sir Robert, died seized of it in 1480. His daughters and co-heirs married Sotehill and Rocliffe. A moiety of this manor passed by marriage to the Cliffords, and was sold by Geo. Clifford, Earl of Cumberland, to the Countess of Shrewsbury. Sir Ralph Langford, who it is probable purchased of the Sotehills or their heirs, died seized of the other moiety in 1513.

Charities.—John Hacket left £20 to the poor, the interest to be distributed annually.

John Phillips founded a school at Edensor, and left by his will, bearing date 3rd March, 1734, £100 to the poor, and £50 to the schoolmaster. These sums were laid out in the purchase of two cottages, a small croft, and three fields, the whole containing 6a., situate at Beeley, and an allotment of common land of nearly 6a. was awarded in respect of the premises under the Inclosure Act, now producing about £16 16s. per annum. The school was to be open for the instruction of the poor children of Edensor, Pilsley, and Beeley. A third of the rent forms part of the salary of the schoolmaster of Edensor, to which the Duke of Devonshire makes a voluntary contribution of £30 per annum. Each housekeeper of the township of Edensor is allowed to send his or her children.

Christiana, Countess of Devonshire, by her will, bearing date 2nd August, 1674, left £420 to be laid out in lands, the interest to be appropriated for the binding out as apprentices yearly one or more poor children born at Edensor or Derby.

William, Earl of Devonshire, by his will, dated 17th July, 1683, gives and bequeathes to the poor at or in the several parishes or townships of Chatsworth, Edensor, Hardwick, Heath, Astwith, Houghton, Langwith, Harstoft, Stainsby, and Pentrich, in the county of Derby, the sum of £400, to be laid out in land, the interest to be laid out in making provision for work, or, if his executors think fit to erect a workhouse and settle a stock to receive such as cannot work, and to put forth apprentices of the younger sort.

In 1687, The Right Hon. William, late Earl of Devonshire, and the Right Hon. Christiana, Countess Dowager, his mother, by their will and testaments, did give and bequeath £1,020 to be laid out in lands for the use of the poor of the towns and villages of Derby, Edensor, Heath, Stainsby, Harstoft, Astwith, Rowthorn, Langwith, Houghton, Pentrich, Peak Forest, Shottle, and Postern; and in fulfilling the true intent of the said wills, there is purchased land in the parish of Rodsley, in this county, to the yearly value of £50, for the use of the poor of the towns and villages aforesaid for ever. The clear yearly rental of the estates purchased now produce £71 7s. 6d. The Duke of Devonshire is considered to be the trustee of this charity, and his agent receives the rents and distributes the proceeds accordingly, and the balance is placed to a distinct account, together with £270 received for a fall of timber on the Rodsley lands, making in the whole £580 10s.

Henry Hardy, by will, dated 1644, bequeathed to the poor of Edensor for ever, the yearly sum of 10s. to be distributed on Christmas day. This sum is paid by the Duke of Devonshire's agent, from a piece of land now forming a part of Chatsworth park, which formerly belonged to Philip Melton; two-thirds are distributed in Edensor, and one-third is paid to the overseer of Pilsley, and distributed in that township.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., paid to the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and given amongst the poor about Christmas.

John Phillips, in 1734, gave to the parish of Edensor, for the use of the poor, £100, the interest to be distributed on the 5th of November yearly, for ever. He also gave £50 to the school of Edensor, and £50 to the school of Stainsby or Hardwick. The interest to be paid to the schoolmasters for the time being.

By indentures, 1735, John and William Wright, in consideration of £150, conveyed to the most noble William, Duke of Devonshire, and five others, and their heirs, a messuage in Beeley and about 6 acres of land, on trust that they should pay one-fourth part to the schoolmaster of Stainsby, and one-fourth part to the schoolmaster of Edensor, and the remaining two-fourths to the poor of the town of Edensor, to be distributed yearly on the 5th of November. The trust premises now consist of two cottages, a small croft, and three fields, containing about 6 acres, situate at Beeley, and an allotment on the enclosure of the common lands in Beeley about 1814, containing about 6 acres, the whole of which are now let for £16 16s. per annum. The Duke of Devonshire's agent receives the rent, which he pays to the overseer. One-third part, £5 12s., is then paid to the master of Edensor school, and the remaining two-thirds, £11 4s., are distributed by the churchwardens and overseers amongst widows and other poor persons of Edensor township. By the donor's will it appears the whole parish was intended to partake of the charity, but the deed to which the executor was a party confined it to the poor of Edensor. All the expense of the enclosure above-named, amounting to £20, was paid by the Duke of Devonshire, and it is proposed to apply the sum of £20 belonging to Hackett's charity, in the repayment of the sum thus advanced. The sum of £50, the residue of the £200, is in the hands of the Duke of Devonshire, and the annual sum of £2 10s. is paid as the interest thereof, to the school at Hardwick or Stainsby. But it appears the Hardwick charity does not receive its due proportion. But as the masters of these schools receive a voluntary contribution of £30 each from the Duke of Devonshire, it is not important that any alteration should take place.

CHATSWORTH.

Chatsworth, an extra-parochial liberty, which keeps its poor with Edensor, is 2 miles S. of Baslow, 2 miles N.E. of Rowsley, 3½ miles S.E. from Bakewell, 9 miles W. from Chesterfield, 10 miles N. by W. from Matlock, and 26 miles N.N.W. from Derby.

Chatsworth House, for nearly three centuries the principal seat of the noble family of Cavendish, is a magnificent mansion, and has been an object of attraction from the time of its first erection in the reign of William III., to the present day. It is a perfect model of taste, elegance, and superb workmanship. The hamlet of Chatsworth contains 1,105A. 1R. 21P. of land, of the rateable value of £828 15s. 9d., wholly as a park, which also extends into the hamlet of Edensor, and the townships of Baslow and Beeley, and comprises 1,391A. 0R. 13P. of land, of which about 400A. are wood. The park is about 11 miles in circumference, and is stocked with cattle, sheep, and about 1,100 head of brown and fallow deer. It is beautifully diversified with rugged cliffs, graceful undulations, verdant lawns and beautiful pleasure grounds, whilst the bold eminences are seen crowned with plantations—the silvery Derwent winding its serpentine course through the valley, and groups of deer scattered o'er nature's carpet, or reposing under the ample shade of the beech or chesnut, giving an additional charm to the fairy scene; it is not easy to say which is most deserving of admiration, the magnitude and splendour of the building, or the picturesque beauties of the country in which the house is situated; delightful views are seen from various points, which mostly terminate in the surrounding moorland scenery. Mr. Rhodes, in his Peak Scenery, observes "immediately before us lay the river, across whose stream a stone butment or weir has been erected, which damming up the water, expands its breadth; it is thence precipitated over this interruption to its progress, where it forms a magnificent cascade. On a gentle ascending ground, about half-a-mile higher up the river, stands Chatsworth, finely embosomed in

'Majestic woods, of every vigorous green:
Stage upon stage, high waving o'er the hill.'—Thompson.

A little on the left is the bridge; backed with broad and ample foliage; cattle reposing in groups on the brink of the river or cooling themselves in the stream, adorned the foreground; and the middle and remote distances, which are ornamented with a palace, a bridge, and towers and temples, disclose a scene as rich and as lovely as the fancy of Claude Lorraine ever pourtrayed when under the influence of his happiest inspirations. Yet the foreground had more of Bergam than Claude about it; the respective features which constitute the peculiar charm and excellence of these great masters, were most harmoniously combined; every part was in character, and the whole was faithful to nature." From Domesday book we learn that Chetesword and Langelic, Lovenot and Chetel, had ten oxgangs of land to be taxed.—Land to ten oxen. This belongs to Ednesoure; William Peveral has the custody of them, by the king's order. Five villanies and two bordars, have there two ploughs and one acre of meadow; wood-pasture one mile long and one broad, and the like quantity of copice wood: value in King Edward's time 20s., now 16s. At the time of the Norman survey, the manor of Chatsworth belonged to the crown, and was placed under the custody of William de Peveral. It was for many generations the property of a family named Leche or Leech; one of whom, named John, was chirurgeon or, as a medical attendant was termed at that period, leech to the King in the reign of Edward III. From this John Leech, descended Sir Roger Leech of Beaurepoir or Belper, who was Lord High Treasurer of England, in the time of Henry V. The brother of Sir Roger, was Sir Phillip Leech; he was treasurer for the wars of France. This distinguished knight was appointed to maintain a military post at the siege of Rouen. He was governor of Monceaux and Newcastle, and was sent by the King on a commission with the Earl Marshal to the province of Maine. Raulf Leech was a captain in the vanguard of the King's army, which entered France the 16th of June, 1513; and Roger Leech was his petty captain. The male branch of this family became extinct about the middle of the sixteenth century; but previous to that occurrence the manor of Chatsworth had been sold by Francis Leech or Leche, (who had espoused the sister of the Countess of Shrewsbury,) to the family of Agard, of whom it was purchased by Sir William Cavendish. Very few persons have the honour of being descended from ancestors of so distinguished merits and abilities as the present noble possessor of Chatsworth House. The first of whom we have any certain account was Robert de Gernon, a Norman who came over with William the conqueror, and contributed very much to the success of his expedition. Geoffrey de Gernon, one of his descendents, lived at the Moor Hall, in Derbyshire, in the reign of King Edward I.; Roger, his son, married the daughter and sole heiress of John Potton or Potkins, of Cavendish, in the county of Suffolk. His children according to the custom of those times, in compliment to their mother, took the name of Cavendish. His eldest son, an eminent lawyer, was appointed Lord Chief Justice, in 1366, but afterwards was beheaded by the insurgents of Suffolk, because it was said his son had killed the famous Wat Tyler. From his brother Roger, was descended Captain Thomas

Cavendish, the second Englisman who sailed round the world. He performed one voyage in the years 1586 and 1587; but in attempting another, died of a broken heart, from vexation and disappointment. John, the second son of Judge Cavendish, for his service in quelling the insurrections which prevailed at that time, received the honour of knighthood, and an annuity of £40 for himself and for his heirs for ever. He was one of the esquires of the body to King Richard II., and King Henry V. To the latter he was also broiderer of the wardrobe, and in October, 1415, was at the famous battle of Agincourt. Thos. Cavendish, his great grandson, studied the law, and in the reign of King Henry VIII. was clerk of the pipe in the Exchequer. He had four sons; William, the second son, shared much the favour of Cardinal Wolsey, and attended him both in his glory and distress, till his death. Though his situation was rendered very critical by the King's displeasure with his patron, yet his conduct was regulated by so much prudence that, after the death of the Cardinal, he was greatly distinguished by royal notice and favour. When the King resolved upon the suppression of religious houses, he appointed Mr. Cavendish one of the commissioners for visiting and taking the surrender of several of them, Besides many other marks of favour and distinction, in the thirty-eighth year of his reign he was knighted by King Henry himself, made a privy counsellor, and appointed treasurer of the chamber. The emoluments of the last office were, fees £100, diet £100, and boat-hire £10 a year. In the two succeeding reigns he still continued his places of privy counsellor and treasurer of the chamber. In the sixth year of King Edward VI., he had in exchange for the manors of Northaw, Cuffeley, Chyldwyke, in Hertfordshire—which had been granted him by King Henry VIII.—several lands and manors belonging to dissolved priories and abbeys in Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Staffordshire, Dorsetshire, Cornwall, Kent, and Essex. He married three times. His last wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Hardwick, of Hardwick in Derbyshire, and widow of Robert Barley, of Barley, in the same county, whose opulent fortune became her property. By her he had issue three sons and five daughters. Henry, the eldest son, settled at Tutbury; he married Grace, daughter of George Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, but died without legitimate issue. William, the second, was so great a favourite with his mother that, at her death, he became possessed of a larger estate than his elder brother. Being a person of great wealth and distinguished merit, he was, in the year 1605, raised to the dignity of a peer, by the title of Baron Cavendish, of Hardwick, in the county of Derby. His lordship contributed very much towards the establishment of the English colonies in Virginia, and the Bermuda islands. In the year 1618, after the death of his elder brother, he was created Earl of Devonshire. This nobleman had two wives. Sir John Cavendish, the only offspring of the second marriage, died without issue. By his first wife he had three sons and three daughters, but all except one son and one daughter, died young. His lordship departed this life at Hardwick, in the year 1625, and was buried at Edensor, near Chatsworth, to whom a beautiful monument was erected, with an elegant Latin inscription by his son.

William, the second Earl of Devonshire, was educated under the care of the famous Mr. Hobbes; but it does not appear that he adopted his principles in regard to religion and government. On his return from his travels through France and Italy, he received the honour of knighthood, and through the mediation of King James, married Christian daughter of his great favourite, Edward, Lord Bruce, of Kinloss, who was descended from Bruces, Kings of Scotland. This young nobleman, who was possessed of great accomplishments and abilities, acquitted himself with distinguished abilities in many honourable commissions, with which he was entrusted by the King. But by living with too great splendour and hospitality, his estate was considerably encumbered. He departed this life, at his house in London, in June, 1628, and was buried in the family vault, at All Saints' church, Derby.

William, the third Earl of Devonshire, was only eleven years old when he succeeded to the honours and estate of his father. His mother, who is represented as a pattern of female excellence, paid off during his minority the large debt with which it was encumbered. She also committed the education of her son to Mr. Hobbes.

During the civil wars betwixt Charles I. and the parliament, this active and distinguished nobleman shared in the calamities which befel the supporters of the royal cause. To avoid the troubles, which he knew, his attachment to the king would bring upon him, he went abroad; but his flight prevented not a sequestration of his estate. Before this event took place, he had attended King Charles in person and liberally supplied him with money. Nor was his mother less distinguished by her services to the distressed royalists. To requite such generous exertions, it is said that after the restoration no subject was treated with greater attention and respect than her Ladyship.

Charles Cavendish, the second brother of the Earl, a man of extraordinary personal and intellectual accomplishments, rendered the king many important services; he fell at Gainsborough, in an engagement with Cromwell, in July, 1643.

The Earl of Devonshire spent the latter part of his life as a private gentleman; and departed this life at Roehampton, in the year 1684; was buried with his ancestors at Derby. He left issue by his Lady, daughter of William Earl of Salisbury, two sons and a daughter.

William, the fourth Earl of Devonshire, not only equalled, but in several accomplishments, greatly surpassed all his ancestors. He had considerable reputation as a poet, and a man of letters. But the character in which he made the most distinguished figure, was that of a statesman. At a time when this country was threatened with the restoration of popery, and the establishment of a despotic government, he stood forth a zealous supporter of civil and religious liberty. In concert with several other eminent persons, he formed the plan of the revolution. They invited and at last fixed William, Prince of Orange, on the British throne. In reward for his strenuous exertion, the king afterwards conferred upon him many distinguished honours and profitable employments. He was admitted into the privy council, made lord steward of the household, and soon after constituted lord lieutenant of Derbyshire, and Knight of the Garter. He attended King William to the famous congress in Holland, and surpassed most of the foreign princes who composed it, in the magnificence of his furniture and plate, and the splendour of his entertainments. After his return to England, he was created in May, 1694, Marquis of Hartington, and Duke of Devonshire. He was made a justice in Eyre, and in the year 1697, was chosen Recorder of Nottingham. During the reign of Queen Anne, he retained all his places and manifested on several occasions, that great love of liberty, by which he had been prompted sometimes to put even King William in mind, that he came to England to defend the Protestants, and not to persecute the Papists. His Grace departed this life in the year 1707, at Devonshire House, in Piccadilly, London, in the sixty-seventh year of his age. By his Duchess, daughter of James, Duke of Ormond, he had issue three sons and one daughter.

William, the second Duke of Devonshire, before the death of his father, had served as a volunteer in Flanders, under King William, and been several times member of parliament, for the counties of Derby and York. He succeeded his father not only in his titles and estates, but likewise in his places and trusts. However, when Queen Anne changed her ministry in 1710, he resigned them all. Yet notwithstanding, he was in the same year installed a Knight of the Garter. At the accession of George I., he was appointed Lord Steward of his Majesty's household, and sworn of the privy council, but upon his resignation of the former office, he was in the year 1716, declared president of the council. He was three different times appointed one of the lord chief justices, when the king visited his German dominions. His grace, who departed this life, at his house in Piccadilly, London, in 1729, had by his Duchess, daughter of William Lord Russell, and sister of the Duke of Bedford, five sons and six daughters.

William, the third Duke of Devonshire, was appointed lord lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Derby, and sworn of the privy council, made lord keeper of the privy seal, lord steward of his Majesty's household, and a Knight Companion of the most noble order of the Garter. In March, 1737, his Grace was in council declared Lord Lieutenant of the kingdom of Ireland, in which station he acquitted him with great honour to his own character, and satisfaction to the nation over which he presided. He was also appointed three times one of the regents during the absence of George II., when he visited his Hanoverian dominions. Towards the end of his life he retired from public business to his seat at Chatsworth, honoured and beloved by all. His Grace, who departed this life, at Chatsworth, in December, 1755, had issue by his Duchess, daughter of John Hoskins, Esq., of the county of Middlesex, four sons and three daughters.

William, the fourth Duke of Devonshire, after serving in two Parliaments for the county of Derby, was called up to the house of peers, and took his seat as Baron Cavendish, of Hardwick. Soon after, he was appointed master of the horse, and sworn of the privy council. In 1752, he was one of the lords of the regency, during his Majesty's absence in Germany. Two years after he was appointed governor of the county of Cork, and lord high treasurer of Ireland; and in 1755, lord lieutenant of that kingdom. The next year, he succeeded the Duke of Newcastle as first commissioner of the treasury, and was appointed lord lieutenant of the county of Derby. In 1757, he was installed a Knight of the Garter, and on the death of the Duke of Grafton, made lord chamberlain of the household, having first resigned his seat at the treasury board. After the accession of George III., the Duke continued in his posts till the beginning of the year 1763, when, being disgusted, as it was said, at the high degree of favour and influence possessed by the Earl of Bute, he resigned all the places which he held in England under the Crown. However, he continued in his office of lord high treasurer of Ireland and governor of Cork till his death, which took place in the year 1764, at The Spa, in Germany, whither his Grace had gone for the recovery of his health. By his lady, third and youngest daughter but, at length, heiress to the Earl of Burlington and Cork, (by which union the Barony of Clifford, created by writ of Charles I., in 1628, came into this family,) his Grace had issue three sons and a daughter.

Lord George Augustus, brother of the fourth Duke, was appointed in Oct., 1761, comptroller of the household; and, in 1762, sworn of the privy council. He died unmarried, and was buried at Holker, in the county of Lancaster, in 1794.

Lord Frederick Cavendish, third son of the third Duke of Devonshire, rose, to the rank of Field Marshal, and was taken prisoner at the battle of St. Cas, in 1758, but was afterwards allowed to return home on his parole.

Lord John Cavendish, fourth son of the third Duke of Devonshire, was distinguished as the friend of Lord Rockingham and the opponent of Lord North. He was twice chancellor of the exchequer, many years member of Parliament for the county of Derby, and died in 1796.

Lady Caroline married William Ponsonby, Lord Viscount Duncannon, son and heir of Brabazon, Earl of Besborough.

The Hon. Henry Cavendish, son of Lord Charles Cavendish, nephew to the third Duke of Devonshire, and great-uncle to the present Duke of Devonshire, died on the 24th of February, 1810, at his house at Clapham. His remains were privately interred in the family vault at Derby. This gentleman had rendered himself familiarly conversant with every part of Sir Isaac Newton's philosophy. These pursuits, together with reading of various kinds, by which he acquired a deep insight into almost every topic of general knowledge, formed the whole occupation of his life, and were in fact his sole amusement. His manners were mild, his mind firm; and liberal without being profuse. He was born Oct. 10th, 1731, and died at the age of 75, leaving the greatest sum in funded property which perhaps any person ever possessed, amounting to £1,200,000 His writings on subjects of science appeared in the Philosoph. Trans. of 1766, and subsequent years. The stamp duty upon Mr. Cavendish's will amounted to £42,000.

William, the fifth Duke of Devonshire, born 14th Dec., 1748, maintained the independent spirit of his father, and held no public situations under the crown, except the lord lieutenancy of the county of Derby. His Grace married, in 1774, Georgiana, daughter of John, Earl Spencer, of Althorpe, in the county of Northampton, who died 30th of March, 1806, by whom he had William Spencer, born in Paris, 21st of May, 1790, and two daughters, Georgiana, born 12th of July, 1783, married 21st of March, 1801, George, Earl of Carlisle, and Henrietta Elizabeth, born 12th of August, 1785, married, 24th December, 1809, Lord Viscount Granville. His Grace married again, 19th of Oct., 1809, to Lady Elizabeth Foster, relict of John Thomas Foster, Esq., of the county of Louth, Ireland, and daughter of the late Earl of Bristol: and died in London, 29th July, 1811, aged 63 years, and was laid in the family vault in All Saints' Church, Derby.

Lord George Augustus Frederick Cavendish, third son of the fourth Duke, was member of Parliament for the borough and county of Derby more than half a century, and distinguished himself by his attachment to the liberties of the people; he succeeded his uncle, Lord John Cavendish, who died 1796, as representative of the county. His lordship's eldest son was unfortunately killed by a fall from his carriage; leaving three children, of whom the eldest, after having obtained the highest academical honours at Cambridge, was, in testimony of his capacity and acquirements, chosen member of parliament for that univerity in 1829; and soon afterwards espoused Lady Blanche Howard, daughter of the Earl of Carlisle. Colonel Cavendish, third son of Lord George Cavendish, was many years member of parliament for the borough of Derby.

The present illustrious possessor of the dukedom is His Grace William Spencer Cavendish, the sixth Duke and ninth Earl of Devonshire. His Grace has devoted his princely fortune to the encouragement of literature, to the patronage of the fine arts, and to that style of living suitable to the rank and dignity of his station; though he has not taken any prominent position in political affairs, yet, when important occurrences have demanded his attention, we find him in his place in the House of Peers, offering his counsels, and ever ready to vindicate the claims of civil and religious liberty.

On the accession of the Emperor Nicholas to the throne of Russia, the noble Duke was nominated to the embassy of congratulation from the British court to the court of St. Petersburg. The costly and magnificent display of his Grace on this occasion surpassed all previous embassies of a similar character. His Grace was received with royal favour, and invested by the new Emperor with the highest order of Russian knighthood. On the return of his Grace to England, he was distinguished by the favour of George IV., and soon after his Grace was nominated to select and arrange a ministry, in the formation of which all the remains of party spirit might be lost in a general devotion to the interests of the public. His Grace is Lord Lieutenant and custos rotulorum of the county of Derby, high steward of the borough of Derby, and lessee under the crown of the mineral duties in the High Peak. He is also lessee or lord of about 60 manors, patron of 31 Church livings, and owner of upwards of 70,000 acres of land in the county of Derby.

CHATSWORTH HOUSE.

Chatsworth House, independent of the recent additions, is a noble structure; the principal or western front is rich in architectural ornament; it comprises three divisions of equal dimensions; the base is rusticated, and the central compartment, which is projected, is distinguished by four handsome fluted Ionic columns, that support an ornamental frieze, and a pediment, within the tympanum on which the arms of the Devonshire family are admirably sculptured in stone; the right and left portions of this elegant front have each four fluted Ionic pilasters; the whole being surmounted with open balustrades, divided into sections, and adorned with urns and statues; the south, although much less ornamented than the west, presents an imposing front, having a double flight of steps in the centre of the building; these fronts, together with the east and the north, form the four sides of a quadrangular court, which contains some admirable carving in stone, particularly the military trophies that adorn the great hall. The other three sides have been rebuilt, and the whole of this interior court is now a beautiful specimen of chaste and elegant architecture. This building was projected by the celebrated fourth Earl (afterwards first Duke) of Devonshire, on his retiring from the court of James II. That nobleman directed his attention to works of architectural taste and magnificence, and resolved to raise a structure worthy his wealth and rank. In this disposition he contracted (says Kennet) with workmen to pull down "the south side of the good old seat, and to rebuild it on a plan he gave, for a front to his gardens, so fair and august, being 183 ft. 2 in. in length that it looked only like a model of what might be done in after ages. When he had finished this part, he meant to go no further; till seeing public affairs in a happier settlement, for a testimony of ease and joy, he undertook the east side of the quadrangle, and raised it entirely new, in conformity to the south, and seemed then content to say he had gone half way through, and would leave the rest for his heir. In this resolution he stopped about seven years, and then resumed courage, and began to lay the foundation for two other sides, to complete the noble square; and these last, as far as uniformity admits, do exceed the others by a west front of 172 feet in length, of most excellent strength and elegance, and a capital on the north side that is of singular ornament and service. And though such a vast pile (of materials entirely new) required a prodigious expense, yet the building was his least charge, if regard be had to his gardens, water-works, statues, pictures, and other the finest pieces of art and of nature, that could be obtained abroad or at home." The principal external fronts are the east, the south, and the west. This noble mansion was begun about the year 1687, under the direction of William Talman, a native of Wiltshire, and comptroller of the king's works in the reign of William III.; but it was not completed before the year 1706; and the most eminent artists were engaged to complete the work. Among the painters we find Verrio, Laguerre, Gennari, Ricard, and Sir James Thornhill; amongst the carvers in stone, Caius, Gabriel Cibber, J. T. Geeraerslius, Nost, Davies, Aurid, Lanscroon, Nedauld, Saml. Watson, carvers in wood; Grinlin Gibbons, it has been generally considered was the principal artist in this line; however, Mr. Saml. Watson, a native of Heanor, in Derbyshire, from documents in the possession of the family, executed much of the carving in wood as well as stone, and by whom the arms in the west front of the house were executed.

Chatsworth House was begun on a much more moderate scale than the subsequent design by Sir Wm. Cavendish, who, by his marriage with the celebrated heiress of Hardwick, became possessor of a large estate in this county. Before one wing of the intended fabric was raised, Sir William died; but his widow, who became Countess of Shrewsbury, completed the whole building in a style which entitled it to be ranked among the wonders of the Peak; and it appears to have been a quadrangular building, with turrets, and acquired particular interest from its been one of the prisons of the unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots, under the Earl and Countess of Shrewsbury. In 1570, the unhappy queen was removed to Chatsworth from Wingfield, and then resided here for some months. In the month of October, 1570, Sir Wm. Cecil, afterwards Lord Burleigh, and Sir Walter Mildmay, visited Chatsworth, and remained there 20 days, being employed in certain negociations between Mary and Queen Elizabeth, soon after which Mary was removed to Sheffield Castle, which was her chief residence during the ensuing 14 years, though in company with the Earl and Countess of Shrewsbury, she visited Chatsworth in the years 1573, 1577, 1578, and 1581. In 1577, Elizabeth wrote with her own hand to thank the Earl and Countess of Shrewsbury for the hospitable entertainment of her favourite minister, the Earl of Leicester, at Chatsworth. During the civil wars between the Parliament and Charles I., the old hall at Chatsworth was occupied as a fortress occasionally by both parties. In 1643, it was garrisoned by forces under Sir John Gell, on the part of the Parliament, and in December of the same year, the Earl of Newcastle having taken Wingfield manor, made himself master of Chatsworth Hall, and placed a garrison in it for the King, under the command of Colonel Eyre. In September, 1645, it was held for the royal party by Colonel Shalcross, with a fresh garrison from Welbeck, and a skirmishing force of 300 horse. It was then besieged by Major Mollanus, with 400 foot, but the siege was raised by command of Colonel Gell, who commanded the major and his forces to return to Derby.

The taste and magnificence of the present noble Duke have been fully displayed by the erection of the great northern wing, chiefly intended for the accommodation of his numerous visitants, and reflects great credit on the ability displayed by the architect, Sir Jefferey Wyatville, who gave the de- and also on Mr. Holmes, the clerk of the works, who left Windsor Castle to superintend this splendid structure, in which nearly the whole of the numerous rooms and passages have groined arches or arched roofs. The basement rooms and passages are all built of rubbed ashler stone, procured from the Duke's quarries at Beeley Moor. This wing is 385 feet in length, being projected from the east front, making the whole line 557 feet, and is, in all its parts, one of the best specimens of masonry in the kingdom. The stone is slightly tinged with a pale yellow, furnished from quarries on his Grace's estates in the immediate vicinity of Chatsworth. The exterior is classically beautiful, and presents an assemblage of parts so arranged as to be strikingly picturesque—the northern termination being distinguished by an elegant Italian tower, in the construction of which the Doric, the Ionic, and the Corinthian orders of architecture have been tastefully used. "To complete this great improvement," Mr. Rhodes observes, "another wing, at the expense of another £200,000, must be projected from the south front. Should this be accomplished, Chatsworth will have attained the utmost pinnacle of its grandeur, and will emphatically be the 'Palace of the Peak.'" Various defects in the north front have been corrected, which has given to it a richness and beauty in unison with the character of the building. The east front has been likewise greatly and judiciously altered by the same architect. The grand entrance to Chatsworth is on the west, and commands a view of uncommon beauty. The Derwent, which is here a noble stream, runs within two or three hundred yards of the house; an elegant stone bridge of three arches spans the stream, with statues by Cibber between the arches, and the park around is spread out into beautiful undulations, where verdant slopes and sylvan groups unite to form a rich and varied landscape. To the north of the bridge may be seen a small tower, known as the "Bower of Mary Queen of Scots," from a garden in which that unfortunate Queen spent much of her time. It is moated round and is reached by a flight of steps. The exterior of Chatsworth, splendid as it is, conveys but a faint indication of the treasure within. It has been stated in the public papers that his Grace possesses the finest private collection of sculpture in Europe. They were formerly the occupants of various departments, but have been removed into the new sculpture gallery, and so classed and arranged as to form a splendid combination of talent. The columns, vases, and urns, which the Duke has collected during his visits to Italy are amongst the most costly ornaments of his mansion. The columns are from twelve to fifteen feet high, their dimensions in proportion. The materials of which they are composed are various—granite, porphyry, Sienna marble, stalactite verde-antique, and other choice marbles of Italy; but the richest, and by far the most costly, are two noble columns of Sicilian jasper, intermixed with chalcedony, disseminated in veins throughout the mass. Each column is one entire specimen of precious stone. Eight of the finest of these columns now adorn the dining hall and the sculpture gallery. Others have been surmounted with appropriate capitals, and used as classical enrichments to the entrance doors of the principal apartments. Chatsworth contains an abundance of paintings in almost every department of the art, and some of superior excellence. The ceilings and sides of the great hall were painted by Laguerre and Verrio, with subjects from Roman history. The staircases, the chapel, and the ceilings of the best apartments are covered with the works of the same artists, and Sir James Thornhill. With the exception of the chapel and the great hall, the subjects chosen are mythological—Phæton, Apollo, Jupiter, Antiope, the Muses, Diana, Actæon, Bacchus, and Ariadne, Venus and Adonis, Melegar and Atalanta, Cephalis and Procris, with a long etcetera of gods and goddesses, make a part of the adornments of the principal rooms, a mode of ornamenting the mansions of the principal nobility when Chatsworth was built.

In addition to this general reference, we will endeavour to give a short but more methodical detail of the INTERIOR OF THIS PALACE OF THE PEAK.

Passing the Porter's lodge, and the Domestic establishments on the left, visitors find themselves in the Court-yard of the north front, in the centre of which is a remarkably fine weeping-ash, removed from some nursery grounds at Derby, in 1830, where it had stood upwards of 40 years,—they are then admitted into the lower or sub-hall; in the further part of the hall are two antiques, a Germanicus and an Agrippina, from Wanstead House. The busts here are numerous. A flight of steps leads out from this apartment into the North Corridor, which communicates with the GREAT HALL.

The double row of steps that connected this hall with the grand staircase, once regarded so magnificent have been removed. A gallery, defended by open balustrades, has been carried round three sides of this splendid hall, and forms a connecting link between the old and new parts of the house. In the centre of the hall, there is a remarkably large ENTROCHE marble slab, being 11 ft. by 7 ft. It is mounted on a magnificent carved gilt stand. The paintings of this hall are by Verrio and Laguerre. The history of Julius Cæsar has furnished the subject. In one compartment he is crossing the Rubicon, in another he is passing over to his army at Brundusium. The left and principal side represents the sacrifice before going to the senate, after the closing of the Temple of Janus. Over the north entrance is his death at the foot of Pompey's statue, and the ceiling contains his apotheosis. The two ends of the hall are eminently beautiful; they are each divided into three arched compartments, the central one, the largest, being the entrance from the North Corridor at one extremity, and the channel of communication with the Grand South Staircase at the other. From the floor of this magnificent apartment the effect is grand and strikingly impressive. Over the mantelpiece is the following inscription:—

"Ædes Has Paternas Dilectissimas
Anno Libertatis Anglicæ MDCLXXXVIII Institvtas
Gvl. S. Devoniæ Dvx Anno MDCCCXI Hæres Accepit Anno Mæroris Svi MDCCCXL Perfecit."

THE SOUTH GALLERY,

A room of powerful attraction to artists. From seven to eight hundred drawings cover the walls of this appartment, numerous sketches of Claude Lorraine—fac-similies of which have been published by Earlom—with a splendid collection by the first masters of the Venetian, the Florentine, the Spanish, and the Flemish schools. Titian, Raphael, Carracci, Corregio, Salvator, Reubens, &c., have all contributed.

Corresponding galleries have been erected on the north and west sides of the central court, and finished in a most splendid manner, and are the receptacles of the Duke's finest collection of pictures, to which Chiswick, Devonshire House, and Hardwick, have largely contributed. These galleries are connected with each other, and form one of the most important improvements made at Chatsworth. A Door from the Gallery of Drawings, communicates with

THE CHAPEL,

Which is seated and lined throughout with cedar wood. Christ, healing all manner of diseases, occupies the principal compartment on the right. The incredulity of St. Thomas, surmounts the altar, and is said to be one of Verrio's best pieces. The statues of Faith and Hope, that constitute part of the altar, are by Cibber; here are also excellent specimens of carving in wood, by Watson.

The North Staircase; these stairs are of oak, with richly carved balustrades, &c., and contain on the first landing, some splendid full length portraits, in massive gilt frames of the Emperor Nicholas and his Empress, painted at Moscow, by Dawe; Richard Boyle, third Earl of Burlington; and of George IV., in his state robes, by Sir Thomas Lawrence.

The Great Drawing Room; 48 feet long, 28 feet wide, and 18 feet high, is richly stored with admirable works of art. The chapel, music room, billiard room, and the drawing room, occupy the whole of the south front of the library; they look towards Rowsley, Darley Dale, and Matlock.

From the Drawing room which occupies the south-east angle of the building, visitors are admitted into

THE LIBRARY,

The first of the long range of apartments that form the east front of Chatsworth, an extent from one extreme point to the other of nearly 560 feet. The length of the rooms in succession, omitting inches, are,—drawing room, 30 feet; the great library, 90 feet; the anti-library, 30 feet; the cabinet library, 26 feet; the dining room, 58 feet; the anti-dining room and music gallery, 26 feet; the sculpture gallery, 103 feet; and the orangery, 108 feet; the bath lobby and the staircase to the banquetting hall, &c. occupy the remainder of the 560. The doors into the whole of this suit of apartments, are placed directly opposite each other, and when the whole are thrown open, a magnificent vista through a series of rooms of almost unparalleled splendour and richness is presented to the spectator, affording a long perspective of interior, not surpassed in any mansion in the kingdom.

The Great Library is one of the most splendid rooms in Chatsworth; it has been finished in a style unique in richness, elegance, and beauty. The doors of the two ends are of the richest mahogany, French polished. The bookcases of the same material, divided into compartments by semi-circular metalic pilasters, a section of a three inch diameter column, covered with gold; the compartments are all about nine feet and three feet alternately in breadth. About eight or nine feet from the ceiling, these pilasters terminate and expand into a richly wrought leaf, which is made to support the floor of a gallery that extends to three sides of the room, and which has been erected for the convenience of reaching the books from the upper shelves, without the aid of moveable library strairs. The gallery is defended by a rich balustrade, carved and ornamented with dead and burnished gold ornamented work in bas relief, which is so managed and arranged as to form a series of splendid framework to five circular paintings, that are set like precious gems within. These paintings, by Louis Charon, a French artist of considerable merit, who left his own country on account of his religion, and fled to England, made part of the ceiling in the old library. On the west side of this apartment, there is a noble chimney piece of Carra marble, surmounted with a mirror six feet by four feet six inches wide; one entire piece of glass. Some of the minor division of the bookcases, and the recesses between the windows are likewise panelled with looking glasses set round with burnished gold mouldings; the whole combining a splendid display of taste and magnificence not to be found in the mansion of any other subject of the realm.

The Anti-Library, which is fitted up in the same style and manner, succeeds; the ceiling of this apartment is adorned by a beautiful picture by Hayler, and two smaller subjects, Night and Morning, from Thorwalsden, by Charles Landseer: a door on the west side of this room communicates with the great north staircase, which in extent, design, and detail, is truly grand; it is the work of Sir J. Wyatville. On the first landing-place are two full length portraits of the Emperor and Empress of Russia, painted by Dawe.

The Cabinet Library, although varying in size and form from the two preceding it, is a beautiful little gem. The roof is a splendid ornamental dome, divided into compartments, and supported by columns of variegated stalactite and Italian marble, based on pediments of pure statuary marble, and surmounted with capitals, richly sculptured in dead and burnished gold.

Over the chimney piece in the Music Room, there is a portrait of the Duchess of Devonshire, the mother of the present Duke, by Sir Joshua Reynolds; a picture of Mary Magdalen, and Christ in the Garden, by Gennari; and one of the Angel Michael overcoming Satan, adorns the walls of this apartment: there was formerly an organ, which was used during Divine service in the chapel, but it has been removed.

The Billiard Room has a richly painted ceiling by Sir James Thornhill. A whole length portrait of the Duke of Cumberland, hangs over the fire place; Titian's family, by himself, ornaments one side of the room; and nearly opposite is the portrait of Geo. IV. on a sofa, a masterly production by Sir Thos. Lawrence, and well known from Finden's splendid engraving of it.

THE DINING ROOM.

The walls of this magnificent room are hung with family portraits, amongst which are five or six by Vandyke. Those of Arthur Goodwin, Lady Wharton, Lady Rich, and the first Earl and Countess of Devonshire, are perhaps the best pictures in the room The ceiling is slightly coved and divided into numerous compartments or panels, the divisions and the ornaments within being richly gilt on a ground of the purest white. The effect is evidently what was intended—gay, cheerful, and splendid. The entrance to the two ends of this magnificent apartment are particularly beautiful, and are set between columns of Sicilian jasper and Italian marble of choice quality. They are based on appropriate pediments, and surmounted with Ionic capitals. The two chimney pieces in this room are nearly unique in design; they are executed in the marble of Carraro, and adorned with figures as large as life; one is by the younger Westmacott, and the other by Sievier. It is said the cost of these two fire-places was upwards of two thousand guineas each, exclusive of the stove, fire-irons, fender, &c. A youthful Bacchus and a Bacchante lean gracefully on the two extremities of one of them. The other, by Sievier, is distinguished by a Bacchus and a Priestess of his festivals; she is in the act of replenishing the wine cup with the juice of the grape. Both the figures are admirably calculated to excite that exhilirated state of feeling which never fails to give a zest to the choicest viands and wines. The furniture in this apartment is of corresponding grandeur; magnificent mirrors, tables of the choicest marbles and granite, placed on ornamented framework, decorated with the Duke's crest richly carved and profusely gilt, occupy the sides and ends of the room. All that wealth can purchase, or art and taste produce, are here brought together in splendid competition. Passing through a small ante-room, fitted up for the accommodation of a musical band, we enter

THE SCULPTURE GALLERY,

The grand depository of the finest works of art that Chatsworth contains. The first entrance into this magnificent saloon of sculptured elegance is powerfully impressive. The human form seems here to live, move, and breathe in marble; feeling, sentiment, power, passion, repose, and action, are all admirably pourtrayed; thirty-six objects are particularly noticed by Rhodes, (from whom we quote,) all admirable productions. There is also a colossal vase, twenty feet in circumference, formed from one entire block of Sweedish granite, and sculptured at Berlin by Barteleina, which is succeeded by another, similar in form, but smaller in dimensions, and of a more costly material; it is a natural conglomerate of a great variety of marbles, interspersed with fragments of chalcedony, and semi-transparent veins of calx spar. This beautiful vase is 12 feet in circumference, elegant in form, and beautifully polished A little in advance of these vases are two superb tables. The one nearest the door on the left is a rare and unique specimen of Labrador felspar, embedded in a margin of porphyry. The table on the right is of larger dimensions, equally beautiful and far more costly. The four large panels in the middle were a present to the Duke; the colour is a delicate pale green, variegated with shades of a darker hue, and appear to have the hardness and polish of a precious stone; they are said to be the production of the island of Corsica. These beautiful panels are surmounted by richly ornamented Mosaic-work, composed of different coloured marbles, with occasional fragments of lapis lazuli, so disposed as to form a splendid border round the whole. The table altogether contains about ten thousand pieces, and its estimated value is between two and three thousand pounds. It was manufactured by Mr. Mills, of Ashford. The exit from the gallery leading to the Orangery, corresponds in grandeur with that at the other end of the room. Two noble columns of Egyptian green marble form the portal, resting on golden pedestals, and surmounted with Corinthian capitals, worked in fretted and burnished gold, produce a splendid effect.

BANQUETING HALL.

In the middle of this fine apartment hangs a large and splendid chandelier. The exterior of the rim is partly composed of stags' heads as large as life, beautifully carved and gilt, each head being surmounted by the natural antlers of the stag from the forests of Germany. Many pictures, formerly in other parts of the house, now form various panels in the ceiling; the spaces between fitted up with rich and appropriate ornaments. The hall is crowned with an open temple in the richest style of Corinthian architecture, which commands an uninterrupted view of the scenery of Chatsworth park. A communication from the Anti-Library leads though the North Gallery to the West Back Stairs, and from thence to the State Room Story. One of the first room visited is the

ARMOURY ROOM.

The ceiling of the room is a splendid specimen of the talent of Sir James Thornhill, in this now almost exploded style of decoration. The subject is the Assembly of the Gods and the Deification of Romulus. The Rape of the Sabines, by Sir James, makes a part of the furniture of this room. A series of bed-rooms leads from this part of the house to the State Dressing Room, which occupies the south-west angle of the building. The ceiling is splendidly painted with the judgment of Paris. The most magnificent portion of the old part of Chatsworth succeeds. This suite of apartments, denominated contains the principal part of the exquisite carving in wood, said to have been the work of Gibbons, but by various documents, it appears, Samuel Watson, a native of Derbyshire, was one of the principal artists employed; be that as it may, their near approximation to nature is wonderful.

The first of these apartments is the State, or Scarlet Bed Room, so named from containing the bed in which George II. died. This bed, with the chairs and footstools used at the coronation of George III. and Queen Charlotte, were the perquisites of the fourth Duke of Devonshire, as lord chamberlain of his majesty's household. The ceiling of this room is richly painted; the allegory of the morning star, embodied in the figure of Aurora chasing away the night, and dispersing her misty hosts of attendants, is well represented; a variety of subjects occupy the other compartments, in which the history of Diana is most prominent.

The next is the State Music Room, in which there is a most excellent likeness of the first Duke of Devonshire, in his robes of state; and amongst the costly furniture of this apartment are two magnificently gilt chairs, in which William IV. and Queen Adelaide were crowned. The present Duke of Devonshire being lord chamberlain, they devolved to him in right of his office.

Then the State Drawing Room; the ceiling is splendidly painted, the subject Phæton taking charge of the chariot of the sun.

The State Dining Room, is a spacious and noble apartment of fifty feet by thirty; the ceiling is richly ornamented with allegorical paintings, and in the centre is a splendid Vase, by Canteen, sculptured out of one block of the Mecklenburg granite, at Berlin, and measuring twenty feet in circumference, on a foot and plinth of the same material. The whole of this suite of rooms is richly adorned with carvings in wood. Returning from the state apartments down the south staircase, the Duke's Private Rooms are on the basement story.

From the West Entrance Hall (in which formerly was a statue of Mary Queen of Scots, by Westmacott, sculptured in Maltese stone, which has been removed to Hardwick,) a small apartment used as a Private Library, and stored with a series of engravings from the works of Canova, leads to the Duke's Sitting Room, which contains some excellent portraits of his most intimate friends; also a whole length figure of the Duke, by Hayter, and a clever cabinet picture by Newton, the subject from Gil Blas; several fine tables composed of Derbyshire and Foreign marbles, and one composed entirely of polished Malachite, a present to the Duke, by the Emperor of Russia.

THE ORANGERY,

A noble room, one hundred and eight feet long, twenty seven feet wide, and twenty-one feet high, well stored with orange trees of fine growth, Chinese scent jars, tastefully arranged, choice exotics and an almost endless variety of shrubs and flowers too rare and precious to be breathed on by the out-door atmosphere of Derbyshire, complete this brilliant storehouse. A niche on the western side of this lofty apartment is occupied by a group in statuary marble, a Venus and Cupid at play. Two circular compartments, one on each side the niche, are sculptured in marble, with figures in bas-relief, representing Night and Morning, by Thorwaldsen; Agamemnon's herald carrying off Briseis from Achilles; and another scene from Homer by the same artist, adorn one end of the Orangery; the battle of Castor and Pollux with Lyncus and Idus; and Castor and Pollux carrying away Phœbe and Talaira, by Schadaw, are sculptured in marble tablets on the other. From this apartment visitors generally pass into the Garden, down a broad flight of steps, adorned on each side by two fine dancing figures after Canova, and terminating with two beautiful vases.

THE GARDENS,

a term which here includes the range of smooth shaven lawns, flower beds, shrubberies, and fountains, extending from the house southward, and along the hill to the east; these constitute a series of delightful walks, amidst flowers and fragance, shade and sunshine. Here one of the distinguished features of Chatsworth, are situated; they are supplied from a reservoir at the summit of the high hill which forms the eastern boundary of the noble domain of Chatsworth; on the side of the hill is a temple, ornamented with columns, pilasters and figures bearing aquatic urns, and surmounted with a dome; frequently this building is made to serve the purpose of a fountain, and the water rushes impetuously from every part of it, until the whole temple is covered with spray and foam. From this place the stream descends along a continued slope of steps, that break it into foam and glitter. in another part of the garden, some water pipes, so constructed as to resemble a willow tree, play many an unlucky trick to visitors, whose curiosity may induce them to approach within the reach of its branches. About one hundred yards south of the willow tree, is the most magnificent in the kingdom, covering about an acre of land; the length is 324 feet, and the width upwards of 170; the north and south divisions are 52 feet high, and the central or dome compartment, 76 feet; through the centre a spacious carriage drive is made, and at the base of the dome a gallery is carried at a considerable elevation; the ascent is made by a series of steps under rustic arches, and overhanging blocks of gritstone, covered with orchideous, ferns, and a variety of other rare plants. This immense mountain of glass, in form a parellelogram, took no less than seventy thousand square feet of glass to cover it, which is cut in slips of 4 feet long, and 6 inches wide; the interior is filled with an endless variety of all that is rare and beautiful; the luxuriance and magnitude of the tropical plants and the immense area they occupy, form a pleasing contrast to the tender climber, stretching its delicate branches, and hanging in graceful festoons, fringed with a profusion of blossoms of the most brilliant hues. The extreme loftiness and airiness of the glassy domes, admitting such an effulgence of light on all sides, that one is disposed to fancy oneself transplanted to a scene of enchantment. All its floral and choice productions are planted in a soil suitable to the nature of each species. in open borders, and the temperature so managed in its application to the different beds, as to suit the character of the plant.

THE WATERWORKS,

Nearer the south front of the house, a jet d'eau throws up a column of water to the height of ninety feet; but the Emperor Fountain, not generally shown, is the most magnificent one in Europe. It attains the amazing height of 267 feet. Walks have been carried through the wood which clothes the hall on the east of the building, carried in circuitous directions to diminish the steepness of the ascent. The principal walks are thirty feet in width; these and the pleasure grounds are ornamented with sculptured figures and vases. On the most lofty part of this eminence is the Hunting Tower; this building is seen at a distance of many miles, and when his Grace is resident at Chatsworth, a flag is displayed on its turrets. It is supposed to have been erected as a station where the female visitants could enjoy the spectacle of a stag hunt without incurring the dangers attendant on the chase; it is a square tower, ninety feet high, with a rounded tower at each angle.

As an addition to the Waterworks, temple, and grand cascade, the Cyclopian Aqueduct has a most magnificent effect, and forms one of the most striking objects of this wonderful place. It is built on a rugged cliff at a considerable elevation above the waterworks, and in an eastern line with them; the design is to form a waterfall of about 150 feet, close upon the first reservoir, so as to form a connecting link with the waterworks. It is being constructed of the loose blocks of gritstone, which abound on the cliff, and no mortar or tool mark is suffered to appear on the exterior. The elevation of some of the arches is about 80 feet. Several are constructed.

The Gardens appropriated to the growth of fruit and vegetables extend over twelve acres of land, and these are furnished with twenty hot-houses and forcing pits. They are about half-a-mile to the north of the house on the road to Baslow, through the park. They contain many interesting objects, one of which we cannot pass over without noticing, and that is the Victoria Regia House, a new and beautiful structure of Sir Joseph Paxton's own conception. It was erected solely for the growth of this Water Lily, and is a short parallelogram, of 68 feet 5 in. by 48 feet 9in. Sir Joseph Paxton was the first to flower this fine plant; the first of which with one of the leaves nearly six feet in diameter, was presented to Her Majesty the Queen, on the 9th of November, 1849.

The Flower Gardens have also been greatly enlarged, and laid out under the superintendence of Sir Joseph Paxton, and surround the house. The style of the gardens on the west front is Oriental, and they are enriched with eight stone baskets, elegantly sculptured, for shrubs and flowers, thirty-two feet square each. In the pleasure grounds there is a Spanish chesnut, planted by the Archduke (late the Emperor of Russia) Nicholas, and a variegated sycamore, planted by his brother, the Archduke Michael, in commemoration of their visit to Chatsworth—the former in 1816, and the latter in 1818.

Perhaps in nothing is his Grace's truly noble and patriotic endeavours so fully apparent as in the Arboretum, which is on a large scale. Its object is to naturalize every species of foreign tree and shrub. Thousands of them have been already planted, arranged in classes and species, on the sunny cliffs of Chatsworth, the towering crags and forests protecting them from the keen north and east winds, with convenient pools of water made here and there amongst these exotic beds to furnish the requisite supply of water. It is matter of astonishment, on every mazy turn up the cliff, to find both sides adorned with trees and shrubs from every climate. The immense cost has been of small consideration; experienced persons have been sent to the Himalayas, North and South America, and elsewhere, for plants. Hence Chatsworth gardens form an admirable finishing school for young men; and such is the celebrity of these gardens, grounds, and conservatory, that even foreigners come here to receive instruction in the art of horticulture. This is a high compliment to the taste and abilities of Sir Joseph Paxton, M.P., who has had the entire management of this princely establishment for many years, who resides at Barbrook Hall, a new and beautiful Anglo Italian Villa, recently erected on a large scale, with a handsome tower and suitable offices. Its situation is one of extreme beauty, being surrounded with flowers of every hue, shrubs and rare exotics arranged in open borders, and in every imaginable form which renders it a perfect model of taste and elegance.

The celebrated Marshal Tallard, who was taken prisoner on the plains of Hochstedt, near Blenheim, by the Duke of Marlborough, in 1704, remained a prisoner in this country during a period of seven years. He was invited by the Duke of Devonshire to Chatsworth, and nobly entertained by him for several days. On departing, he paid his Grace this pleasing compliment—"My Lord Duke, when I compute the days of my captivity in England, I shall leave out those I have passed at Chatsworth." In September, 1768, the King of Denmark visited Chatsworth, and was entertained there with great splendour, during his tour through the north of England. The celebrated philosopher, Thomas Hobbes, passed a great portion of his life at Chatsworth, under the patronage of the first Earls of Devonshire.

Her Majesty, Queen Victoria, with an illustrious suite, visited Chatsworth in the beginning of December, 1843, when it was the scene of unparalleled display and grandeur. Any attempt to describe the illumination of the grand conservatory and pleasure grounds on that occasion would be presumptuous. His Grace the late Duke of Wellington observed in reference to it—"I have travelled Europe through and through, and witnessed many scenes of surpassing grandeur on many occasions, but never did I see so magnificent a coup d'œil as that extended before me."

In passing through Chatsworth, several rooms are pointed out which it is said were appropriated to the use of the Queen of Scots, on her occasional visits here. On the lawn directly opposite the south front of Chatsworth, is a copy of Canova's Endymion, by Sir Francis Chantrey, a finely executed work.

At the south-west extremity of the park, was erected in 1855, a Russian cottage, after the model of a Russian farm sent by the late Emperor of Russia to His Grace. It is built entirely of wood, and has a very pleasing effect from the variety and harmony of the colours in the painting of the exterior. Immediately on entering the cottage, the Mode Farm will be seen from which it was built.

PILSLEY township and village, pleasantly situated upon a lofty eminence, 2½ miles N.E. from Bakewell, 1 mile N.W. from Edensor, contains 447A. 2R. 22P. of tithe-free land, 78 houses, and 339 inhabitants, of whom 180 were males and 159 females, of whom many are employed at Chatsworth; rateable value £622 3s. 0d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, which is freehold, and the principal owner; but a few others are owners. Extensive prospects are obtained here. A public school is supported by his Grace.

CHARITIES.—Edward Ripon, by will, 1653, gave 10s. yearly, issuing out of Overhiddy Field, in Pilsley, now the property of the Duke of Devonshire, whose agent pays 10s. to the overseer of the poor, by whom it is distributed on St. Thomas's day, to ten poor men and women.

William Peniston, by indenture, 1738, granted to Nathaniel Woodhouse, and two others, a rent charge of 10s., issuing out of Bradley Close, on trust, to pay the above sum into the hands of the overseer of Pilsley, a week before Christmas day, to be yearly laid out as follows:—viz., 16s. in buying twelve sixpenny loaves of bread, and 4s. yearly in buying sixteen threepenny loaves, to be brought by a baker, on the morning of Christmas day, yearly, to the parish church of Edensor, and after service, the said twelve sixpenny loaves given to twelve of the poorest inhabitants belonging to Pilsley, and the said sixteen threepenny loaves to be given to sixteen of the poorest children in Pilsley; no more than two loaves to be given to one family. The Tenant of the close pays the rent charge, which is distributed as above.

EYAM, a parish with the townships of Eyam, Foolow, and Woodland Eyam, which together contain 4241 acres of land, and in 1851 had 364 houses and 1580 inhabitants, of whom 792 were males and 788 females; rateable value £4878 9s. 5d.

EYAM, a township and romantic village, 6 miles N. from Bakewell, 4 miles E. from Tideswell, 12 miles S.S.W. from Sheffield, and the same distance N.N.E. from Buxton, forms a long street, running from east to west in a serpentine form. The village is said to be built on a series of caverns, many of which have been explored to a considerable extent, chiefly for the beautiful stalactitious petrefactions with which they abound. Previous to the enclosure in 1801 a considerable portion of the land was moorland. The township now contains 2258 acres of land, and in 1851 had 240 houses and 1079 inhabitants, of whom 534 were males and 545 females; rateable value £3006 11s. 7d. The Duke of Devonshire, the Marquis of Chandos, and Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., are joint lords of the manor and patrons of the living. The principal owners are Thos. Burgoyne, Esq., Thos. Gregory, Esq., Lord Denman, Peter Wright, Esq., J. A. Shuttleworth, Esq., and Eaglesfield Smith. Esq., with several smaller owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a venerable stone edifice, overgrown with ivy, contains nave, chancel, side aisles, and square tower with four rich and deep toned bells. The interior fittings are neat and substantial, and it contains a small organ, erected a few years ago, and an ancient stone font lined with lead. A mural monument in the chancel, dated 1694, perpetuates the memory of John Wright, Esq. Others have been erected to the ancestors of M. M. Middleton, Esq., of Leam Hall. An alabaster monument remembers Mary, daughter of Smithson Green, Esq., of Brosterfield, who died May, 1777. A plain stone, inscribed with T. B., denotes the resting place of Thomas Birds, Esq., of Eyam, a celebrated antiquarian. The churchyard is ornamented with lofty Linden trees, which give it an air of quiet repose, and form an appropriate shelter to the sacred precincts of the dead. Amongst the objects of general interest is the tomb of Mrs. Mompesson, who died during the memorable plague of 1666. Opposite the chancel door stands an intricately ornamented cross of Saxon work, enriched with human figures, and various elaborate designs of interlaced knotwork. Its present height is about eight feet, and the upper part of the shaft is wanting; but as a relic of antiquity, its style of workmanship, and state of preservation, is superior to any other of the same period. On a stone on the west side of the tower is the following ancient inscription,— which has been the subject of many conjectures, but the prevailing opinion is that the letters C. W, are intended for Church Warden, and the other letters the intitials of the then churchwardens, but what the figures mean we are unable to explain. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £13 15s. 5d., now £226, in the incumbency of the Rev. Edward Benj. Bagshawe, M.A., for whom the Rev. Edmund V. Amery, M.A., officiates and resides at the rectory, a commodious mansion near the Church, erected by the Rev. E. Seward about 90 years ago, has been considerably improved by the present rector. The Methodists have a small chapel at the east end of the village. Many of the inhabitants are employed in silk weaving. The Free school was rebuilt in 1826, but is at the present time closed. A Mechanics' Institute was established in 1824, in connection with which is a Subscription Library, containing 766 vols., with 30 members who pay 3d. per month each; Mr. Wm. Wood, author of the "History and Antiquities of Eyam," is librarian. EYAM formerly had a market, which has long been obselete; but Fairs are held April 13th, Thursday after the last Sunday in August, and October 18th. The Feast is held on the last Sunday in August.

C W
TB. WC. TCPT

Eyam Hall, a handsome Elizabethan mansion, situated a little W. of the Church, was built about the year 1500, by the ancestors of the present owner and occupier, Peter Wright, Esq. The Firs, a neat secluded residence a little north of the village, is occupied by the Misses Wright. Eyam View, an elegant mansion at the western extremity of the village, is the residence and property of Thos. Gregory, Esq. Hollow Brook Cottage, situated a little N.E. of the village, is an extremely pleasant residence on a gentle elevation overlooking the village. It is occupied by Mr. James Wills, as a boarding and day school.

The manor Aiune was parcel of the ancient demense of the crown; and having been granted by King Henry I., with other manors in the Peak, to Wm. Peveril, was held under him by an ancestor of the Mortynes; Roger de Mortyne sold it about or after the year 1307, to Thos. de Furnivall, Lord of Hallamshire. A coheiress of Furnivall brought it to the Nevills, and a coheiress of Nevill, to John Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury. The Countess of Pembroke became possessed of it as one of the coheiresses of Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury, who died in 1616; from her it passed to her grandson, Sir Geo. Saville. It remained in the Sayille family till the death of Wm. Saville, second Marquis of Halifax, in the year 1700, who left three daughters his coheiresses, amongst whom, after their marriage, the estates were divided by a partition deed, in the sixteenth year of George II. Of these three coheiresses, Anne married Charles Lord Bruce, son and heir of Thomas Earl of Aylesbury; Dorothy married Richard Earl of Burlington; and Mary married Sackville, Earl of Thanet. It is generally supposed, that it was in consequence of the rich mines of lead ore, discovered at Eyam about the beginning of the eighteenth century, that these noblemen agreed to hold the manor of Eyam jointly, and to present a rector to the living of which they had the gift in turns. The joint portion of the manor belonging to Lord Bruce, became the property of the Duke of Chandos, from whom it passed by marriage to the Duke of Buckingham. The portion belonging to the Earl of Burlington, became, through marriage, the property of the Devonshire family; and the other has remained in the family of the Earl of Thanet. Besides the manorial rights and the gift of the living, the lords of the manor have little or no property in Eyam. Most of the land, and other property, had been sold by Sir Geo. Saville, two centuries ago. There is strong evidence, particularly on the south side of Eyam, of mining operations having been carried to a considerable extent in past ages. Through the virtue of a charter granted by King John, many of the old freehold tenures of Eyam are exempt from the general law of the King's Field. Of the ore obtained from the mines in the whole parish of Eyam, the lot which is every thirteenth dish, is claimed and taken by the lords of the manor. One penny a dish belongs the rector, and a small exaction called cope, is paid by the purchaser of the ore to the barmaster; these with a trifle paid to the rector and the lords of the manor, for what is provincially called hillock stuff, are the lots and tithes paid by the mines at Eyam. The lords of the manors of Eyam and Stoney Middleton, hold one Great Barmote Court, annually in April, alternately at the Bull's Head Inn, Eyam, and the Moon Inn, Stoney Middleton, at which the steward, Joseph Hall, Esq., of Castleton, attends; James Longsdon, Esq., of Little Longstone is barmaster. The Edgeside vein of ore was discovered about 150 years ago, but was not worked in the parish of Eyam until some time after its discovery. In the space of fifty or sixty years, it was cut for upwards of two miles in length, but dipping very fast eastward, it speedily reached the water, and could no longer be successfully worked. A sough or level was brought to it from the river Derwent about 90 years since, but did not answer the general expectations. The quantity of metal obtained from this vein, may be judged of, by the fact, that it enhanced the annual income of the rector from £300 to £1,800 a year, and this for a long time. Other veins in the vicinity have been very productive, but nearly all have long been overpowered with water. The Watergrove Mine, just within the parish of Eyam, was by far the richest in the neighbourhood. A steam engine of 300 horses' power was erected on this mine, which has enabled them partially to compete with the water.

Lumps of ore, from three to five hundred weight, have been obtained from this mine. The oldest lead works in the vicinity of Eyam, are the Rake, extending over a large tract of land, south of the village.

About half a century ago, the Morewood Sough was projected by a family of that name, with a view of more effectually clearing the Great Eyam Edge vein of water. It commenced at Stony Middleton, and after carrying it about half a mile, the project was suspended for some years, but in 1843, the Morewood Sough Company was formed, and the work was resumed for a short time, but was again abandoned on account of the great expense. About ten years ago, the Eyam Mining Company was formed by a number of gentlemen, principally inhabitants of Sheffield, who purchased the valuable mineral property in Eyam, and who are now working the same to very great advantage, not only to themselves, but also to the inhabitants of Eyam and the neigbouring villages. They have erected a steam engine which enables them to proceed more rapidly with the work, and find employment for more than 100 men and boys. Immense wealth was formerly obtained from these mines, till stopped by water, and the most sanguine expectations are formed by the present company of their ultimate success. The Morewood Sough when finished, (from the circuitous route obliged to be taken) will be from two and a half to three miles in length. There is no doubt, from the great distance already driven, at a cost of above £5,000, the present company will complete this extensive work, and proof will be made whether the traditionary history of the riches of this great vein will be verified; Jno. Pitt, Esq., is the president of the Company, Mr. Jno. Fordham, treasurer, Mr. Chas. Esam, secretary, and Mr. Geo. Maltby, agent.

Hay Cliff Mine, in Eyam Edge, now no longer worked, was once the grand depository of that extraordinay phenomenon, in the mineral world, provincially called Slickensides. The external appearance of this curious species of galena is well known wherever mineralogy has been studied. At the present time, good specimens of it are extremely rare, and can only be met with in cabinets that have been long established. In those mines where it has most prevailed, it exhibits but little variety, either in form or character. An upright pillar of limestone-rock, intermixed with calcareous spar, contains the exploding ore; the surface is thinly coated over with lead, which resembles a covering of plumbago, and it is extremely smooth, bright, and even. The effects of this extraordinary mineral are not less singular than terrific. A blow with a hammer, a stroke or a scratch with a miner's pick, are sufficient to rend the rocks asunder with which it is united. The stroke is immediately succeeded by a crakling noise, accompanied with a sound not unlike the hum of a swarm of bees; shortly afterwards an explosion follows, so loud and appalling, that even the miners, though a hardy and daring race of men, turn pale and tremble at the shock. In the year 1738, an explosion took place in the Haycliff mine, when two hundred and fifty barrels of material were blown out at one blast, each barrel containing 350 pounds weight. During the explosion, the earth had a tremulous motion, as if shook by an earthquake. In many of the led mines in the vicinity of Eyam, the earthquake which destroyed Lisbon, on Saturday, Nov. 1st, 1755, was sensibly felt. "Two miners who were employed in drifts about sixty fathoms deep, were so terrified at the shock, that they dared not attempt to climb the mine; five shocks in the course of about twenty minutes succeeded each other; every shock was followed by a loud rumbling noise. All the shafts remained entire, but the drifts were scattered over with minerals which had fallen from the sides and roof."

From the word Tor, said to be of Phœnecian origin, and the word Bole, anciently signifying the hearth on which the lead was smelted—words in common use at Eyam—we are led to conclude that the lead mines have been worked from a very early period, and probably by a colony of foreigners. On Eyam moor small pieces of lead have frequently been found; one weighing fourteen pounds was met with a few years ago. About forty years since, near Leam Hall, a piece of lead was found weighing between thirty and forty pounds; it was thirty-six inches long, and had a hook attached to it. In the year 1814, a great number of silver and copper coins were found in Eyam Dale, bearing the incriptions of Probus, Gallienus, and Victorinus, Roman emperors. Ancient coins, spears, and other implements of war have frequently been found in different places of this interesting locality. That the Saxons penetrated among the mountains of the Peak, and resided in and around Eyam, is evident, for every little eminence has a Saxon name or termination. Lich is a Saxon word signifying a dead body, and the gate into the church yard through which the funerals pass is known by the name of Lich-Gate. The principal road into Eyam was once the Lyd-gate, now called Ligget. Lyd implies to cover or protect, and at this entrance there was a strong gate where watch and ward was kept every night. Every effective man who was a householder in the village, was bound to stand in succession at this gate from nine o'clock at night to six in the morning, to question any person who might appear, and to give alarm if danger was apprehended. The watch had a large wooden halbert or "watch bill," for protection, and when he left watch in the morning he took the "watch bill" and reared it against the door of the person whose turn to watch succeeded him. The ancient cross in the churchyard formerly stood in that part of the village called "The Cross," another stood in Eyam Edge, and one at Cross lane, both of which have been destroyed. The ancient names and customs, so well described by Mr. W. Wood in his history, prove the great antiquity of Eyam, and are also applicable to many other parts of the High Peak. The village of Eyam, picturesquely seated at the foot of a bold eminence, contains some good mansions and neat cottages, overshadowed by spreading sycamores, which gives it a rural and interesting appearance. A mountain range, crowned with thriving plantations, rising to an immense height, runs parallel with the village, and forms an impenetrable screen to ward off the northern blast. A little further north, rises Sir William, one of the most remarkable elevations in the county. From the summit of which, the eye ranges over countless hills and verdant dales, while Mam Tor, Ax Edge, Masson, and Kinderscout are seen rising in the distance.

Eyam Dale abounds with elevated rocks, interesting caverns, and picturesque beauty. "Cucklet Church," says Rhodes, "is a rocky projection from a steep hill, and excavated through in different directions to the arches, in the midst of a romantic dell, and surrounded with the rocks and mountains of the Peak. Here Mompesson administered the consolations of religion to his mourning people, during a period of sorrow and suffering almost unparalleled in history. Cucklet Church consists of a flinty combination of what the miners denominate Chert Balls, and of consequence it is almost impenetrably hard. The Dell in which it is placed is rich with verdure, wood, and rock. Its steep and rugged sides are embellished with the hazel, the wild rose, the dogberry, and the yew, beautifully chequered with the light and silvery branches of the birch, and the more ample foliage and deeper colour of the oak and elm. The tall aspiring ash, which, from its prevalence in this part of Derbyshire may be called the Tree of the Peak, is likewise profusely scattered throughout the dell. The ash, indeed, is peculiarly entitled to the appellation here bestowed upon it. Wherever a cottage rears its head there flourishes the ash; wherever the side of a hill or the base of a rock is adorned with trees, there wave the graceful branches of the ash; and the rivers that circulate through the dales of Derbyshire have their banks decorated, and their various windings marked by this graceful tree, which uniformly characterises the woodland scenery of the Peak. The Dell opens into Middleton Dale, the wildness of which it softens and improves by its milder features. Here its extremest width prevails; nearer Eyam, the two sides rapidly approximate, and a little above Cucklet Church, they form the entrance into a narrow chasm, called by the villagers the Salt Pan. The name is sufficiently undignified, but the picture it presents is exquisite of its kind. Two perpendicular rocks terminate the dell, and on their nearest approach, where they meet within a few paces only, the lofty trees and thick underwood with which they are crested, cast an almost midnight darkness into the deep space that separates them, while the elm and the ash, which flourish at their base, throw their boughs athwart the gloomy cleft, and intermingle their topmost foliage with the descending branches from above. The trees in this lovely dell have a majestic character, and during the summer months, the tufts of brushwood, which are scattered along its steep sides, are fancifully festooned with honeysuckles and roses."

The varied and romantic scenery of this place has distinguished the inhabitants by all the characteristics of mountainous districts, and their observance of ancient customs, and adherence to hereditary prejudices, but Mr. Wood observes,—"It is lamentable, however, that the physical condition of the inhabitants of this far-famed village is greatly inferior to that of their forefathers, the principal cause of which is the decay of the lead mines. Previously to the present century, each miner had his cow and small plot of land, to which he attended during the intervals of his work at the mine; this double employment yielded him sufficient to live in health and happiness, leaving him abundance of time for halesome recreation. The mines being under water, can no longer, in their present condition, be successfully worked, and this deplorable circumstance is fast changing the aspect and character of the village." Many interesting objects of antiquity have been found in the vicinity at various periods.

In 1856, at the Pippin mine, Eyam, belonging to the Eyam mining company, was found a beautiful and surprisingly perfect cast of a bellerophon, a fossil shell of the genus monothalamous, nearly allied to the argonaute. This splended relic is deposited in the Eyam library. About thirty years ago, Mr. Anthony Hancock, of Foolow, found, in a limestone quarry near Eyam, a petrified snake, coiled up in a ring, very perfect. A little more than forty years ago, Mr. James Wood, of Eyam, on cutting a large sandstone on Eyam moor, found a petrified fish, about a foot in length, perfect in every part The Druidical remains, a little north of Eyam, prove, to a certain degree, the high antiquity of the place. All the tract of land called the moor, was until its enclosure, literally covered with these relics. The Druidical temple, or circle, on that part of the moor called Whetwithins, is frequently visited. It consists of sixteen oblong sandstones standing in an upright position, forming a circle of about thirty yards in diameter. The stones are nearly equal in size, standing about a yard high, except on the north side, where two or three are enveloped in heath, and therefore appear, though clearly visible, not so large as the others. This circle is surrounded by a mound of earth about three feet high, in which the stones are placed. In the centre there stood, until some years back, a large stone, which was no doubt the altar on which sacrifices were made. It was also the Maen Gorsedd, or stone of assembly. The ceremony used at the opening of the Gorseddaw, or meetings, was the sheathing of the sword on the Maen Gorsedd, at which the Druid priests assisted. All the places of meeting were, like this, set apart by forming a circle of earth and stones around the altar, which was called Cylch Cyngrair, or circle of federation, and the priest or bard who recited the traditions and poems was named the Dudgeinaid, who, dressed in a unicoloured robe, always commenced his recitations by one of the following mottoes—"In the eye of the light, and in the face of the sun"—"The truth against the world." Here the ancient briton displayed his eloquence, knowledge, and patriotism. In the immediate vicinity of this circle there are at least twelve more, each surrounded with circular mounds of earth, and some with stone. Most of these, not more than twelve yards in diameter, must be sepulchral; and there appears in all of them a large heap of stones in the centre. Contiguous to the large circle, until a few years ago, there was one of the most interesting barrows in the Peak of Derbyshire. It covered an area of ground nearly thirty yards in diameter; it was in the form of a cone, ten or twelve yards high, when perfect, and was composed wholly of small stones. On opening this barrow many years ago, an unbaked urn was found containing ashes, bones, an arrow head of flint, and a little charcoal, with which the body had been burned. There is, in the neighbourhood, a very popular tradition of some great chief being buried in this barrow, and it has frequently been explored; nothing has, however, been found, except the urn, but in the vicinity, spears, arrow heads, axes, hatchets, and many remains of antiquity have been turned up. About a mile west from this barrow there was, about fifty years ago, another of great dimensions. It stood on Hawley's piece. When the moor was enclosed, it was carried away to make fences. An urn of large size was found near the centre, on the ground, and was carried away to the residence of the person who found it, but was afterwards broken and buried, from a superstitious notion that it was unlucky to have it in the house. Many urns have at various times been found around Eyam. About fifty years ago, Mr. S. Furniss found one richly decorated, which contained nothing but ashes. Not many years ago, two men discovered an urn surrounded with stones; one of the parties wishing to secure it entire, went some distance for a spade; in the meantime, the other, thinking it might contain some treasure, dashed it to pieces, when, to his mortification, he found it contained some ashes and two copper coins, on one of which was inscribed Maximianus, and some other characters not legible. About fifty years ago, one was found at Riley, in which were some ancient weapons and arrow heads of flint. Near the same place, two barrows or cairns were destroyed, in which were found urns containing ashes and bones. Many customs of the ancient Druids still remain amongst the villagers of Eyam. One of the incantations practiced at their festivals was to anoint the forehead of the sick with May-dew, which was carefully gathered at day-break;—hence the prevailing custom of anointing deceased children with May-dew Another part of the ceremony of the great Druidical festival consisted in carrying long poles of mountain ash, decorated with flowers; and it is the practice of the villagers to hang branches of flowers from the cottage windows on May-day. Singing at funerals, and other observances, have purely a Druidical origin.

Eyam has produced several literary characters. John Nightbroder, a native of Eyam, highly distinguished for his literary taste, founded the house of Carmelites, or White Friars, at Doncaster, in the year 1350. Miss Anna Seward, the poetess, was born at Eyam in the year 1747; the various poetical works of this lady are universally admired; her father, the Rev. Thomas Seward, rector of Eyam, published several works of considerable learning and taste. Richard Furness published a history of this, his native village; the Rag Bag, and Medicus Magus, are amongst his poetical works. William Wood, the author of the History and Antiquities of Eyam, with several other productions, is now a resident in the village. The late Thomas Birds, Esq., of Eyam, well known for his antiquarian researches, possessed one of the finest collections of fossils in the kingdom. Caverns abound in the vicinity of Eyam, which extend to a considerable distance; some of them are adorned with stalactitious petrifactions, and are objects worthy of the attention of the curious.

We now come to that dreadful scourge which visited Eyam in the years 1665 and 1666, by which the village was nearly depopulated, viz.—the Plague, and in giving that portion of its history we shall avail ourselves of the interesting account written by Mr. Wood on the subject: he says "The desolation of Eyam by the plague, in the years 1665 and 1666, has, from the time of its occurrence, always been considered a singular and remarkable event, for its ravages were far more appalling and fatal at Eyam, than any other pestilence hitherto recorded. From the autumn of 1664 to December 1665, about one-sixth of the population of London fell victims to this fatal pestilence; but at Eyam five-sixths of the inhabitants were carried off in a few months of the summer of 1666.

A box containing tailors' patterns in cloth, and it is said some old clothes, were sent from London to a tailor who resided in a small house at the west end of the church yard. The box arrived at the tailor's house on the second or third of September, 1665. The common belief is that it was opened by George Vicars, a journeyman tailor, as he was the first victim who fell a sacrifice to this fatal malady. In removing the articles he observed how very damp they were, and therefore hung them before the fire to dry; while he was watching them he was suddenly seized with a violent sickness, and other symptoms of disease, which greatly alarmed the family. On the second day he grew seriously worse; at intervals he was delirious, and large swellings began to rise about the neck and groin.

Medical aid was of no avail. On the third day of his illness, the fatal token—the plague spot—appeared on his breast, and he died in dreadful agonies the following night, the 6th of September, 1665. Thus began in Eyam the plague, the most awful of all diseases, which after being in some measure checked by the severity of the following winter, spread amazingly, and eventually left the village nearly desolate. On the last day of September, six persons had perished, and by the middle of October, twelve more. Consternation and terror reigned throughout the village. Towards the latter end of October, the pestilence increased, doleful lamentations issued from the cottages containing the infected persons; the distress of those families was unimaginable; few or none would visit them; they were avoided in the street; all dreaded coming in contact even with those belonging to the families where the infection reigned! they were glanced at with fearful apprehension, and their privations arising therefrom almost defy description. During this awful month twenty-two died. In November, seven died. In December, a great snow is said to have fallen, accompanied with a hard and severe frost. The distress of the inhabitants was very great, and the pestilence rather increased, for nine died.

At the commencement of 1666, the villagers began to rejoice in the hope of being delivered from the awful scourge, as the pestilence was confined to two houses; four however died in January. In February, eight died and many were affeeted."

"We must here advert to two unrivalled characters who may be justly said to have been by their joint exertions, the principal instruments by whom Derbyshire and the neighbouring counties were delivered from the desolating plague,—the Rev. Thomas Stanley, and the Rev. William Mompesson. We shall see when we come to the greatest fury of the plague, that the salvation of the surrounding country originated in the wisdom of these two worthy divines. These two illnstrious characters, throughout the fury of the pestilence, forsook not their flock, but visited, counselled, and exhorted them in their sufferings, alleviated their miseries, and held fast to their duties on the very threshold of death. In March, the plague had carried off fifty-six souls; in the succeeding month nine died, and in May three. At the commencement of June, this deadly monitor awoke from his short slumber, and with desolating steps stalked forth from house to house, filling the hearts of all with dreadful forebodings; despair seized every soul. Horror and dismay enveloped the village. Terror overwhelmed the hearts of the villagers. Mrs. Mompesson the rector's wife, threw herself and her two chlldren at her husband's feet, imploring their immediate departure from the devoted place! He raised her from his feet, and told her that his duty to his suffering and diminishing flock—that the indelible stain which would rest upon his memory by deserting them in the hour of danger—and that the awful responsibility to his Maker, for the charge he had undertaken, were considerations with him of more weight and importance than life itself! He then urged his weeping partner to take the two children and fly to some place of refuge till the plague was stayed. She, however, resisted his persuasion, and declared nothing should induce her to leave him; the children were afterwards, by mutual consent, sent to a relative in Yorkshire. At this period of the calamity, the inhabitants began to think of escaping death by flight. Mompesson, on a visible manifestation in the whole mass to flee, was aroused; he energetically remonstrated with them on the danger of flight; he told them of the fearful consequences that would ensue; that the safety of the surrounding country was in their hands; that the invisible seeds of the disease lay concealed in their clothing; that it was impossible for them to escape death by flight. He told them that he would write to all the influential persons in the neighbourhood for aid, and would by every means in his power endeavour to alleviate their sufferings, and remain with them and sacrifice his life, rather than be instrumental in desolating the surrounding country. The inhabitants, with a super-human courage, gave up all thoughts of flight. One can scarcely decide," says Mr. Samuel Roberts, "in this case, which most to admire—the wisdom of the pastor or the obedience of his flock. It was a sacrifice in either case, which we are utterly unable duly to appreciate. I can form no conception of any instance in mere human beings more strongly proving the blessed effects of true Christianity than this, of faith no stronger, no obedience more perfect."

Mompesson immediately wrote to the Earl of Devonshire, stating the particulars of the calamity, and adding, that he was certain that he could prevail on his suffering and hourly diminishing flock to confine themselves within the precincts of the village, if they could be supplied with victuals and other necessary articles, and thereby prevent the pestilence from spreading. The noble Earl, in his answer, expressed deep commisseration for the sufferings of the inhabitants, and assured Mompesson nothing should be wanting on his part to mitigate them. This worthy nobleman, who remained at Chatsworth during the whole time of the plague, generously ordered the sufferers to be supplied with all kinds of necessaries, agreeable to a certain plan. A circle, extending about half a mile round the village, noted by particular and well known stones and hills, was marked out, beyond which it was solemnly agreed that no one of the villagers should proceed, whether infected or not. The places where articles were deposited were appointed in different directions, in order that the pestilential effuvia might not be directed all in one way. A well or rivulet, northward of Eyam, one of the places where articles were deposited, is to this day called "Mompesson's Brook." These articles were brought very early in the morning, by persons from the adjoining villages, who, when they had delivered them beside the well, fled with the greatest speed; persons set apart by Mompesson and the Rev. Thomas Stanley, (who had been rector of Eyam from 1644 to 1662, and still continued to reside there, and assisted the Rev. William Mompesson in this dreadful calamity,) fetched the articles left, and when they took money, deposited it in the well, and in certain distant troughs to be purified. The persons who received the money took care to wash it well. An account was left at this and other places of the progress of the disease, with the number of deaths, and other particulars. When money was sent, it was only for some extra or particular articles; the provisions, and many other necessaries, were supplied, it is generally asserted, by the Earl of Devonshire. The Cliff, between Stoney Middleton and Eyam, was one of the places appointed for this purpose.

A large stone trough stood there, in which money and other things were deposited for purification. It is said that no one ever crossed this cordon sanitaire from within or without, during the awful calamity; this however is not precisely correct. It must be admitted that it was to the prescribing of this boundary and other precautions attendant thereon, that the country around was saved from this most horrible pestilence. The annals of mankind afford no instance of such magnanimous conduct in a joint number of persons; and ages pass away without being honoured by such an immortal character as Mompesson, who while the black sword of pestilence was dealing death around him, voluntarily "put his life in his hand" from an exalted sense of his duty,—for the salvation of the country. Towards the end of June, the plague began to rage more fearfully. The passing bell ceased, the churchyard was no longer resorted to for interment, and the church door closed; a half-made grave, or hole hastily dug in the fields, received the putrid corpse ere life was quite extinct. At this juncture, Mompesson deemed it dangerous to assemble in the church, and he afterwards met his diminishing flock in the Delf. Here the faithful shepherd lifted up his voice to the God of Mercy to stay the deadly pest, whilst the surrounding hills echoed the fervent responses of his sorrowing flock. Thus they assembled in the sacred dell, while each succeeding Sabbath told the tale of death. From that period, the arch in which Mompesson stood and administered the consolations of religion has been called Cucklet Church.

During the dreadful months of July, August, and September, the terrific sufferings of the inhabitants almost defy description. Every family, while any survived, buried its own dead; and one hapless woman in the space of a few days, dug the graves for, and buried with her own hands, her husband and six children. Appalling as such a circumstance must be, it is, however, only one out of the very many of that eventful time. The village was unfrequented; it stood as it were out of the world; none came to sympathise with its suffering inhabitants; it was regarded and avoided as the valley of death! On the clouds that hung gloomily over the village were written "Pestilence and Death," at which terrific inscription the approaching stranger turned aside and precipitately fled. Thus, helpless and alone, perished the villagers of Eyam. As we stated before every family up to July had been, from dire necessity, compelled to bury their own dead; but when, as was now frequently the case, the last of a family died, some person had to undertake the charge of instantly burying the corpse. For this necessary purpose, nature seemed to have fitted the iron constitution and gigantic stature of Marshal Howe: when he learned that some one was dying, he immediately proceeded to the garden or adjoining field and opened a grave, then hastened to the house, where the victim lay still warm with life, and tying one end of a cord round the neck of the corpse, he threw the other over his shoulder, and dragged it forth through the streets to the grave, and with "unhallowed haste" lightly covered it with earth. The money, furniture, and other effects of the deceased were his unenviable remuneration. Such was the awful occupation of Marshall Howe, during this fearful calamity; he however tasted the bitter cup of affliction by burying an affectionate wife and an only son; still he continued in the office of burier of the dead, and survived the plague many years.

A few of the last days of July were really dreadful; five and sometimes six died in one day, and in the whole month fifty-seven. But it was in August that the pest bared his arm for the most deadly slaughter. All now expected death; no one cherished a hope of escape: and a mournful gloom settled on the features of the few who ventured to pace the lonely street.

"The very children had imbibed a look
Of such unutterable woe, as told
A tale of sorrows indescribable."

As August advanced, the mortality increased with inconceivable rapidity. Towards the latter end of the fatal month, near four-fifths of the inhabitants had been swept away. Mompesson during the whole time, unremittingly went from house to house comforting as much as possible his dying flock. This admirable and worthy man was now destined to drink of the sickening cup which had been passing round the village. On the morning of 22nd August, Catherine his beloved partner was seized with the distemper, Mompesson seemed for awhile unable to stand the terrible shock; he stood at her bedside a statue of despair. He, however, after the first paroxysm of grief was past, began, with a fortitude unexampled, to use every means imaginable to arrest the progress of the disease; but alas! in vain. She struggled with the invincible pest until the morning of the 24th, when this lovely and amiable lady fell a victim to the plague, in the twenty-seventh year of her age. Great as was the calamity that had visited and was still visiting almost every family, and terrible as was the devastation of the pestilence, yet the few inhabitants that were left seemed to forget their own sufferings in the death of Mrs. Mompesson.

——"One lightning-winged cry
Shot through the hamlet, and a wailing grew
Wilder than when the plague-fiend first drew nigh,
One troublous house; and from all quarters fly
The wretched remnant who had ceased to weep;
But sorrow, which had drained their bosoms dry,
Found yet fresh fountains in the spirit deep,
Wringing out burning tears that lov'd one's couch to steep."

They had witnessed in her worthy husband so much sympathy and benevolence, so much attention and humane feeling in his daily visits from house to house; hence their participation in the sorrows of their beloved pastor. The number of deaths which took place in the month of August was seventy-eight, out of a population considerably under two-hundred on the first of the month. The houses from the east end of the village to the middle, were now nearly all empty. The few inhabitants of the western part of the village shut themselves up in their houses, nor could they be prevailed on to cross a small rivulet eastward, which runs under the street at Fidler's Bridge, and it is commonly asserted that the plague never crossed it westward. In September it raged with unmitigated fury, and twenty-four were carried off during the month. On the 11th of October, 1666, this awful minister of death totally ceased, after having swept away five-sixths of the population of Eyam. The number of those who perished is stated in the parish register to be 259. This is certainly appalling, when we consider the population at the commencement only amounted to 330.

A letter written by the venerable Mompesson, dated November 20th, 1666, says—"The condition of the place has been so sad that I persuade myself it did exeeed all history and example. Our town has become a Golgotha,—the place of a skull; and had there not been a small remnant, we had been as Sodom, and like unto Gomorrah. My ears never heard such doleful lamentations, my nose never smelt such horrid smells, and my eyes never beheld such ghastly spectacles. Here have been 76 families visited within my parish, out of which 259 persons died, now (blessed be God) all our fears are over, for none have died of the plague since the eleventh of October, and the pest-houses have long been empty. I intend (God willing) to spend this week in seeing all woollen clothes fumed and purified, as well for the satisfaction as for the safety of the country. Here have been such burning of goods that the like I think was never known. For my part I have scarcely apparel to shelter my body, having wasted more than I needed, merely for example. During this dreadful visitation, I have not had the least symptom of disease, nor had I ever better health. My man had the distemper, and upon the appearance of a tumour, I gave him some chemical antidotes, which operated, and after the rising broke, he was very well."

Several respectable families left the village on the first appearance of the distemper, some of whom never returned. All the villages round were filled with consternation at the appalling reports of the pestilence in Eyam, and the inhabitants of Tideswell caused a watch to be placed at the eastern entrance, to question all who came that way. A female from Orchard Bank, in Eyam, ventured to the market in Tideswell; the watch, not knowing the place, suffered her to pass, but she had scarcely reached the market when some person knew her, and "the plague! the plague!—a woman from Eyam!" resounded from all sides, and the poor woman fled, chased by an infuriated mob. The Riley Graves, the burial place of the Hancock family, about $\frac{1}{4}$ mile E. of Eyam, are on the slope of a hill, the base of which partially terminates in Eyam. The mother, after burying her husband and six children in the short space of seven days, left her now desolate home, and went to reside with her only surviving son, at Sheffield. Riley House occupies the site of a house formerly the residence of the Talbots, a family that was all carried off by the plague. The pestilence had raged ten months before it reached Riley; a dilapidated monument in the orchard of the present farm house records their deaths. The Hancocks are remembered on head-stones, which have been surrounded by a stone wall for their better security, by Thomas Burgoyne, Esq. One hundred and ninety years have now passed over since this unequalled and dreadful visitation. Most of the impressive records which marked the resting places of these moral heroes, and lay scattered in all directions in the vicinity of Eyam, have been wantonly destroyed. The annals of mankind afford no instance of such magnanimous conduct in a joint number of individuals so awfully situated; their ashes ought to have been for ever undisturbed, and every vestige of their calamities guarded from the defacing hand of time. Mompesson. after the fatal ravages of the plague, was presented with the rectory of Eakring, Nottinghamshire: a brass plate, with a Latin inscription, marks the place in the chancel, at Eakring, where his ashes repose. Though his tomb may moulder in the dust, and be forgotten, yet his memorial of humanity and devotedness to his afflicted parishioners will never perish.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Middleton, by will, 1745, devised to his two sisters two parcels of land called the Upper Lowe and the Nether Lowe, at Eyam, desiring them to settle the same in equal proportions to a schoolmaster at Eyam, to teach five poor boys and five poor girls to read and write. In consequence, a rent charge of £5 was secured by indenture, 1746, to be issuing from the two closes. They are now the property of Marmaduke Middleton Middleton, Esq., who pays the annual sum of £5 to the schoolmaster for instructing ten children, boys and girls of the township of Eyam to read and write.

Honble. and Rev. Edward Finch, D.D., formerly rector of Eyam, gave £100 to the school, for teaching five poor children of Eyam and five of the out hamlets, which sum, with £15 given by another benefactor, was laid out in purchasing land in the parish of Hope, near Bradwell, called the Long Meadow, about the year 1750, said formerly to have consisted of several small pieces, but at the inclosure, about 1807, an allotment containing between three and four acres was laid together, now let for £5 per annum, for which ten poor children are taught to read. The school premises at Eyam consist of a house in which the master resides, a large school-room, a garden and small yard adjoining, which were rebuilt by voluntary contributions in 1826. The old buildings were purchased in 1792, by the Rev. Charles Hargrave and others. On the inclosure of the commons under an act 43 George IV., about three roods were set out in respect of the school, now let at £1 10s. per annum. The Duke of Devonshire makes a voluntary donation of £2 2s. to the schoolmaster.

Honble. and Rev. Edward Finch, D.D., it is stated on the church tablet, gave £15, the interest to be paid to the poor on St. Thomas's day, and that a person gave £20 for the same purpose. It appears by the parliamentary returns, 1782, that £2 10s. of these sums had been lost. The residue, £32 10s. was lent on security of the Chesterfield and Hernston turnpike road, bearing interest at 5 per cent. The interest, £1 12s. 6d. per annum, is received by the overseer of the poor of Eyam, and distributed amongst poor people about Christmas.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the rector, which is laid out in coarse woollens and flannel, and distributed amongst the poor about Christmas.

FOOLOW, township and small ancient village, chiefly inhabited by farmers and miners, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. from Eyam, $2\frac{3}{4}$ miles E. by N. from Tideswell, contains 950 acres of good pasture land, 62 houses, and 226 inhabitants, of whom 112 were males and 114 females; rateable value £748 3s. 10d. The Duke of Devonshire is principal owner and lord of the manor. William Wyatt, Esq., Eaglesfield Smith, Esq., Lord Denman, the Trustees of Major Carleill, and Peter Wright, Esq., are also owners, besides whom are several small freeholders. The tithes were commuted in 1839 for £34, to the rector, who has a small claim on all the lead ore obtained, but the mines are at present stopped working by water. The Methodists have a small chapel, built in 1810. Bretton, a few farms on a bold eminence, 1 mile N.E. from Foolow. Bretton Clough is partly in this and partly in Woodland Eyam township. Broster Field, a district $\frac{1}{4}$ mile S. and the Water Grove lead mine, are in this township. Here is a sick society. This place is supposed to have derived its name from one Godfrey Foolow, who settled here several generations back.

WOODLAND EYAM, township of scattered farms, with Grindleford Bridge, on the Sheffield and Eyam road, where a bridge crosses the river Derwent, is 2 miles E. by N. from Eyam, and 10 miles S.S.W. from Sheffield; it contains 1,033A. 1R. 4P. of land, 62 houses, and 275 inhabitants, of whom 146 were males and 129 females; rateable value £1,123 14s. 0d. The Duke of Devonshire, J. C. Athorpe. Esq., Messrs. Edward and Arthur Nowell, Geo. Cooper, William Hallam, William Smith, Mrs. Eliz. Mower, and John Greaves, Esq., are owners, with several other small freeholders. Tithes commuted in 1845 for £57 10s. to the rector. The Methodists have a small chapel at Grindleford Bridge, erected in 1830, at a cost of £200. Goatscliff, a cliff and brook near Grindleford Bridge.

Shaw Clough, a brook on the south side, which separates this from Hope township. High Lees, a brook which separates this from Highlow township. Hazleford, 3 miles N. from Eyam, contains a few farm houses. Leam Hall, a handsome mansion 1 mile N. from Grindleford Bridge, is situated on a bold acclivity, with tasteful pleasure grounds, and commands fine views of the romantic scenery in the immediate vicinity. It is the property of J. C. Athorpe, Esq., and the seat of Thomas Burgoyne, Esq.

GLOSSOP parish forms the north-east extremity of Derbyshire; the river Etherow separating it from Cheshire on the north and north-west, and has its rise in the Alpine ridges at the north-east extremity of the county, which is also the source of the river Mersey. The river Derwent has its rise at the north-east extremity also, where for some distance it is called the Wrongsley river, and separates this county and parish from Yorkshire, after which, entering the parish of Derwent, it takes that name; the water from the east side of Kinderscout flowing to it. The river Goyt, which rises from Axe Edge, near Buxton, bounds the south-west side of the parish; and near Marple bridge the Etherow has its confluence with the Goyt, and flows to Stockport. The parish is 16 miles in length, and averages 5 miles in breadth, and is intersected by the Sheffield and Manchester Railway. It is one of the most romantic parishes in the county, particularly the wild mountainous district on its eastern side, of which a considerable portion is moorland. Its western side is a highly flourishing district, and by far the most important seat of the cotton manufacture in the county.

This extensive parish comprises the townships or hamlets of Glossop, Chinley, Bugsworth and Brownside, Chisworth, Chunall, Dinting, Hadfield, Hayfield, Ludworth, Mellor, Padfield, Simmondley and Whitfield; besides many other populous hamlets and villages. Hayfield, Mellor, and New Mills are chapelries, and a district church has been erected at Little Moor, in Whitfield hamlet. The parish is returned as containing 31876A. 1R. 30P. of land, mostly pasture, except the east side, which is chiefly moorland; it abounds in clay, stone, slate, coal, and valuable waterfalls, which have for ages coursed their way through the deep dells, their solitude being but occasionally broken by the mountain hepherd; till the ingenious and enterprising capitalists perceived that wealth flowed from the mountain rills, which speedily caused the solitude to be peopled with a teeming population, engaged in the busy scenes of commercial enterprise. In 1851, there were 5,559 houses, and 28,625 inhabitants, of whom 14,312 were males, and 14,313 females; rateable value, £60,942 19s. 3d. Pilkington dates the rise of manufactures here to the year 1784, in which year the first cotton mill was erected. The large cotton factories and other extensive establishments will be noticed in the localities in which they are respectively situated. Before the introduction of the cotton manufacture, that of woollen had made considerable progress; and we find there were no less than seven factories, and four fulling mills, only one very small woollen establishment remains, but the cotton factories are increasing and enlarging on all sides.

The manor of GLOSSOP, which extends over Glossop and its seven hamlets of Glossop Dale, viz.:—Charlesworth, Chunall, Dinting, Padfield, Simmondley and Whitfield, and Ludworth and Chisworth, belonged, as parcel of Logendale or Longdendale, to the crown, at Domesday survey. King Henry I. granted it, as a part of a still larger district of his domain of the Peak, to William Peverel, on the attainder of whose son it reverted to the crown. King Henry II. gave the manor of Glossop, with the church and its other appurtenances, in the year 1157, to the abbey of Basingwerk. King Henry VIII. gave this manor, in 1537, to George, Earl of Shrewsbury. It now belongs to Lord Edward George Fitzalan Howard, youngest son of the late Duke of Norfolk, to whom it had descended from one of the coheiresses of Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury, who died 1610. This estate had been settled on a younger branch of the Howard family, and belonged to the late Duke before his accesssion to the title. Here are also many small freeholders.

GLOSSOP is a small market town and township, 9 miles N. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, 14 miles E. from Manchester, 24 miles N.W. by N. from Sheffield, by turnpike road and 30 miles by rails, and 50 miles N.N.W. from Derby. It consists of Glossop, Howard Town, and Mill Town; situated in a beautifully romantic dale, surrounded by lofty hills. The old town is irregularly built, but many improvements have taken place within the last few years, by forming new roads and streets, &c. Mill Town connects itself with Howard Town on the Sheffield road leading to Gossop, or Old Town, in contradistinction to New Town, or Howard Town, which forms the great focus of improvements, and is ¾ mile W. from Glossop. The township contains 4,820 acres of land, and in 1851 had 942 houses, and 5,467 inhabitants, of whom 2,713 were males and 2,754 females; rateable value, £10,057 3s. 6d. The different hamlets or townships in the manor of Glossop, keep their poor conjointly and roads separately, and contains 11,308 acres of land, of the rateable value of £32,443 0s. 3d. Lord Edward George Fitzalan Howard is lord of the manor and owner. Here are upwards of 8,000 acres of moor land. The land is mostly pasture, and the farms generally small, let on small leases at an average rental of about 30s. per acre. The land let for building purposes is on leases for a period of 99 years. A considerable portion of the land in Glossop Dale is let as accommodation land to the tradesmen; his Lordship being in every respect desirous to accommodate, improve, and encourage his tenantry, and to make Glossop a principal seat of the cotton manufacture. The direct line of railway communication with Liverpool, and the probability of that communication speedily extending between the eastern and the western seas, in conjunction with its local advantages, and the low rental of land, render every prospect of its being able to compete with the great emporium of the cotton trade, or with any other of the towns in Lancashire or Cheshire. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £12 18s. 9d., now £303. It is situate at Glossop (Old), and has been augmented with £400 parliamentary grant; the Earl of Ellesmere, patron and impropriator; and the Rev. Alexander Thos. C. Manson, D.C.L., incumbent. The Church, a neat structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, tower, and spire with 8 bells, was rebuilt, except the tower, and spire in 1831, and enlarged by the addition of two galleries, at the cost of £2,000, by which 800 sittings were obtained, of which 206 are free and unappropriated. The incorporated society for the enlargement of churches and chapels, having granted £200 towards the expense, and the remainder was raised by subscription. The late Duke, as impropriator, repaired the chancel, in which is a handsome monument for George Hadfield, Esq., of Mottram Old Hall, Cheshire, who died September 28th, 1831, aged 59. In 1855, his Grace the late Duke of Norfolk rebuilt the tower and spire to which the inhabitants added two new bells. The tower now contains a fine peal of eight bells. The Vicarage, a handsome Elizabethan mansion, a little south of the church, was erected by the present incumbent, in 1850. In the village, is an ancient cross. Glossop Hall, a handsome stone mansion, recently erected on the site of the Old Hall, is pleasantly situated a little N.E. of Old Glossop. It is the seat and property of Lord Edward George Fitzalan Howard, who succeeded to this estate on the death of his father the late Duke of Norfolk, in 1856.

Howard Town, or New Glossop, ¾ mile W. from Old Glossop, forms the centre of the largest portion of the inhabitants of the township, and a focus for most of the other townships. It is sometimes called Glossop Dale, from its being situated in a fine valley, surrounded by bold mountains and romantic scenery, and presents one of the busiest scenes in the cotton trade that can well be conceived. Great improvements, by erecting new factories and the enlargement of old ones, have within the last 20 years been made. A Market was established under the powers of an act of parliament passed in the 7th year of the reign of Queen Victoria, by the late lord of the manor, which was opened 19th July, 1845. The market, held on Saturday, progresses very well, and presents an animated appearance in the evening. A Fair for cattle and merchandise is held on the 6th of May; and another was established in 1854, which is held on the first Wednesday after the 10th of October. Feast, first Sunday after 13th of September. A handsome Town-hall and Market-house was erected in the Italian style, of which the first stone was laid 28th June, 1838, (the coronation of Queen Victoria,) and opened as above stated. A Lock-up prison was erected in connection with the above. It contains 4 cells which are warmed by hot water. Mr. William Hatton is the superintendent, with four assistant constables. Behind the Town Hall is a covered Market-house, with shops for butchers, greengrocers, and other trades. The tower which crowns the Town Hall is provided with an excellent clock, and the whole enclosed by a low wall and palisading. The entire cost has exceeded £8,500, executed under the superintendence of Messrs. Weightman and Hadfield, architects, Sheffield.

In 1818, Howard Town contained only three houses, one a farm house occupied by the Wagstaffs, the other the Howard Arms Inn, and the last one was erected by Mr. Collier, father of the present Mr. Thomas Collier. In 1825. the late Mr. Wood, bought the Old Woollen mill, and in 1826, built six houses on the site thereof, since which period its progress has been very rapid, and it can now boast of many handsome houses, excellent shops, and superior inns. The Temperance Hall, in Howard town, is a neat stone building erected in 1850, by the Rechabite Club, at a cost of £800. A Cemetery is about to be erected on or near the Sheffield road, at the estimated cost of £6,000. There are to be three chapels, one for the church, one for the Dissenters, and one for the Catholics. The Odd Fellows, Foresters, Druids, and the Freemasons, have lodges here and several other Friendly Societies.

The Roman Catholic Chapel, situated on an eminence overlooking the old village of Glossop, is a handsome structure of the Tuscan style. It was erected in 1836, by the late Duke of Norfolk, from a design by and under the direction of Messrs. Weightman and Hadfield, at a cost of £3000. In the interior is a beautiful altar, the work of Mr. George Eadon, of Sheffield; an organ by Bishop, and an ancient picture of the Crucifixion, a copy from the celebrated original at Antwerp. The Chapel, together with Royle house, the chaplain's residence, commands a beautiful prospect of the surrounding hills, forms a pleasing contrast with their romantic wildness, and reflects much credit on the taste as well as the generosity of the noble founder. The Rev. Theodore Fauvel is the priest. In connexion with the above are schools for boys and girls. The girls school is situated at Old Glossop; it was built by subscription in 1844, at a cost of about £500; it will hold about 400 children, and is under the care of the Sisters of Charity. The boys school is situated in Talbot street, and was erected in 1852, at a cost of £1400; it is a handsome stone building, with residence for the master, capable of accommodating 500 children; the average attendance is 60. There is also a night school which is attended by about 100; Mr. Wm. Hymers, master. The Methodists have a handsome stone chapel at Howard Town, erected in 1845, at a cost of £600; and also one at Glossop, built in 1813, and enlarged in 1830; with a day school, established in 1841, attended by about 120 boys and girls. There are Sunday schools in connexion with all the places of worship. The Association Methodists have a chapel in Hall street, between Glossop and Mill Town, built in 1836, and improved in 1845; cost £650, and will seat about 300. The Primitive Methodists' is a handsome chapel, situated in Howard Town, erected in 1855.

Savings' Bank, held in the Town Hall, was established 3rd Apl. 1844, under the patronage of his Grace the Duke of Norfolk. The balance owing to depositors on the 20th Nov., 1855, amounted to £13,981 17s 5d., of which sum 556 depositors had £13,319 3s. 8d.; 7 charitable institutions £195 0s. 3d., and two friendly societies £467 13s. 6d. The bank is open every Monday from eleven to one o'clock; Mr. Fras. Hawke, secretary.

The New Small Debts Act, or County Court. This important act which superseded the Court of Requests, came into operation on the 15th of March, 1847.

Glossop County Court is held at the Town Hall, Howard Town, monthly, and the district comprises the following places, viz.: Betney Hill, Blackshaw, Brookfield, Brosscroft, Charlestown, Charlesworth, Chisworth, Chunall, Compstall Bridge, Cordingbrook, Crosscliff, Dinting, Freetown, Fattenhay, Gamesley, Glossop, Hadfield, Hayfield, Hole House, Howard Town, Hurst, Jerry Town, Littlemoor, Ludworth, Marple Bridge, Mellor, Mill Town, Moorsbottom Bridge, Padfield, Roworth, Rosegreen, Roughtown, Simmondley, Turnlee, Water Side, Whitfield, Woodseats, and Woolley Bridge; Joseph St. John Yates, Esq., judge, John Brookes, registrar, and Joseph Oates, high bailiff.

Gas Works were established under an Act of Parliament obtained during the session of 1845, the company to have a capital of £6,000, in shares of £10 each. The works are at Howard Town. The gasometer will hold 55,000 cubic feet, and there are 21 retorts; Mr. Wm. Wake, of Sheffield, is clerk to the Company; Mr. Geo. Tomlinson, manager; and Jas. Gill, working manager.

Water Works were established here in 1854, by the late Duke of Norfolk at an outlay of about £4000. Swineshaw Reservoir, the source from whence the town is supplied is situated about 1½ mile from Howard Town, and is about 5 acres in extent. It is conveyed from there in 7 inch mains, and one half of the town is already supplied with that necessary and useful article at a very moderate cost; besides which that portion of the hamlet of Whitfield called Little Moor is also supplied, a boon which cannot be too highly prized by the inhabitants, considering the great inconvenience they have at various times suffered for the want of it. Indeed, the whole neighbourhood has been greatly benefitted by its introduction into the town; Mr. Chas. Jno. Hadfield, manager.

The Grammar School, Old Glossop, a handsome Elizabethan stone building, erected by the late Duke of Norfolk, in 1852, at the cost of £2000. It is situated at the west end of the church-yard and consists of a boys', girls', and infants' rooms, with residence for the head master; the boys' room is 90 feet by 33 feet, and 23 feet high. The master's residence forms the eastern end of the building, and the girls' and infants' school-rooms the western.

It will afford accommodation for above 500 children, and the average attendance is about 400.—(See charities)—Mr. Alfred J. Littler, head master.

The Mechanics' Institution, established in 1842, is held in the Grammar school, in connection with which is an excellent library of upwards of 10,000 volumes of books, besides the leading periodicals. It consists of about 100 members who pay an annual subscription of 5s.; Mr. Adam Knott, librarian.

Petty Sessions are held in the Town Hall, every Thursday fortnight. The attending magistrates are Wm. Sidebottom, Edmund Potter, and John Chapman, Esqrs., Messrs. Bennett & Grey are their clerks, and Mr. Wm. Hatton, chief constable for the Glossop division of the High Peak Hundred, superintendent of the lock-up-prison, and inspector of weights and measures for the same district. The other townships have each an assistant constable, chosen annually.

Railway.—The Sheffield and Manchester railway enters Derbyshire from Sheffield, from a tunnel three miles in length, about five miles N.E. by N. from Glossop, and crosses the extreme north verge of the county, and of this parish, crossing the Etherow at Broadbottom, near Charlesworth, by a viaduct of three very large arches; about 3 miles S.W. by W. from Glossop, it enters Cheshire; it crosses the Dinting Vale about 1 mile W. from Howard Town, by a lofty viaduct of 16 arches, constructed of timber and stone. Near the viaduct, and adjoining the road to Charlesworth, is Dinting railway station, ¼ mile W. from Howard Town, and 12 miles from Manchester. From this point a branch railway runs to Howard Town, where there is a convenient stone station, with warehouses and coal wharfs, which are supplied from Duckenfield and Dunkirk colleries. Mr. Wm. Hy. Brain, station master, Howard Town, and Mr. Alexander Maxwell, station master, Dinting.

Reservoir Company.—This company was formed in 1837, when a capital of upwards of £6,000 was subscribed for the forming reservoirs to supply, in dry seasons, mills, extending from Glossop to the river Tame, at Stockport. Only one reservoir has been constructed at a cost of £10,000; it is situated between the hills, one mile S.E. from Glossop. Michael Jph. Ellison, Esq., is clerk to the commissioners.

Trade.—Glossop has for many years had its full share of the spirit and extension of the cotton spinning and manufacture, there being in the manor of Glossop upwards of 20 establishments for spinning, doubling, and weaving of cotton. There are extensive print-works in Dinting Vale, and others just within the county of Chester; besides which there are at New Mills, Mellor, and the district not within the manor of Glossop, about 30 different establishments for cotton spinning and manufacturing, with four extensive calico print-works. A reference to the Directories of the districts will show the names of the parties and the situations of each. There are also three extensive paper mills and one small woollen manufactory. The twist, or goods, are generally made for the Manchester market, which the proprietors regularly attend on Tuesday, where many of them have warehouses.

CHARLESWORTH is a large village and township, on the road to Marple Bridge, 2½ miles S.W. from Glossop, formerly had a market and fair granted, in 1328, to the abbot of Basingwerk. It contains 1,452 acres of land, and in 1851 had 324 houses and 1714 inhabitants, of whom 850 were males and 864 females; rateable value £2999 14s. 4d. The Church, dedicated to St. John, is a neat stone edifice in the form of a cross, with nave, chancel, two transepts, and tower, was erected in 1849. The living is a perpetual curacy, of the value of £150, in the patronage of the Crown and Bishop of Lichfield alternately, and incumbency of the Rev. Goodwin Purcell, who resides at the parsonage house, a neat stone residence, situated near the Church and erected in 1853. The National school with a house for the teacher, is a small stone building erected in 1850, which will accommodate 150; the average attendance being about 70. The Independents have a chapel, rebuilt about 70 years ago, and enlarged in 1827, and a school-room, built in 1823. The Particular Baptists' chapel was built in 1835. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel and a day school; and the Primitive Methodists' chapel, built in 1843, has a day school in connexion with it. There is a machine manufactory and brass foundry, with a cotton band manufactory, besides other factories at the Coombs, Kinder Brook, and at Kinder Lee. Gamesly Upper and Lower, consists of a few farmers, half a mile N.W. from Charlesworth, extending to the Etherow, near which is Malandra Castle, a Roman camp. The Independents have had a congregation here from a very early period; and in 1716, Mr. John Bennett left the interest of £20 for the benefit of the minister.

CHISWORTH, a scattered village and hamlet, 4 miles S.W. from Glossop, and in that manor, contains 845 acres of land, and in 1851 had 114 houses and 555 inhabitants, of whom 291 were males and 264 females; rateable value £1175 5s. The Wesleyans have a chapel here, erected in 1831, and enlarged about four years ago; it is a neat stone building with turret and one bell. Here is a lodge of the ancient Order of Druids. Feast, first Sunday in August. The modern and busiest part is situated on the Marple Bridge road. Here is the Hole House mill for cotton spinning, manufactory, and a colliery. The Coombs 1 mile S.W., consists of three farm houses. Moorside and Sanderlane, half a mile N.W. from the Wesleyan chapel. In the year 1360, this manor was conveyed by Richard Foljambe and Robert de Holt to the abbey at Basingwerk.

CHUNALL, a hamlet and small ancient romantic village in the manor or Glossop, on the road to Hayfield, 2 miles S. from Glossop, contains 886 acres of land, and in 1851 had 23 houses and 113 inhabitants, of whom 58 were males and 55 females; rateable value £386 0s. 9d.; It consists of a few farms and one public house. The benevolent Joseph Haigh was born here. (See charities). Gnat Hole, half a mile N., is a woollen manufactory, and a little nearer Glossop is the paper manufactory of Mr. Thos. H. Ibbotson. Here is also a candle wick manufactory.

DINTING is a small scattered village and hamlet, usually called Higher and Lower Dinting, situated near the Glossop railway branch, 1 mile W. from Glossop, on a fine eminence, which commands a rich view of the vale and the surrounding district. It contains 584 acres of land, and had in 1851, 133 houses and 670 inhabitants, of whom 341 were males and 349 females; rateable value £2369 6s. 8d. The principal part of the inhabitants are at Dinting Vale, a small village which connects itself with Green Vale, at the Junction Inn. On entering this vale, the viaduct of sixteen arches, constructed of wood and stone, which crosses the valley and turnpike road, strikes the beholder with astonishment at the daring of the present generation. In the vale are the extensive calico print-works of Messrs. Edmund Potter & Co., who, about 16 years ago, established a school, now attended by about 80 children. In connexion with the school they have also a reading-room for the workmen, which is open at noon, and every evening. Dinting or Glossop railway station, 12 miles from Manchester, is at a short distance from the viaduct, and near the road leading to Charlesworth; it is a convenient stone building; Mr. Alex. Maxwell, station master.

HADFIELD, a township and ancient village, two miles W.N.W. from Glossop, bounded on the north by the Etherow, contains 357 acres of land, and in 1851 had 363 houses, and 1,989 inhabitants, of whom 952 were males, and 1,037 females; rateable value, £3,499 2s. 5d. The Sheffield and Manchester railway crosses the township a little south of the village, and has a station here. There are no mills in the village, but a little to the west is Brookfield mill, with several rows of buildings. Woolley Bridge, a bridge over the Etherow, about one mile W. by S. from Hadfield, at the junction of three roads. connecting Manchester, Stockport, and Yorkshire, with Glossop Dale. Here is an extensive factory, and at a short distance on the Cheshire side, is a calico print-work. At Hadfield Lodge is a factory, and one in Padfield.

WATERSIDE, a district and small village on a small brook near the Etherow, partly in Hadfield and partly in Padfield constablewicks. Here the Messrs. Sidebottoms have extensive factories, and on the Chester side are two other factories. Some good stone cottages have been erected here by Mr. William Bradbury, and the inhabitants are chiefly employed at the factories. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel here, and the former have a large day school, established in 1808, enlarged in 1832, and rebuilt in 1854; it will hold about 400 children, and the average attendance is 120. A large School Room was erected here in 1856, at a cost of £600, raised by subscriptions, exclusive of the site, which was given by the late Duke of Norfolk. It has been licensed for divine worship, and service is performed there twice every Sunday by the officiating curate, the Rev. Thomas M. Freeman. An organ and a gallery have been added since its erection; It will now seat 350 persons.

Ludworth, a small scattered village and hamlet, 5 miles S.W. from Glossop, and with Chisworth forms a township in Glossop parish, with which they keep their poor conjointly, and roads separate. It contains 1,703 acres of land, and in 1851, had 115 houses, and 1578 inhabitants, of whom 750 were males, and 828 females; rateable value, £3,092 5s. 11d.

Compstall Bridge is a considerable village on the Etherow, over which is a bridge, 5 miles S.W. from Dinting railway station, 5 miles E. from Stockport, and twelve from Manchester. Here, on the Cheshire side, are the extensive calico printing establishment of Messrs. George Andrews and Sons, who employ nearly 2,000 persons. Compstall Road, leading to the bridge, is a populous district on the Derbyshire side. The Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1833, is a good stone building with turret and one bell, has lately undergone considerable repairs, and has had a new vestry added at a cost of about £50. The chapel will hold about 350.

Marple Bridge is a considerable village on the river Goyt, three-quarters of a mile S. from Compstall road, in a very pleaasnt situation. The Independents have a neat chapel with turret and one bell, erected seventy years ago, but the religious interest connected with it is of very early date, having its origin from the labours of the Rev. Wm. Bagshaw, the Apostle of the Peak, and one of the 2,000 ministers who was ejected from the Church of England. The chapel has been twice enlarged and improved, and will now hold about 350. The Rev. James Wm. Benson is the pastor. The late Moses Hadfield, Esq., of Mottram, a zealous friend to the cause, bequeathed by his will, in the year 1844, the sum of £300, as an endowment on the chapel, and also erected new schools in connection with this place of worship. The ancient order of Foresters, Druids, Odd Fellows, and Freemasons, have each lodges here.

Padfield, a hamlet and village, pleasantly situated, overlooking the river Etherow, 1½ miles N.W. from Glossop, contains 642 acres of land, and in 1851 had 328 houses, and 2,051 inhabitants, of whom 1074 were males, and 977 females; rateable value £5470 9s. 9d. The Sheffield and Manchester railway crosses the village. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel erected in 1828, and the Independents one erected the same year, with Sunday schools. Here are three factories. A few years ago, a man getting stones, dug up a number of Roman coins in a good state of preservation.

Simmondley, is a small ancient irregular built village and hamlet, principally occupied by small farmers. It is situated on high ground, 1 mile S.W. from Glossop, contains 990 acres of land, and in 1851 had 125 houses, and 676 inhabitants, of which the number of males and females were equal; rateable value £1229 19s. The Hall, a very ancient house, is the residence of Mrs. Sarah Taylor. Lees Hall, an ancient mansion on a fine eminence, 1½ mile S.W. from Glossop, is the seat of Mrs. Hadfield, whose family have for a long period resided here, and the property of Lord Edward George Fitzalan Howard. In 1844, the Independents erected by subscription a handsome school. The inhabitants in this village connect themselves with Green Vale, near the Junction Inn, near which are Turnlee, Bridgefield, and Primrose Mills.

Whitfield, a hamlet and pleasant village, 1 mile S. from Glossop, forms a populous district enclosed under an act passed in 1810, and contains 1577 acres of land, and in 1851, had 859 houses, and 4774 inhabitants, of whom 2334 were males, and 2440 females; rateable value £6,431 3s. 10d. The land is mostly freehold. The principal villages are

Charlstown and Littlemoor. Littlemoor joins Howard Town by an iron and stone bridge erected in 1837, near the Market place on the eastern side, and nearer to Whitfield is Charlestown. A handsome district Church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1845, at Littlemoor, in the early English style, it contains nave, chancel, side aisles, and transepts, with a tower and spire 114 feet high; the interior including the chancel, 82 feet 7 inches by 50 feet 8 inches, contains 1050 sittings, of which one-half are free, having carved stall ends. At the west end is a gallery. The principal or west entrance has clustered pillars, arches with carved heads, above which is a colonade of pillars and arches, finished with an oriel window. It has also a north door; the approaches to the galleries is by a geometrical stone staircase in the tower. The east end gables are surmounted with octagon turrets and carved finials, it is lighted by a triple window, and the other parts by lancet windows. Ths tower is mounted with pinnacles, and has a bell 450 lbs. weight, and the spire with lucarnes, carved canopies and finial. The cost was about £4,500, of which sum £2,000 was raised by subscription, and the remainder by grants from various societies. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued at £275, in the patronage of the Crown, and Bishop of Lichfield alternately, and incumbency of the Rev. John Teague, B.A., who resides at the Parsonage house, a neat stone building situated a little S.W. from the church, erected in 1848, at a cost of £900, raised by subscriptions and grants. Adjoining the parsonage are the National Schools erected in 1847, at a cost of £1,100. It is a substantial stone building for boys and girls, with a residence for the teacher; will accommodate 300 children. Here is also an endowed school.—(See Charities.)

The manor of Whitfield was conveyed in 1330, by Thomas le Ragged to John Foljambe; it has long been held with the manor of Glossop.

The Wren Nest factory at Green Vale was erected in 1816, and has recently been considerably enlarged. At Turnlee, in Littlemoor, are two paper mills, and a wool carding and fur blowing establishment. The Methodists have a chapel at Whitfield. The Wesleyan Reformers have a neat chapel at Littlemoor, erected in 1854, and the Primitive Methodists have one at Green Vale, erected in 1835, in which a day school of 80 children are kept. The Independents have a large handsome chapel at Littlemoor, built in 1811, in which galleries were erected in 1829, at a cost of £300; it was enlarged in 1846, at a further cost of £1,350, and contains sittings for 1,000 persons. Sunday Schools are connected with the various chapels. In connection with the Independent chapel at Littlemoor, is an Infant school. For Glossop and Whitfield schools, see Charities.

GLOSSOP POOR-LAW UNION consists of the 10 hamlets and townships which comprise the manor of Glossop, for which 16 guardians are appointed, who meet every Thursday fortnight, at 11 o'clock, at the Workhouse, from 29th September, to 25th March; and at 2 o'clock, from 25th March to 29th September. It is a substantial stone building a little N.E. from the Church in Old Glossop, was erected in 1834, at a cost of £1,500, to accommodate 60 paupers. The average number of in-door paupers is 40. The places are Charlesworth, Chisworth, Chunall, Dinting, Glossop, Hadfield, Ludworth, Padfield, Simmondley, and Whitfield. Chairman to Board of Guardians, Jno. Kershaw, Esq.; Clerk & Registrar of Births and Deaths, Mr. Geo. Bowden; Master of the Workhouse and relieving officer, Mr. Charles Taylor; Superintendent Registrar, Mr. John Slater; Surgeons, Mr. Wm. Howard, and Mr. James Rhodes.

CHARITIES.—Joseph Haigh or Hague, Esq., by indentures of lease and release dated 10th and 11th January, 1779, conveyed to John Hague and eight others, a building which he had lately erected on a plot of land at Whitfield, for a school, and for the residence of a schoolmaster for the instruction of poor children within the parish of Glossop; and also a messuage at Low Loughton, in Bowden Middlecale, in the parish of Glossop, with several fields containing in the whole 7A. 2R. 9P. Cheshire measure, upon trust that they should in the first place, pay all rates and taxes, and should pay the clear rents to the schoolmaster, who should be appointed and reside at the school to instruct all the children within the said parish, not being under four years of age, in reading, writing, and arithmetic and the church catechism. By a memorandum endorsed on the indenture, and signed by Mr. Haigh, it is stated that on further consideration, he directed the master should be at liberty to receive the following payments,—for reading, 1d. a week; writing, 2d.; and arithmetic, 3d. On the 28th May, 1774, John Harrison, the survivor of the original trustees, conveyed the premises to John White, and seven others, subject to the alteration with regard to the price paid by children as above. The school is open to all the parish on the terms proposed; about 120 attend. The master occupies a dwelling house with a garden adjoining, the school room. The other premises consist of a dwelling house now let in two tenements, and about 17A. of land, statute measure, let for £32 per annum. The schoolmaster also receives £3 14s. 6d. per annum, as the dividends arising on £124 4s. 0d., three per cent. consols, being the produce of a legacy of £100 given by the will of the said Joseph Haigh. He also receives the sum of £1 5s. per annum, as the interest of one moiety of £50 given by Mary Doxon.

The above Joseph Haigh Esq, who died in March, 1786, by will, dated 21st November 1782, gave to his executors, Thomas Everett and three others, £1,000 upon trust, that the interest thereof should be annually laid out in clothing 12 poor men and 12 poor women in Glossop dale for ever. In 1845, 14 poor men and 16 poor women received a full dress each. £100 upon trust, that the interest should be paid to the schoolmaster at Whitfield; and £100 upon trust, that the interest to be applied as follows,—one guinea to be paid the vicar of Glossop, for preaching a sermon annually on the 26th of August, and 5s. for the clerk, and the remainder towards repairing and keeping clean his vault at Glossop. He also gave to the trustees of the school at Hayfield, £105, the interest to be applied towards the education of 10 poor children, out of that chapelry for ever. The above sums, amounting £1,627 6s. 4d., were laid out in the purchase of stock in the three per cent. consols, which now stands in the name of Thomas Wagstaff, of Highgate. Of the dividends amounting to £48 16s. 2d., £37 5s. 4d. is paid to the Glossop dale clothing fund; £3 14s. 6d. to Whitfield school; £3 18s. 2d. to Hayfield school; £1 1s. to the vicar of Glossop; 5s. to the clerk; and £2 12s. 2d. per annum forms a fund for the repairs of the testator's vault when ever it shall be required. A balance of £35 11s. 11d. applicable to this purpose, was in the hands of Mr. Whitfield at the time of our enquiry.

Glossop School, an ancient school-house containing two rooms, which has lately been enlarged for a Sunday school, the repairs of which have usually been paid out of the churchwardens' account, is endowed with £37 10s., placed out at interest on a turnpike security at 5 per cent. The late Duke of Norfolk, who had a considerable estate in this parish, annually made a voluntary donation for the support of the school, and is supposed to have the appointment of the master. No children were instructed free. In 1852, His Grace the late Duke of Norfolk had the old school taken down and the present handsome structure erected on the site, at a cost of £2,000, and which he munificently endowed with £4000, 3 per cent. consols. It is termed the Grammar or Head school, and is capable of accommodating 550 children; the present attendance is above 400, viz., Upper school, 59 boys and 79 girls; Second school, 133 boys; Infants' school, 130. The terms are, boys, classical instruction, 15s. per quarter; Commercial only, 10s.. Second school, boys, 4d. per week. Girls' school, First division 3d., and Second division 2d. per week. The Head master receives a salary of £70 per annum (and the fees) with residence; the Mistress £45 per annum, and the Infant schoolmaster £25 per annum, both inclusive of fees, but no residence. The schools are open to children of all denominations.

Joseph Haigh, Esq. In addition to the stock already mentioned, there is a sum of £248 8s. 10d. three per cent consolidated annuities, standing in the name of John Bowman and two others. It is observed that by a codocil annexed to his will, dated 7th of October, 1783, he gave to the vicar of Glossop, £80 in trust, to be distributed at his discretion amongst the poor and needy families in "the eight townships," intending probably the eight hamlets which comprise the township of Glossop. He also gave the sum of £8, to be in like manner disposed of in the chapelry of Hayfield; and there is a sum of £124 4s. 5d. three per cent. consolidated bank annuities, now standing in the name of Robert Raine and two others, for the poor of that chapelry. Whether the interest on these legacies had been permitted to accumulate to purchase the above stock, or they were separate gifts, does not appear. £7 9s., the dividend of the stock in the name of John Bowman, is laid out in the purchase of linen cloth, and distributed in the winter.

William Garlick, by will, dated 25th July, 1686, gave to the poor of the township of Glossop, the sum of £5 yearly for ever, to be paid out of two closes called the Wash Meadows and the house standing thereupon, with one dole in another close called the Oak Rydeing, being in or near Bowden Head, in the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith, and he directed that the churchwardens and overseers of the township of Glossop, and their successors, should receive the yearly sum, and distribute the same to the poor of the township with all the hamlets, on the 20th day of February; he also gave to the said poor, the sum of £80 to be bestowed in land for the use of the said poor, together with £20 secured by the bonds of Nicholas Gray, deceased. By an indenture, dated 5th of December, 1689, it appears the premises at Bowden Head had been given up to the overseers and churchwardens of Glossop, but on what terms does not appear, but probably, as there is no account in what manner the legacy of £100 was disposed of, that estate was given up in consideration of the legacy. The estate contains 11A. 2R. 24P. let for £20 a year, which is distributed on St. Thomas's day to the poor.

Martha Wagstaffe, by will, 1689, gave to the poor of Glossop a rent charge of £2 per annum, vested in the churchwardens and overseers. The rent charge is paid from two fields in Holme, in the parish of Almondsbury, in Yorkshire, the property of William Leach, of Ramsden, near Holmfirth.

John Wagstaffe the elder, by indenture, 1718, for a nominal consideration, and for a provision for the poor of the township of Glossop, with the hamlets, granted to William Garlick and others, the churchwardens and overseers of Glossop, and their successors, a yearly rent charge of £3, clear of all taxes, issuing out of a messuage and lands in Gladwick, in the parish of Oldham, and payable yearly on the feast of St. Martin, upon trust, to dispose of the same yearly amongst the poor residing in the said township and hamlets. George Hadfield, Esq., of Old Hall, Mottram, is the owner of the lands in Gladwick, and pays the rent charge.

Donor unknown. The churchwardens receive the yearly sum of £5 from Mr. John Cheetham, of Gee Cross, near Stockport, in respect of 11 acres of land, part of an estate called Warneth, in the county of Chester, which we are informed, was reserved to the churchwardens on a lease granted to John Hibbert for a term of 2,000 years, dated 1st December, 1695; distributed on St. Thomas's day.

John Wagstaffe, junior, by will, in 1735, gave to the poor of Glossop a fee farm rent of £3, then vested in Samuel Wagstaffe. This rent charge is transmitted by the vicar of Mottram, to whom the estate belongs, which is situate in Mottram, Longdendale, in the county of Chester.

Thomas Hadfield gave by will, in 1743, the sum of £60 to the poor of the parish of Glossop, not receiving parish relief; secured on turnpike security.

Charles Hadfield, by his will, in 1795, gave £20 for the same purpose, placed on turnpike security.

John Bennitt, by will, dated 28th February, 1716, gave to the poor within the township of Glossop, viz., to all above the Coombe's Brooke £50, to be paid to the churchwardens and overseers; the interest to be given at the same time as William Garlick's. He also gave £20 for the use of Charlesworth chapel, for the interest of the dissenting minister that preached there; and if no dissenting minister there, the said £20 should go in like manner as the above-named £50; he also gave £10 to Tinswell chapel, for the benefit of the dissenting minister there, but if no such minister, then the interest should go to the poor of the township of Glossop. Divine service is still performed at the above chapel; and that £50 is on turnpike security, and distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Joseph Bray, by will, 1793, gave the sum of £30, to be placed out at interest on sufficient security, the annual interest to be distributed with Garlick's charity, and appointed George Roberts and Henry Bray his executors. The churchwardens and overseers now act as trustees, the amount being vested in turnpike securities.

Sarah Bray, by will, 1796, gave to the poor of this township the sum of £10, the interest to be distributed at the same time as her late brother's; this is vested as the above.

Mary Doxon, by her will, 1815, bequeathed one-half of the yearly interest to arise in respect of the sum of £50 lent by her on mortgage of the tolls of the Marple and Glossop turnpike roads, to the master of Whitfield school; and the other half to be divided with Garlick's charity; distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Harrison's and other Charities.—It appears from the parliamentary returns of 1786, that Thomas Harrison, by will, 1706, gave £10; Moses Hadfield, 1728, £5; Booth Waterhouse, 1734, £10; John Dewsnapp, 1736, £20; John Wagstaffe, 1738, £30; Sarah Carrington, 1738, £5; Charles Wagstaffe, 1738, £10; Henry Booth, 1740, £20; John Harrison, 1746, £10; Nicholas Garlick, 1750, £30; John Fielding, 1755, £10; John Garlick, 1757, £10; Mary Nicholson, 1759, £60; John Dewsnapp, 1772, £20, of which £18 was lost, leaving £2; and making a total of £232. These donations, with some others, are vested in the securities of the tolls of the turnpike road from Chapel-en-le-Frith to Enterclough Bridge; and on the same security is £27 lately bequeathed by Mrs. Everatt; making the total amount £409.—£20 given by Charles Hadfield, and £25 by Mary Doxon, are placed on the security of the tolls of the road leading from Glossop to Marple, and make a total of income and interest to be distributed on St. Thomas's day of £55 14s., given in sums not less than 2s. 6d., nor exceeding 10s.

William Bagshaw, by will, dated 15th October, 1701, left a rent charge on certain closes lying within the precints of Wormhill, the sum of £50s. yearly, for ever, to be laid out as follows:—to the poor of Litton, 5s.; to the poor at or near Glossop or Charlesworth, 5s.; to the poor in the chapelry of Wormhill, 5s.; and for the encouragement of serious preaching and prayers, at the discretion of his heirs, £1 15s. The premises charged with this payment form part of the property of the Rev. William Bagshaw, in Wormhill. Nothing for many years, had been paid to Glossop and Charlesworth, but Mr. Bagshaw seems to have been ignorant of the charge, and on seeing a copy of the donor's will, promised it should in future be paid. The sum of £1 15s. is paid to the minister of Chinley Chapel.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The yearly sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in the purchase of woollen cloth and flannel, which he distributes amongst the poor of the township.

Hayfield is a considerable village, township, and chapelry, in the King's Field, 4¾ miles S. from Glossop, 4½ N. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, and 18 miles E. by S. from Manchester, contains 7,204 acres of land, and in 1851 had 397 houses, and 1,757 inhabitants, of whom 880 were males and 877 females; rateable value, £5,469 4s. 4d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and the principal owners are, John White, Esq., B. H. Bamford, Esq., Mr. John Marriott, Executors of the late Mr. Thos. Marriott, Mr. John Gee, and Executors of the late Peter Slack, Esq., besides several smaller owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Matthew, is parochial, and is situated in the centre of the village, is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £6, now £96. It has been augmented with £600 benefactions, £600 Queen Anne's bounty, and £500 parliamentary grant. The resident freeholders are patrons, and the Rev. Wm. John Brock, B.A., incumbent. In 1819, the church was rebuilt, except the tower, by the inhabitants, unassisted by any public grant, at a cost of £2,000; it is in the modern Gothic style, and has a peal of six bells. The chapelry formerly consisted of Great Hamlet, Phoeside, Kinder, Beard, Ollersett, Thornsett, Chinley, Bugsworth, and Brownside; of these, Beard, Ollersett, Thornsett, and Whittle, now form a new district, with the church at New Mills. In the church is a handsome monument to Joseph Haigh, Esq., with a bust, (by Bacon,) erected at a cost of £420. He was born at Chunall, in 1695; he commenced life in a very humble sphere, and afterwards went to London, and became an opulent merchant. He had ten sons and two daughters, who all died in their minority. After the loss of his children, he adopted a family of the name of Doxon, of Padfield, to whom he gave education and fortunes. He passed the latter part of his life in retirement at Park Hall, in Hayfield, where he died 12th March, 1786, and was buried at Glossop, where the beautiful monument in Hayfield Church was originally erected. The monument was taken down during some alterations in Glossop Church by the late Duke of Norfolk, and placed in one of the cells of the Lock-up for security, but a person of the name of "Marsden," who was confined in the adjoining cell for a breach of the peace, (and who was, as it was afterwards shown, insane,) during the night broke through the partition wall and mutilated the tablet, but the bust which was carefully packed in straw was preserved from injury. It was, however, rescued from untimely destruction by John White, Esq., of Park Hall, and is now deservedly the pride of Hayfield, and the chief ornament in the church. The School, a good substantial building, was erected in 1830, at a cost of £422, raised by subscription; and here are three Sunday schools. The Wesleyan and Association Methodists have each chapels here. A Library and News Room has also been established here. Fairs are held May 12th, and Oct. 10th; the former is a very large one.

Park Hall, one mile N. from the village, is the seat of John White, Esq. Here are two extensive paper mills, three cotton band, and three woollen manufactories, and three calico print works. The scenery on Bank Vale is beautiful, and presents a striking contrast to the moors N.E. of the village. A mason, who lettered a grave-stone in the churchyard in the year 1759, for Martha Cundy, aged 41, made it 401; a wag wrote underneath—

"Martha Cundy's dead and gone,
Her age is just four hundred and one."

After which, the mason took his mallet and chisel, and erased the cypher. Great Hamlet consists of the principal portion of Hayfield village, of which ½ mile N. is Little Hayfield. Kinder hamlet consists of some farm and cottage houses, situated in a pleasant vale, running from Hayfield, 1 mile E. Kinder Scout, 3 miles S.E. from Hayfield, is said to be the highest hill in the county. Phoeside, or Foreside hamlet, forms the south side of Hayfield, with various scattered farms in that direction.

Chinley, Bugsworth, and Brownside, form a joint township in Hayfield chapelry, and contain 3605a. 2r. 8p. of land, exclusive of 98 acres of roads and waste; and in 1851 had 248 houses, and 1138 inhabitants, of whom 607 were males, and 531 females; rateable value, £2,897 18s. 0d. The Duke of Devonshire is lessee of the manor, under the Crown; and the principal owners are, H. M. Greaves, Esq., Mrs. Jane Barnes, Wm. Drinkwater, Saml. Bradburn, James Braddock, Executors of the late Thos. Moult, Wm. and Thos. Drinkwater, Henry Drinkwater, Executors of the late Joseph Braddock and Mr. Joseph Barnes.

Chinley, two and a half miles north by west, from Chapel-en-le-Frith, is an extra parochial liberty and small village, which maintains its own roads. It was originally in the King's Field. James I. sold it, with part of Sherwood Forest, for £2,000, to two persons of the name of Badby and Weltden, on condition of paying a chief rent of £12, which is now paid to her Majesty. Tithes were commuted 1842: corn for £63, which is paid to Mrs. Wake and Jas. Sorby, Esq.; £22 10s. is paid for small tithe, of which one half is paid to Lord Edward George Fitzalan Howard, and the other half to the vicar of Glossop. The Independents have a chapel here, erected by subscription in 1711. A house was erected for the minister in 1794, at a cost of £300. This chapel was erected for a congregation originally under the ministry of the Rev. Wm. Bagshaw, usually called the Apostle of the Peak, who was ejected by the the Act of Uniformity from the vicarage, in 1662, where he had preached 16 years, and who afterwards established a congregation at Malcalf, near Ford Hall, 2 miles N. from Chapel en-le-Frith. Dr. Clegg succeeded the Rev. W. Bagshaw, during whose ministry the congregation removed to the present chapel. In 1834, Chinley school, at the New Smithy, was rebuilt, at a cost of £87, towards which a grant of £40 was obtained. At Bridgeholme Green is a cotton wadding manufactory.

Bugsworth, a hamlet and joint township, which keeps its own roads, 3 miles W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith. The Peak Forest Canal has a wharf here, and a Branch canal to Whaley, where the Cromford and High Peak Railway terminates. A School was erected in 1826, which is also licensed as a Dissenting place of worship.

Brownside, a hamlet which keeps its own roads, and joint township with Chinley and Bugsworth, is two miles N.N.E. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, consists of scattered houses.

Mellor, a scattered though pleasant village, township, and chapelry, on the Hayfield and Stockport road, 8 miles S.W. from Glossop, 7 miles E. by S. from Stockport, and 6 miles S.W. by S. from Dinting Railway Station; the principal part of the population being at Mellor Moor End. The township contains 2,500 acres of land, of which a small portion is moor land, and in 1851 had 428 houses, and 1777 inhabitants, of whom 894 were males, and 883 females; rateable value £5865 5s. 9d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and with John Moult, Peter Arkwright, Jonathan Jowett, Thomas Waller, W. Egerton, S. Ratcliffe, J. S. Woolley, E. Tomlinson, and James Lees, Esqrs., with the Duke of Norfolk, are the principal owners, besides several freeholders. The Church, dedicated to St. Thomas, is a perpetual curacy, rated at £8, now £123, has been augmented with £400 benefactions, and £600 Queen Anne's bounty. Trustees of the late John Thornton, Esq., patrons. Rev. Matthew Freeman, incumbent. The Church situated on an eminence, a little north of the main road, is a small stone structure, with chancel, tower, and 3 bells, will seat about 700 persons, was built in the reign of King Stephen; the chancel was rebuilt by the inhabitants, in 1824, and the other parts restored in 1829, by a rate, and the ancient pulpit, carved from an oak tree, was removed to the chancel as an object of antiquity. There is also an ancient font, situated at the west end of the church. In 1824, an organ was placed in the east gallery of the church at a cost of £125. In the church yard is an ancient cross, used as a sun dial. Tithes have been commuted for £140. In 1821, a Sunday school was erected by subscription. The chapelry now contains the townships of Mellor and Ludworth, a portion having been taken to form the district of New Mills and also that of Charlesworth. The Primitive and the Association Methodists have each chapels here. A School, near the church, was endowed by the late Thomas Walklate with £25 per annum, of which £20 is paid to the master.—See Charities. About 90 boys and girls attend and are educated. Mellor Hall, a mansion upwards of 200 years old, was anciently the seat of the Mellor family, and afterwards of the Radcliffes; it was purchased in 1686 by James Chetham, Esq., and sold by Thomas Chetham, Esq., about 1797, to Mr. Ralph Bridge; part of the land has been purchased with Queen Anne's bounty, to augment the living, and the Hall is now the seat and property of Thomas and John Moult, Esqrs. This forms a busy district, having 5 cotton mills, employing steam and water power equal to about 300 horses, viz.—Bridget, Damstead, Dove Bank, Goyt, and Mill Clough Mills. The late Samuel Oldknow, whose untiring exertions in this neighbourhood changed the appearance of the country, designed and erected the mill near the Goyt, in 1792, two miles S.W. from Mellor church, with a water power of 120 horses; about 1000 persons are employed at it in spinning cotton. It is very pleasantly situated, and is now the property of Peter Arkwright, Esq., and occupied by John Clayton and Co. Jonathan Jowett, Esq., has several collieries here. In the chapel and chapel yard are recorded several instances of longevity, viz.—Rebecca Higenbotton, died 1758, aged 99; Sarah Cooper, died 1779, aged 97; Mary Beard, died 1797, aged 101; Betty Fearnley, died 1799, aged 94. Here also is interred Matthew Miller and his five wives, the youngest being only 16 years of age, and the respective ages of the others 40, 58, 75, and 77. Here are several lodges of Odd Fellows and Ancient Order of Druids. Feast, first Sunday after St. James's.

CHARITIES.—Mellor School.—By indenture, 1639, Thomas Bocking, in consideration of £160 paid by Edward Walklate, in discharge of a legacy given by the will of Thomas Walklate, towards the maintenance of a free school at the chapelry of Mellor, and £20 paid by other inhabitants of the chapelry, for the further maintenance of the said school, granted and enfeoffed to Edward Walklate and seven others, and their heirs, several closes of land, situate in Offerton, upon trust, to pay and apply the rents thereof for the erection maintenance and upholding a free school, at Mellor, for the education of children of that chapelry. The property consists of a farm in Offerton, in the parish of Hope, called Glover's barn, and nine fields, containing 23 acres, with a right of common for sheep on some unenclosed land, let for £25 a year. The school, built soon after the foundation of the charity, in the chapel-yard, was rebuilt about 1811. All the children of the chapelry are admitted on the payment of a small sum weekly as fixed by the trustees.

Mary Chatterton, in 1760, gave £12 to the curacy of Mellor, the interest thereof to be annually paid for preaching a sermon on Christmas-day; and she also gave £5, the interest to be given in bread by the minister and churchwardens, on the same day to poor persons. The sum of £17 was laid out many years ago in the purchase of some land which forms part of an estate called Ringstones, the property of the incumbent for the time being. The sum of 5s. is laid out in the purchase of bread, and distributed on Christmas-day.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £6 10s. received by the incumbent, which is laid out in woollen cloth and distributed to the poor of Mellor and Ludworth.

Rachael Stafford by will bequeathed £30, the yearly interest thereof to be bestowed in cloth towards apparalling the most necessitous. By indenture, 1793, this sum was vested on mortgage upon premises now the property of Wm. Barlow, by whom the annual sum of 30s. is paid to the trustees, which is laid out in the purchase of linen and distributed amongst the poor of the township of Mellor.

NEW MILLS, near STOCKPORT, an ecclesiastical chapelry and township, which comprises the hamlets of Beard, Ollersett, and Whitle, extends nearly four miles east, north, and south, from New Mills, which is a considerable village, near the river Goyt, on the Hayfield and Stockport road, 2½ miles S.W. from Hayfield, 43 N.W. from Derby, and 170 from London, and together contains 4,890 acres of land, of which 400 acres are moor land, soil various, but principally pasture, and in 1851 had 935 houses and 4,366 inhabitants, of whom 2,230 were males and 2,136 females; rateable value £10,000. Beard hamlet, extends south from New Mills, and contains 73 houses and 313 inhabitants, of whom 153 were males and 160 females. Ollersett hamlet, extending E. from New Mills, 87 houses and 493 inhabitants, of whom 253 were males and 240 females. Thornsett hamlet, extending N.E. from New Mills, 192 houses and 869 inhabitants, of whom 474 were males and 395 females. Whittle hamlet extends N. and N.W. from New Mills, and contains 583 houses and 2,691 inhabitants, of whom 1,350 were males and 1,341 females. The Queen, in the rights of the Duchy of Lancaster is lady of the manor, and the principal owners are W. T. Egerton, Esq., M.P., W. G. Newton, J. Jowett, J. Ingham, R. Bennett, J. Taylor, H. Lees, Esqrs., and The Hon. W. H. F. Cavendish. The Church, dedicated to St. George, is a perpetual curacy, endowed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners with £144 per annum. Vicar of Glossop, patron; Rev. John Rigg, M.A., incumbent. The Church, a handsome Gothic structure in the style of Edward III., with nave, chancel, side aisles, and lofty spire with one bell, is in a commanding situation in the hamlet of Beard, and will seat about 1000 persons, of which upwards of 400 are free; it was erected at a cost of £3,500. Of this sum £2,500 was paid by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and £1000 raised by subscription, The Earl of Burlington gave land for the site, stone for the building, and £150; Geo. Wm. Newton, Esq., gave £200; Wilbraham Egerton, Esq., £150; John White, Esq., £50. It was consecrated by Bishop Ryder, of Coventry, (who had also given £50) July 26th, 1831. A Parsonage house is now about being erected, which will cost about £800, subscriptions have been entered into, and grants from the Commissioners of Gally Knight's Fund of £300, and from the Lichfield Church Diocesan Extension Society of £200 have been obtained, conditionally, that the undertaking be carried into effect without delay. The Hon. W. H. F. Cavendish has given the site, and subscriptions have been received from J. Ingham, Esq., of £50, Chas. Yates, Esq., £20, besides several smaller sums. A National school was erected in 1845, at a cost of £800, for which the Hon. Wm. Hy. Fdk. Cavendish gave land for the site and stone for the building; Humphrey Nicholl, Esq., of Broughton, near Manchester, gave £100, with other subscriptions, aided by grants from the Committee of Council for Education, and the National Society; it is a good stone building, will hold about 500, of whom 110 attend; there is a house attached for the master. The large tithes were commuted in 1841 for £107 10s. from which the vicar of Glossop receives £80; the remainder is paid to the Hon. William Henry Frederick Cavendish. Mrs. Harriet Wake, of Sheffield, Andrew Brittlebank, J. Roston, and Henry Lees, Esqrs., receive the small tithes. The Catholic Church of the Annunciation, erected 1846, at a cost of £4000 is a handsome structure in the decorated style of English architecture, and a perfect revival of an ancient parish church. It is situated on an eminence; and consists of nave, side aisles, south porch, sacristy, and tower and spire 110 feet high. The low massive pillars of the nave, with the deep solemn chancel, have a very striking effect. The east window is richly decorated with stained glass; the centre light has a beautiful representation of the Annunciation, whilst the figures of St. John and St. Joseph ornament the side lights. These elegant decorations have been executed by Wailes, of Newcastle. The altar, font, and tabernacle are richly painted and gilt after the ancient manner. A capacious font of stone stands at the west end of the south aisle, and a beautiful stone image of the Blessed Virgin is placed in a niche over the west door. The cost of the edifice was chiefly raised by the unwearied exertions of the late Rev. John Joseph Collins. Messrs. Weightman and Hadfield, of Sheffield, were the architects. The Rev. Bernard O. Donald, priest. The Wesleyan Methodist chapel was erected in 1810; it is a good stone building, with one bell and clock. In 1844 a day school was added, which is taught on the Glasgow training system, and was opened Sept. 29th, 1845. The Association Methodists have a neat stone chapel, erected in 1838, which, with four cottages, cost £700; and the Primitive Methodists have a good one, built in 1827, at a cost of £500. The Independents have one at Whittle, a good stone building, will hold 550, and has a day school attached. Sunday schools are attached to all the chapels. The Parochial school in Thornsett hamlet was built by subscription, in 1832, at a cost of £350; it is a good stone building and will hold about 300, the average attendance being about 80; a house for the master and mistress is now in course of erection which will cost about £100. The New Mills branch of a London circulating library was established in 1845, at Mr. Robt. Collier's, bookseller, Market-street. Subscribers paying £1 1s. per year, are entitled to order for perusal 10 to 15 volumes of new books annually, those paying 10s. 6d. a year have not the privilege of ordering books, but are entitled to the use of all the books procured for the first class, for whom about 250 volumes are now provided.

Gas Works were established a few years ago, near the river Goyt, by act of parliament, and the proprietors are empowered to carry the gas to Hayfield. The works are in Derbyshire, but near Grove Mill, which is in Cheshire. About 2,000,000 feet of gas is consumed annually. The Ancient Order of Shepherds, and Odd Fellows have lodges here.

A fair is held on the 11th of May, and the Feast first Sunday after September the 19th.

Rowarth is a scattered village in Thornsett hamlet, from which it is 1½ mile N., and 4 miles S.W. from Glossop. It is pleasantly situated, and besides some farm-houses, contains Ringstones bleach works, two cotton and one paper mill. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small chapel here. Here is also an Endowed school, where about 40 children receive instruction. New Mills is altogether a busy district, having four calico print works, of which part are on the Cheshire side of the river Goyt, which divides the counties; 6 cotton spinners and manufacturers, and 7 candle manufacturers; Grove Mill, Rock Mill, Strine's Works, Torr and Torr Top Mills are on the river Goyt; Beard Mill, Garrison Print-works, Bower's Mill, and St. George's Works, a calico printer's engraving establishment, are on the Kinder Brook. The late Mr. John Potts, in 1821, first conceived the idea of adopting the method used by engravers in the Potteries, with a view of producing a more durable and brilliant effect. His experiment was crowned with complete success, and proved the origin of a style of engraving adopted by every calico printer, not only in Great Britain and Ireland, but throughout the whole of Europe and America; previous to which, calico printing was done from wood blocks laid on by hand; it is now performed from engravings on copper rollers, moved by steam or water power, the block being superseded. Mr. Potts had a picture gallery, which contained many fine specimens of rare and valuable paintings in oil and water colours, since disposed of. Mr. Samuel Ready has succeeded to the engraving establishment, which is carried on with great success. The Kinder Brook has its source from the western side of Kinderscout, and its confluence with the river Goyt near the Torr, at Hibberts's mill.

The original name of New Mills was Bowder-Middle-Cale, situated along the north bank of the Goyt, and reaching from Kinderscout to Mellor. It formerly comprised the ten hamlets of Beard, Ollerset, Whittle, Thornsett, Great Hamlet, Phoeside Kinder, Chinley, Bugsworth, and Brownside; about a century ago it was subdivided, when three of the hamlets were attached to Hayfield, three to Chinley, and the remaining four formed this township. Previous to this division, the inhabitants all ground their corn at a common mill in Hayfield; but, upon the division, a new mill was erected upon the Kinder, in the hamlet of Ollersett, and the name New Mills was in consequence conferred on the four hamlets. The village now forms a cluster of factories and houses, which rise one above another, from the bank of the river to the summit of the crags, a height of several hundred feet.

Hayfield Poor Law Union consists of four townships, having seventeen guardians, who meet every other Monday at 2 o'clock, at the Workhouse, a substantial stone building, erected in 1840 and 1841, at a cost of £2,700, to accommodate 87 inmates. It is situated in the hamlet of Ollersett, on a new road from Hayfield, which passes the Church and joins the London road at the Swan inn, Disley. The places comprised in the Union are Beard, Ollersett, Whitle, and Thornsett, which form a joint township, for which five guardians are elected; Hayfield, for which four guardians are elected; and Mellor, with four guardians. Disley township, with four guardians, is situated in Cheshire. The Union contains a population of 29,712 souls, of whom 14,850 were males and 14,862 females. There are at present 56 in and 140 out door paupers. Chairman to the Board of Guardians, John White, Esq.; Clerk and Superintendent Registrar, Mr. John Slater; Master and Matron, Job and Betty Harrison; Surgeon, Mr. Thomas Richard Jackson, New Mills; Relieving Officer and Registrar of Births, Deaths, and Marriages, Mr. Job Harrison.

Charities.—Mary Trickett, by will dated 17th April, 1712, devised all her land, in Rushop, in the parish of Chapel-en-le-Frith, to Mary Trickett and two others, and their heirs, the rents, to be employed by them yearly, for ever, for the use of the poor of Bowden Middlecale, for clothing or keeping of poor children to school. The property consists of a house. with a barn and out buildings, a garden, and three closes, containing in the whole, with homestead, 16A. 3R. 12P., situated at Bowden Edge, now let for £28 a year. Previous to May, 1823, it had been let on a long lease for £8 5s. per annum; and £60 was paid for dilapidation of the buildings, which have been put in a complete state of repair, at an expense of £95, and some improvements are to be made. The rent was formerly paid in equal portions to the overseers of Chinley, Hayfield, and New Mills, and expended in cloth. For the last five or six years (1826), the amount of the rent subject to the repairs has been applied in instructing poor children of the above named places in reading and writing. It seems advisable that some steps should be taken for ascertaining who was the surviving trustee under the will of Mary Trickett, and procuring a conveyance from her heir to new trustees.

Thomas Moult bequeathed 10s. to be paid from his estate, called Whicken, in Chinley, to a schoolmaster or mistress teaching at Chinley school. The owner of Whicken pays the rent charge to the master.

George Green, of Fourlane Ends, by will, bequeathed 10s. a year to a schoolmaster at Chinley, teaching grammar. This has not, for many years, been paid, on the ground that it is not a grammar school. The date of the will is not known; we are unable to refer thereto.

Nicholas Lingard, as stated on a tablet in the schoolroom, bequeated 5s. a year to a schoolmaster at Chinley school, to be paid from Estmeats estate, in Chinley, and likewise 5s. charged on the Dakins estate, provided it be freed from the office of overseer of the poor. The master is appointed by the principal inhabitants, and keeps a school in a room long used for that purpose, who receives the above small donations, and one-third of the clear rent of Trickett's charity, already mentioned, and for which last four are taught reading, writing, and accounts.

Thomas Harrison, by will, in 1706, gave to the poor of Chinley, £10.; also, Sarah Carrington, by will, gave to the poor, £5. Both sums were vested with the overseers, and, in 1754, were expended towards building a house for paupers belonging the township, and it was agreed, at a vestry meeting, that 13s. 6d. should be paid yearly out of the poor rates as interest for this sum. The interest is distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

Bernard Jenkinson, by will, 1786, bequeathed £100 stock, in the four per cent. bank annuities, to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Glossop, in trust, to distribute the interest yearly amongst the poor of the hamlets of Brownside and Chinley. The stock in the old four per cents. at the time of our inquiry, still stood in the name of Bernard Jenkinson. Some steps had been taken towards obtaining the money payable on the reduction of that stock, but it had not been received, in consequence of some difficulty in respect to the probate of the will. We have reason to hope no further delay will take place, and that the money will be reinvested. The dividends were distributed on St. Thomas's day, in sums varying from 1s. to 3s.

John Hyde, by will dated 8th Sept., 1604, gave certain premises to the Merchant Tailors' Company, London, upon trust, amongst other things, to pay £10 yearly to the minister of the gospel at Hayfield, in Derbyshire, for teaching grammar in a school within the chapel. The sum of £10 is transmitted by the clerk of the said company to the incumbent.

Mary Gaskell charged upon her estate, called Barns' Fold, £3 18s., to be paid to the incumbent, as master of the grammar school. The estate is now the property of John White, Esq., of Park Hall.

John Hadfield left the use of £60 for ever to a licensed master for teaching petties, as well as others more proficient, at the chapel at Hayfield. £2 10s. is paid yearly as a rent charge on his estate at Shudehill.

Mary Trickett,—(already noticed.) One third of the clear yearly rents is paid to the master of this school.

Hague's Gift,—(already noticed.) The yearly sum of £3 18s. 2d. is paid to the master of this school for the education of ten children.

On account of the income derived from the above donations, a school is taught in an ancient building in Hayfield, called the Grammar Schoolhouse. This place has since been sold, and the money applied in building a new school, which cost £422. Fifteen children are taught reading, writing, and accounts, without any charge—4 in respect of Trickett's, and 11 of Hague's charity.

John Hague, Esq., by will dated 19th Feb., 1781, bequeathed to Dorothy Hague and five others, and their executors, the sum of £100, upon trust, to apply the yearly produce thereof to the schoolmaster of a certain school in Hayfield, called Hayfield School, who should instruct eight poor children in the said school gratis. We are informed this legacy was charged upon an estate called Barns' Fold, near Hayfield, which was purchased by Mrs. Dorothy Hague, and that, by her will, she directed that the yearly payment thereout should be increased to £16.

Joseph Hague, Esq.—(See Glossop.) The yearly sum of £3 14s. 6d. for this township is laid out in linen cloth, and distributed to the poor, by the incumbent, in winter.

John Bennett, by will, 1731, gave to his cousin, John Bennett, all his estates at Smithfield, on condition that he should pay to the churchwardens, yearly, the sum of 40s. on every 12th day of December, for the use of the poor of Great Hamlet, Phoeside, and Kinder, to be distributed on Christmas day, for ever. The estate belongs to John White, Esq., of Park Hall, by whom the 40s. is paid to the churchwardens, and distributed as above.

Edward Bennett, by will, directed his executors to pay and apply the yearly interest of the sum of £60, owing to him on the Hayfield turnpike road, yearly, for ever, amongst poor persons of the hamlets of Great Hamlet, Phoeside, and Kinder. He also directed his executors, after the death of his wife, to place and keep at interest, on good security, a sufficient sum of money out of his personal estate, as would produce a clear yearly sum of £7, and pay and apply the same amongst such poor persons of the above-named hamlets. The widow of the testator died in 1824, and means were about to be taken to secure a sum sufficient to produce the yearly sum of £7, at 4½ per cent. The whole has been distributed as above, by Mr. Gee, the executor. He also left £2 2s. per annum to, and for a minister performing service in the Wesleyan Methodist chapel.

Fanny Marriott. who died February, 1821, bequeathed £50 to her executors, John Lingard and Ebenezer Glossop, on trust, to divide the interest thereof, yearly, on the 25th of December, amongst the poor of Great Hamlet, Phoeside, and Kinder. The sum of £2 5s. 0d. is distributed in sums of 5s. to the most needy, by Mr. John Gee.

John Baddeley Radcliff's Charity,—(See Chapel-en-le-Frith.) The sum of £2 13s. 4d. was left annually to the poor of this township, but is lost.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in the purchase of flannel and coarse woollen cloth, and distributed amongst the poor of this township.

HATHERSAGE is an extensive parish, containing the townships of Hathersage, Bamford, Derwent (chapelry,) and Outseats; these form the parish of Hathersage, to which the chapelry of Stoney Middleton is annexed. The whole contains 12,649A. 1R. 29P. of land, and in 1851 had 469 houses, and 2,106 inhabitants, of whom 1064 were males and 1042 females; rateable value, £7,023 7s. 10d.

HATHERSAGE is a large flourishing village and township, occupying a bold acclivity on the Sheffield and Chapel-en-le-Frith road, eleven miles S.W. from Sheffield, twelve miles E. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, 5 miles N. from Stoney Middleton, and 5½ miles E. by S. from Castleton. This village has long been noted for the manufacture of needles, hackles, gills, pins, cast steel wire, and millstones. Messrs. Robert and David Cook first brought the needle business here from Redditch on the 14th July, 1811. The river Derwent, passing through a deep valley on the west, generally bounds the parish, with the exception of Stoney Middleton. On the north it is bounded by the Yorkshire moors, and on the east by the Hundred of Scarsdale. It contains 2,985A. 2R. 32P. of land, forming a romantic district, on gritstone, and had in 1851, 181 houses, and 832 inhabitants, of whom 412 were males and 420 females; rateable value, £2,114 18s. 10d. Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and small owner. John Spencer Ashton Shuttleworth, Esq., Duke of Rutland, Mrs. Newton Shaw, Miss H. Wright, Thomas Eyre, Esq., and Robert Cook, Esq. are the principal owners, besides several small freeholders. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £7 0s. 5d., now £126, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £400 Queen Anne's bounty, and £2,000 parliamentary grant. Duke of Devonshire patron and impropriator. At the Inclosure act, 1808, land was awarded in lieu of all the tithe. The Rev. Henry Cottingham, M.A., incumbent. The Church, which is considered to be one of the handsomest in the county, is in the later style of English architecture, has nave, chancel, side aisles, tower, and spire, with a peal of six good bells. In 1851-2, the church was thoroughly restored, new seated with open benches, new roofed, and all the windows filled with stained glass. The south window was presented by Wm. Cameron Moore, Esq., and another on the south side by Mr. Butterfield, architect for the Church Building Society; the small east window, by the working-class of Hathersage; the great east window, by voluntary subscription; the window on the south side the chancel, by the present vicar; the west end window, by Mr. Geo. Eyre, and his three sisters; also, a beautiful crimson velvet altar cloth with gold fringe, and a pulpit cushion, was presented by Miss H. Wright; Thos. Eyre, Esq. gave two handsome carved old oak chairs, with buffets, which stand on each side the chancel. The Duke of Devonshire, Miss Wright, and J. S. A. Shuttleworth, Esq., each gave £100 towards the restoration of the church, which cost upwards of £1,700 (exclusive of the new windows), the remainder being defrayed by subscription. The church was given in the 12th century to the priory of Launde, Leicestershire, by Richard Bassett, its founder. In the chancel are several monuments to the family of Eyre, ancestors of the Earls of Newburgh. On an altar-tomb, represented on brass, are effigies of Robert Eyre, who fought at the battle of Agincourt, and of his wife and fourteen children, viz.: ten sons and four daughters. On the south side of the churchyard is shown the gravestone of "Little John," the companion of Robin Hood; also, a house is pointed out as the place where he died. The body of Mr. T. Ashton, interred here in 1725, was discovered in 1781, quite perfect and petrified, retaining the flesh-colour as when entombed. The Vicarage is a neat house west of the church. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel erected in 1807, at a cost of £300, with sittings for 260 persons; about one half are free. The Endowed school is now taught on the National plan; Wm. Cresswell, master. The Girls' National school is an old thatched building near the church; Mrs. E. Blackshaw, mistress. The Roman Catholics have a chapel in a rural situation, and there are ruins of ancient Catholic chapels at Over Padley and North Lees. A Fair is held on the first Friday after Old Michaelmas day, and if it falls on Friday, the Friday after; and the Feast on the Sunday before the fair. The Hall, a handsome mansion in the village, was rebuilt in 1844; it is the property and seat of John Spencer Ashton Shuttleworth, Esq. Camp Green, a little E. of the Church, is supposed to be the site of a Danish camp. This manor, Hereseige, was, at Domesday survey, the property of Ralph Fitzhubert. In the reign of Henry III. it belonged to the family of De Hathersage, whose coheiresses brought it to Goushill and Longford. In the reign of Henry VI. Goushill's moiety belonged to the family of of Thorp, with remainder to Robert Eyre and his heirs. Sir Nicholas Longford died seized of the other moiety in 1481. The ancestors of the Duke of Devonshire purchased it of the family of Pegge, in 1705. Booths, a small village, half mile E. Fox House is a noted Inn on the Sheffield road, and at the extreme verge of the county, three miles E. from Hathersage. Longshaw, a shooting box, three miles S.E. from Hathersage, is the property and occasional residence, during the shooting season, of the Duke of Rutland, being situated on the verge of the Yorkshire moors, particularly noted for grouse and other game. Moor Seats, a neat pleasant mansion, one mile N.E. from the village, is the seat and property of Thos. Eyre. Esq. Nether Hall, a handsome mansion, quarter mile W. from the village, was erected in 1840, and is the property of Jno. Spencer Ashton Shuttleworth, Esq., and residence of Charles James Peel, Esq.

Bamford is an improving and pleasant village and township, near the Derwent, 2½ miles N.W. from Hathersage, and 5 miles N.E. from Castleton, contains 858A. 1R. 12P. of land, (exclusive of the Common, about 800 acres, which is now being enclosed), and in 1851, had 69 houses, and 323 inhabitants, of whom 161 were males and 162 females; rateable value, £986 0s. 1d. Wm. C. Moore, Esq., Messrs. John and Wm. Hibberson, Charles and Henry James Robinson, John S. A. Shuttleworth, Esq., Thos. Eyre, Esq., Mr. Taylor. Mr. John Geo. Platts, Mr. Samuel Hawke, Mr. Jph. Hancock, and Messrs. M. A. and J. Merriman are the principal owners. Tithe commuted in 1841; £35 is paid for large tithe, and £4 for the vicarical. A commodious school room was erected here in 1841, at a cost of £300, and it has been licensed as an Episcopal place of worship, in which the Vicar of Hathersage officiates. Samuel M. Moore and Son have a handsome factory on the Derwent, for doubling cotton, worked by a steam and water power of 60 horses, where upwards of 230 persons are employed. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, erected in 1821. The manor of Bamford was for several ages in the Talbots, Earls of Shrewsbury. In 1802, it belonged to Francis Evans, Esq. Sicklcholme, two miles W. from Hathersage was, until 1848, one large farm house, when it was divided into two. It is the property and residence of Wm. and John Hibberson, whose family have been occupiers here for upwards of 50 years, and were formerly large carriers. About half a mile W. from Sicklebrook was Mythan Bridge, an ancient stone erection of 4 arches; it was washed down by the great flood on Augt., 7th, 1856, since which a temporary one has been constructed of wood. A new bridge is about to be erected a little higher up the Derwent, nearer to Bamford.

Derwent, a township, chapelry, and scattered district of houses, forming the north extremity of the parish, 6 miles N.N.W. from Hathersage, 6 miles N.N.E. from Hope. It is situated in the Derwent Vale, which is in several parts exceedingly romantic, and is bounded on the east by the Yorkshire moors, where, at the south extremity, a road crosses by Moss Car house, to Sheffield, north of which is Moss Car Cross, Dove, Stone Tor, Lost Lad, Old Chapel, and Holden house, within the Yorkshire border. A high range of mountains bound the vale on the west, a road from Glossop crossing the Derwent at Cock's bridge, to Moss Car house. The river Ashop, which collects the waters from the east and to the north-east of Kinderscout, has its confluence with the Derwent at Cock's bridge, near Crook hill. The township contains 3,327A. 2R. 30P. of land, which were enclosed in 1808, but about 1,500 acres still remain in a state of common. It contained in 1851, 31 houses, and 137 inhabitants, of whom 77 were males and 60 females; rateable value, £867 6s. 6d. The Duke of Devonshire, Duke of Rutland, Francis Newdigate, Esq., J. S. A. Shuttleworth, Esq., and Mr. Thomas Gardom, of Baslow, are owners. The Church, dedicated to St. James, is a plain stone edifice, with a turret and one bell. It was originally built as a private chapel, to the Balguy family, who resided near the Hall, was endowed in 1720, by the Rev. Robert Turie, who gave part of two tenements, called the Abbey, and the Carr House, and a rent charge of £2 per annum for a school. This school has now an income of about £6 per annum. The patronage of the chapel was sold by John Balguy, Esq.; of Duffield, to the late Joseph Denman, Esq., M.D., from whom it went to Mr. Shuttleworth, of Hathersage, and sold by him to Mr. Read, of whom it was purchased in 1851, by Francis Newdigate, Esq., of Blackheath, Kent. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued at £90, has been augmented with £400 benefactions, and £600 Queen Anne's bounty, in the patronage of Francis Newdigate, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. H. K. Creed, for whom a parsonage house is about to be built, His Grace the Duke of Devonshire having given a site. Derwent Hall, an ancient stone mansion, erected in 1672, on the northern bank of the river Derwent, over which is a narrow stone bridge, anciently used by Pack horses. The interior of the Hall is worthy of notice; all the principal rooms having polished oak floors, with handsome staircase of the same character, and the entrance hall presents to the eye some beautiful tapestry brought from Worksop manor. In one of the rooms is an exceedingly fine painting by "Titian," the Expulsion of Adam and Eve. The Hall is the property of Francis Newdigate, Esq., and the seat of Geo. Newdigate, Esq. Ashopton Inn, on the Sheffield and Glossop road, is a commodious house, eleven miles W. from Sheffield, 13 miles S.E. by E. from Glossop. A Methodist chapel was erected at Ashopton, in 1840. Feast, nearest Sunday to St. James's day.

OUTSEATS township consists of scattered houses, extending nearly two miles N. from Hathersage, having the Yorkshire moors on the east, where is Stanedge Pole, near which on the north, a road from Hope crosses the moors. This township contains 4,352A. 3R. 18P. of land, mostly a good soil, and had in 1851, 54 houses, and 221 inhabitants, of whom 111 were males, and 110 females; rateable value, £1,436 3s. 11d. It was enclosed about 30 years ago, when land was awarded in lieu of tithe. Miss H. Wright, J. S. A. Shuttleworth, Esq., and Mrs. Newton Shaw, are owners. The principal places which extend from half a mile to near two miles, N. and N.W. from Hathersage, are, Brookfield, North Lees, Birley, Thorpe, The Hill, Hathersage Lane, Callow, Nether and Upper Hurst, Gate House, Outlane, Green's House and Cow Close.

Brookfield Hall, a handsome residence, 1 mile N. from Hathersage, erected in 1656, and enlarged and improved in 1825, is the seat and property of Miss H. Wright.

North Lees Hall, an ancient stone mansion, 1¼ miles N. from Hathersage, is the property of Miss H. Wright, and the residence of Mr. George and the Misses Eyre. Here are the ruins of an ancient Catholic Chapel. Near to Green's House, is an extensive paper mill for the manufacture of all kinds of shop and factor's paper. The school here has been converted into two cottages, and the proceeds applied to Hathersage school. (See Charities.) No minerals are found in this part; the soil is generally good grazing land.

CHARITIES.—Joan Morton, by will in 1611, left certain residues, her property, for the poor of Hathersage. Her executor, Thomas Eyre, realised £140 for that object, which he intended to have bestowed on lands for that purpose, but died before that was effected, and by his will directed his executor, Robert Eyre, to pay the above sum; and also bequeathed a further sum to the said poor. Robert Eyre refused to pay, pretending he had no assets, on which a suit was commenced against him, and before that was decided he died; after which the suit was revived against John Eyre his executor, and George Eyre, his son, and others of his children; and at last an agreement was made that they should pay £200 in discharge of the legacies given by both wills, which was paid accordingly, and was bestowed on a house and land in Ashton, that the yearly rents might be distributed amongst the poor of the parish of Hathersage, in the manner following, viz.:—one half thereof to the poor on the west side above a rivulet called Chilbage, and the other half inhabiting Chilbage east; the estate and premises were vested in John Eyre, of Cruckhill, and John Baddely, by the authority of an act made 39th Elizabeth for erecting hospitals, and by force of an Act made in 21st James, for making perpetual the same; the said messuage in Ashton was thenceforth to be an hospital for the poor of the said parish of Hathersage, which should be under the control of six governors, and should be incorporated and called by the name of "The Governors of the Hospital in Ashton, of the foundation of Joan Morton," to whom the said messuage in Ashton, and all edifices, lands, and tenements thereto belonging were granted. The following is the rental of the trust property, which is situated in the hamlet of Ashton and parish of Hope, which contains 19A. 3R. 11P. of land, let for £24 5s. per annum. Although the houses are called by the foundation deed of 1642, an hospital, there is no trace of its having been used as a habitation for poor persons. The whole rents of the estate have been divided in equal moieties, one of which is distributed to the poor of the chapelry of Derwent, as being the west part; and the other to the poor of Hathersage, and the hamlets of Bamford and Outseats, as being the part beneath Chilbage east. The rents are received annually on the Saturday before St. Thomas's day, and on that day a meeting is held, and the sums paid to the overseers for distribution.

Hugh Barber, by indenture in 1606, in consideration of an annual rent of 22s., and the sum of £60, granted to two persons, the moiety of a messuage in Maltby, in the county of York, and of all the lands belonging the same. for the use the said Hugh Barber, and S. Barber, his wife, for their lives; and after the decease of their survivor, rendering annually to the churchwardens of Hathersage and Derwent, and their successors, an annual rent of 22s. payable on the 1st of March, to be distributed by them to poor and needy persons according to the last will of Hugh Barber, viz.:—one-half to the poor above, and the other to the poor below Chilbage, which is given with Morton's charity.

Richard Silvester it is stated on a tablet in Hathersage church, dated 1790, gave the sum of £1 3s. to be annually distributed to the poor of Hathersage, on St. Thomas's day, charged on a close called Seat Field. John S. A. Shuttleworth, Esq., pays the above sum, out of which 1s. is allotted to the chapelry of Derwent, and the residue is divided between the township of Hathersage and the hamlets of Bamford and Outseats. But it would seem a larger portion ought to be allotted to the chapelry of Derwent. This is also distributed with Morton's charity.

John Frost, of Riding House, in this parish, by will, in 1773, gave the sum of 15s. to be equally divided between the hamlets of Hathersage, Outseats, and Derwent, charged on his real estate at Riding House, to be paid yearly on St. Thomas's day, at the discretion of the overseers of the poor. The owner pays the above sum which is distributed with Morton's charity.

Adam Morton by will, 1820, gave £10, the interest to be distributed to the poor of Hathersage hamlet, especially widows, yearly on St. Thomas's day. This sum with a donation of £6 13s. 4d. of Robert Crossland, is now in the hands of Mr. Cocker, of Hathersage, on promissory note dated 1805, at five per cent. The interest, 16s. 8d., is distributed with Morton's charity.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the Vicar of Hathersage, which he lays out in coarse woollens and flannel, and distributes amongst the poor about Christmas.

Derwent Chapelry.—Joan Morton, Hugh Barber, Richard Silvester, and John Frost's Charities. (See Hathersage.) The annual sum of £12 19s. 6d., being the amount the overseer receives in respect of these, is distributed by him on the day after St. Thomas's day, in sums varying from 14s. to £2 10s., there being but few poor persons in this chapelry.

Robert Turie, by will in 1720, gave to the inhabitants of Derwent a rent charge of 40s. per annum, issuing out of two messuages in Derwent Dale, called the Abbey and the Carr House, to procure six of the poorest children of that place, or within two miles of it, to be yearly instructed in reading English, such children, and the master, to be appointed by the minister of Derwent chapel and his successors; and a rent charge of £3 to the inhabitants of Stoney Middleton, for the like purpose. He gave the said premises to the corporation of Queen Anne's bounty, for the use of the minister of Derwent chapel and his successors, to the end the said minister might be entitled to receive the said Queen Anne's bounty of £10 per annum. The Abbey and the Carr House are the property of the perpetual curate of Derwent, and the annual sum of 40s. is paid by him to the schoolmaster, who instructs four poor children in reading, writing, and arithmetic, in a schoolroom built by subscription.

John Eyre of Crookhill, by indenture, 1772, granted to trustees, of which himself or his heirs should be one, the sum of £100, and the further sum of £20 to be placed out on security, or invested in land. As to the said £100, to cause eight, ten, or twelve poor children of the hamlet of Woodland, in the parish of Hope, and the hamlet of Derwent, in the parish of Hathersage, to be taught to read, write, and cast accounts, at the school at Derwent. As to the £20 on trust, to the same trustees, the interest to buy common prayer books, and bestow the same on the poorest children of Woodland and Derwent Dale. The annual sum of £4 is paid to the schoolmaster for instructing eight poor children; and the annual sum of 16s., as the interest of the £20, is expended by Mr. Wm. Thomason, who holds the £120 at 4 per cent., in the purchase of prayer and other books, which are sent to the schoolmaster, and given to the poor children in his school.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. paid to the incumbent of this chapelry, is laid out in coarse woollen or flannel, and given to the poor about Christmas.

Benjamin Ashton, of Hathersage, Esq., by deed, dated 2nd March, 1718, granted to the poor of Hathersage, for the use of a public school, a piece of land in the hamlet of Outseats, adjoining the highway, containing four perches; and he further directed, in 1725, his executors to lay out the sum of £200 in purchasing freehold land, to hold to them and their heirs, in trust, that the rents should be applied to charitable and pious uses—viz. he gave to the poor of Hathersage and Outseats, for ever, the yearly sum of 40s., to be paid to the vicar and overseers for the time being, (this is now distributed with Morton's charity); and he gave to the vicar for the time being the yearly sum of £3, to be paid on St. Thomas's day, the vicar to preach a charity sermon on that day; and he also gave to the schoolmaster of Hathersage for the time being, the yearly sum of £5, to be paid on St. Thomas's day, provided that his heirs should have the nomination of the said schoolmaster, who should also teach ten of the poorest boys in Hathersage and Outseats. The sum of £200 was never laid out in land, but annual sums of 40s., £3, and £5, are considered as being charges on the Hathersage estate. The building, erected on the land granted in 1718, between the villages of Hathersage and Outseats, called the Geer Green school, consisted of a school-room and two small rooms at the end. It ceased to be used as a school in 1807. About the year 1804 a new school was built by subscription in the village of Hathersage; and in consequence of the master of Geer Green being unable to obtain a sufficient number of scholars, the school was given up. Applications were made to Major Shuttleworth, to permit the annuity of £5 to be transferred to the new school, to which he objected. Since the investigation, Major Shuttleworth has expressed his readiness to re-establish the school, to appoint a new master, and pay the arrears of the annuity, which will amount to nearly £100.

Outseats Hamlet.—Henry Ibbotson gave, as stated on a tablet in Hathersage church, £10, and Henry Brownhill, £5, and small sums, amounting together to £7 3s. by five other persons, inhabitants of the hamlet. A sum of £22, arising from these subscriptions, was placed by the said Henry Ibbotson, with other monies, amounting to £60, on a security of the Sheffield turnpike road, at 5 per cent. interest. The interest, 22s., for the amount of the subscription, is received by Mr. Cocker, and is paid by him to the master of the school at Hathersage, built in 1804, for the instruction of three poor children of Outseats.

Bamford Hamlet.—Thomas Thornhill, by will, gave to the poor of Bamford 10s. a year, to begin to be paid when his grandson, Thomas Derwent, was of age, or at his death, if sooner, to be paid out of the Kirk Flats for ever. In the returns of 1786, the date is stated to be 1722. The annual sum is paid by the tenant of the fields.

George Brownhill, by will, gave to Nicholas Brownhill, his son, and his heirs, all his lands in Thornhill, in the parish of Hope, on condition to pay the legacies therein mentioned; and that he gave to six of the poor people of Bamford 6d. each, to be given them yearly on Good Friday, being a legacy desired by his late wife; and he also gave to the poor people of Bamford 6s., to be given them yearly on Thomas's day by his executors. These two annual sums of 3s. and 6s. are paid from a farm on Thornhill.

John Littlewood, by will, in 1743, gave to the poor of Bamford a yearly rent charge of 10s., to be issuing out of his tenement called Green Head, or the lands thereto belonging, to be paid by the owners to the overseers of the hamlet for ever, yearly on St. Thomas's day. The Bamford charities are distributed at the same time as Morton's.

Robert Turie, by will, in 1720, gave to the inhabitants of Bamford £40, to be laid out in lands, the interest to be applied for teaching six of the poorest boys of the hamlet to read. This sum appears to have been lost.

Stoney Middleton is a township, chapelry, and romantic village, 5 miles N. by E. from Bakewell, 5 miles E. from Tideswell, and 12 miles S.W. from Sheffield. It is a parochial chapelry, in the parish of Hathersage, from which it is separated by the parish and township of Eyam, and it is partly in that parish; a brook running through the village divides the townships. It is a singular village, the houses being situated one above another on ledges of rock that seem to be almost inaccessible; and others scattered as if by chance at the base of the eminences that rise high above them. It contains 1124A. 3R. 17P. of land, on limestone, abounding in lead, and in 1851 had 134 houses and 593 inhabitants, of whom 303 were males and 290 females; rateable value £1618 18s. 6d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, an owner, and impropriator; the tithe was commuted in 1840; the large for £30; the small belongs to the vicar. Lord Denman, Messrs. Jno. White, Thos. Hinch, Peter Furness, and Jno. Smith, are also owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Martin, is a small stone edifice with a low square tower and three bells. It has an octagon body added in 1767, which consists of a nave, chancel, centre aisle, and gallery. The living is a perpetual curacy valued in the King's book at £2 6s. 8d., now £100, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £800 Queen Anne's bounty, and £1000 Parliamentary grant. It is annexed to the vicarage of Hathersage. Rev. Urban Smith, M.A., incumbent, who resides at the Parsonage, a neat house on a good eminence east of the Church. In the churchyard is an ancient stone font. A National school was erected in 1835, and enlarged in 1845, at a cost of about £200, and will accommodate 100 children; the average attendance is about 50, who pay from 2d. to 4d. per week each; Hy. Jones, master. Feast, Sunday before Old Michaelmas day. Immediately on passing the last house in the village, to the west, a deep ravine opens its marble jaws, the entrance to Middleton Dale. The crags that form the right side of Middleton Dale are boldly featured. Half way from their base they are much broken, and present many projections and recesses; above, rises a lofty range of perpendicular rock, the different strata of which are distinctly defined. The best view of this stupendous piece of rock scenery is obtained from near the base of the ascending ground that forms the left side of the dale, about half a mile from the village. Before you, seen in the distance, is the chasm through which the road winds to Tideswell and Buxton; on the right is the Delve, a deep dell whose rocky sides are partly covered with verdure and adorned with underwood, elm, ash, and sycamore. A little nearer the foreground is Eyam Dale, one side of which is strongly characterised with castellated rock; the other is crested with fine fir and ash. Directly opposite this dale, another branches out on the left; the whole scene presenting a singular combination of rocks, hills, and deep ravines. The wild scenery of Middleton Dale is often greatly improved in picturesque effect, by the fires of the lime kilns, which are numerous; the smoke which rises from them curling about the rocks, and occasionally obscuring their summits, gives to the whole scene a character of great sublimity. Immediately on entering the dale from the village, on the right hand, is a high perpendicular rock, called the Lover's Leap. From the summit of this precipice, about the year 1760, a love-stricken maiden, of the name of Baddeley threw herself into the chasm below, and, incredible as it may appear, she sustained but little injury. Her face was slightly disfigured, and her body bruised by the brambles and rocky projections that interrupted her fall; but, with a little assistance, she was enabled to walk home. Her bonnet, kerchief, and cap were left at the top of the rock, and some fragments of her torn garments marked the course of her descent. Her singular and almost miraculous escape made a serious impression on her mind; her fit of love subsided, and she afterwards lived in a very exemplary manner in the vicinity of the place which had been the scene of her folly, and died unmarried. Near this rock is a cavern, in which the skeleton of a Scotch pedler was found upwards of fifty years ago. It is supposed that he was murdered by some parties whom he had legally stopped from vending their wares at Eyam wakes. Nothing was known of this murder until his body was found, when it was conveyed to Eyam Church, where it lay in a box for several years unburied. The buckles of his shoes and other articles of his apparel proved it to be the body of the well known pedler. The manor belonged at an early period to the Bernakes of Upper Padley. Richard de Bernake sold it in the reign of Edward I., to Thomas de Furnival. It has ever since passed with the adjoining manor, to which parish it certainly properly belongs; or more properly it is a distinct parish. In the chapel are memorials of the family of Finney, dated 1704 and 1790. The late Dr. Joseph Denman married one of the daughters and eventually sole heiress of Richard Finney, Esq., and possessed the estates which had belonged to that family. In the dale are two cupolas for smelting lead ore, a manufactory of barytes, and several lime kilns. On the right of the road from Bakewell, at the entrance to the village, is an ancient stone mansion with pointed gables, delightfully situated in the meadows, a little east of the Church, the seat and property of the Right Hon. Thos., Lord Denman, who succeeded his father, the late Lord Chief Justice Denman, who died Sept. 23rd., 1849, aged 74 years, and was buried at Stoke Albany, Northamptonshire. Immediately behind the house are the Baths, which were fitted up in a handsome manner by the liberality of the late Lord Denman, on the site of an old one, supposed to have been originally established by the Romans when they occupied the station at Brough. Here is an excellent Inn and Posting-house, "The Moon," kept by Mr. Robert Heginbotham, where visitors and tourists will find superior accommodation, and the most polite attention. Here are several lead mines in the immediate neighbourhood, known as the Sallads, Red Rake, Shepherds, Sough, and Enterprize mines, the latter of which have been recently opened, at an outlay of about £1000. They are worked by a company to whom Mr. R. Heginbotham is secretary. One Great Barmote Court is held annually in April, alternately at the Moon Inn and at the Bull's Head, Eyam, for the Liberty of Stoney Middleton and Eyam, of which H. G. the Duke of Devonshire, the Marqnis of Chandos, and Sir Richard Tufton, Bart., are the lords. Joseph Hall, Esq., of Castleton, is the steward; and James Longsdon, Esq., of Little Longstone, barmaster.

CHARITIES.—Thomas Whyte, by will, in 1692, gave his messuage, lands, and premises situated at the Booths, within the parish of Hathersage, to five persons and their heirs, on trust, that they should yearly, for ever, pay to the curate of the chapel of Stoney Middleton, the snm of £6, on the feast of St. Thomas, the Apostle, and the day of Penticost, by equal portions, provided that the curate should come into the cure with the consent of Benjamin Ashton and the major part of his trustees, otherwise, the £6, during such time, should be applied to charitable uses; he also directed 10s. should be paid to the clerk of the chapel, twenty sixpenny brown loves on the feast of the purification to twenty poor housekeepers of the chapelry, dwellers within the parish of Hathersage, in addition to which, the same poor were to recive flesh meat to the amount of 1s. each; on Easter-eve the same number of loaves and quantity of flesh meat were to be distributed again, and that 10s. should be paid on Easter-eve to the person who should provide and distribute the same; and that his trustees may take the remainder of the rents and profits, to be equally divided amongst them. The estate consists of 32 acres of old enclosed land, to which, in 1808, at the enclosure, 9 acres were allotted, now let together for £25 per annum, so that the trustees have £15 to be divided amongst themselves. On the two days above named, the trustees send to the overseers of the poor twelve sixpenny loaves, and bacon to the value of a shilling, which is given to the most indigent.

Robert Turie, by will, 1720, gave to the inhabitants of Stoney Middleton, and their successors, a yearly rent charge of £3, issuing out of two messuages in Derwent Dale, (See Derwent chapelry). The sum of £2 is received by the schoolmaster from the incumbent of Derwent, for which he teaches six poor children to read, but the donor's will expresses that nine are to be taught to read. The school was built on the waste land by subscription.

Ashton's Dole.—An annual sum of £10 is paid by John Spencer Ashton Shuttleworth, Esq., of Hathersage, to the chapelwardens and overseers of this chapelry, by whom it is distributed on St. Thomas's day to the poor, in sums varying from 2s. to 10s. This, the returns of 1786 state, arises from the will of Benjamin Ashton, the great grandfather of the late Major Shuttleworth.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

HOPE is an extensive parish, containing the townships of Hope, Abney and Abney Grange, Aston, Bradwell, Brough and Shatton, Fairfield chapelry, Fernilee, Grindlow, Hazlebadge, Highlow, Hucklow Great, Hucklow Little, Offerton, Padley Nether, Stoke, Thornhill, Wardlow, (part of) and Woodland Hope, which, together contain 41,131A. 0R. 5P. of land, including roads and waste, and in 1851 had 980 houses and 4604 inhabitants, of whom 2359 were males and 2245 were females; rateable value £19,178 2s. 1d.

HOPE is a small pleasant and well built market town, situated on the Sheffield and Chapel-en-le-Frith turnpike road, and at the confluence of two streams, which form the river Noe, 6 miles N. by E. from Tideswell, 4 miles W.S.W. from Hathersage, and 15 miles S.W. from Sheffield, contains 2500 acres of fertile land, and in 1851 had 99 houses and 429 inhabitants, of whom 215 were males and 214 females; rateable value £2219 9s. 1d. Colonel Leslie is the principal owner, Benj. Bagshaw, Esq., Mr. Robt. Middleton, Mrs. Nuttall, Wm. Fleming, M.D., Mr. Chpr. Greaves Middleton, Mr. Thos. Elliott, and Phillip Hubbersty, Esq., are also owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £13 13s. 4d., now £380, endowed with £10 private benefaction, in the peculiar jurisdiction and patronage of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. The Rev. Chas. John Daniel, M.A., is the incumbent. The Church is a large ancient structure, in the later style of English architecture, with nave, chancel, side aisles, a tower surmounted by a spire, in which is a peal of six good bells. The vicarage is a handsome stone residence, erected in 1856, on the site of the old one, a little south of the Church, at a cost of £1000 aided by a grant of £600 from the Church Building Society. In the Church is a monument to Henry Balguy, Esq., of Rowlee, who died in 1685. The large tithe have been sold to the land owners, and the small are commuted for. The award of the enclosure was signed 31st December, 1819. The manor of Hope was part of the ancient demense of the crown, and had seven hamlets annexed to it at the Domesday survey; it was afterwards considered as part of the manor of the High Peak, and that manor having since been divided into two, it is now esteemed part of the manor of Castleton, held on lease by the Duke of Devonshire. Joseph Hall, Esq., is lord of the rectory manor. In 1205, King John granted the Church to the Bishop of Lichfield, with the chapelry of Tideswell, then an appendage; by some subsequent arrangement it was vested in the dean and chapter, by whom the rectory manor was sold, in the reign of Edward VI., to Ralph Gell, Esq., of Hopton. The devisees in trust of Philip Gell, Esq., sold it to John Bagshaw, Esq., the latter conveyed it to the late Mr. Micah Hall, of Castleton. In the year 1715, John Balguy, Esq., of Hope Hall, procured a grant for a weekly market on Saturday, and four fairs. The market was long discontinued, but, in 1843, was again revived, and was held on Thursday, until 1855, when a cattle market was established, which is held on the last Wednesday in every month; and the fairs, principally for cattle, are held March 28th and May 13th, with a statutes for hiring servants, on the latter day. The Wesleyan Methodists have a neat chapel here, erected in 1835. Here is an ancient school, endowed with £8 per annum, in which the teacher's old oak chair, dated 1664, has an inscription upon it, "Ex torto ligno non fit Mercurius," translated thus—"An Apollo is not made out of a twisted log."

Eccles House, half a mile south of the village, pleasantly situated on an eminence, is the property of Wm. Fleming, Esq., M.D., of Westmorland, and residence of William and A. B. Greaves. About half a mile west from Hope is the cupola of Robt. How Ashton, Esq.

Pindale Lime Works, are situated 1 mile S.W. from Hope. This lime is considered to be the best in the county for agricultural purposes, Mr. Nathan Woodroofe Ashton, proprietor. The Independent Order of Odd Fellows have a lodge here, who hold their meetings at the Hall Hotel. Here is also a male and female sick and a funeral society in the town.

Charities.—Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley).—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the vicar for the township of Hope, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed by him amongst the poor about Christmas.

Hope School.—By indentures, March, 1742, Francis Foljambe and five others were appointed trustees, the vicar being one. It is also recited that a messuage in Hope, containing fourteen yards in length and seven in breadth, was conveyed to trustees by Thomas Stevenson, for a free school in Hope, for the habitation of a schoolmaster, and that Thomas Wormald, and Martha his wife, in consideration of £100, conveyed to the trustees of the school a piece of land in Chinley, in the parish of Glossop, called Upper South Head, with a slate break, in trust, that they should pay the clear yearly rents to the schoolmaster at Hope. The property belonging the school consists of 16 acres of land at Chinley, now let for £7 a year, stated to be its full value, also a stone quarry, for which the master, up to 1817, received £5 a year. Since that period nothing has been received. The master ought to have a residence, with a small garden; he also is intitled to £1 11s. 6d. yearly as the interest of one moiety of Champion's legacy, for which he teaches reading to ten children, both of which have not been allowed for some years. The present vicar is taking great interest in searching into the rights of this school.

Rev. Jacob Creswell, by will, in 1722, gave to the poor of Hope, to be paid every New Year's day, the sum of £1 5s. A piece of land, in an open field in Hope, appears to have been derived from this donor, and by the award of the commissioners, 1819, an allotment was set out to the poor of Hope, containing 4A. 0R. 32P., which, it is stated, was set out in lieu of the above-mentioned land, and also of another piece in the same field, the rents of which had always been carried to the account of the headborough of Hope. The allotment forms one field, let by the overseer for £9 9s. per annum, of which £4 is paid to Creswell's charity, £2 16s. to the headborough, and £2 13s. to the overseer's accounts. It does not appear why any part is carried to the overseer's account. The sum of £4 is disposed of by the overseer, on account of this charity on New Year's day, amongst poor persons of the township of Hope, in sums varying from 1s. to 4s.

Mrs. Creswell, relict of Jacob Creswell, by will, in 1730, left a close, called the Hall Croft Head, in Hope, and a house in Castleton, the profits thereof to be employed in putting out poor children as apprentices. The Hall Croft Head is now let for £6 per annum, and a carpenter's shop, formerly a dwelling-house, for £2 10s. The rents are applied in placing out apprentices, with whom from £4 to £5 is paid, and in providing them, previously, with clothing. At the time of our enquiry, there was a balance of £29 11s. 9d. in the overseer's hands.

Joseph Champion, by will, 1784, left the sum of £70 to be placed out on interest, one half of which to be paid yearly to the schoolmaster of Hope, to teach so many as it will pay for, to read, and the other half to be laid out in wheaten bread, weekly, and given to such poor persons as should attend divine service on a Sunday morning, the vicar or curate, and churchwardens to be trustees. The £70 is lent on interest, at 4½ per cent., of which one half is paid to the schoolmaster, and the remaining £1 11s. 6d, is expended in bread.

Henry Balguy. it is stated on a tablet of benefactions, gave £10 to the poor of Hope, and £5 for putting out apprentices. The former sum, it is supposed, was paid to the school account, but of the latter we have obtained no information.

Abney and Abney Grange, form a joint township, and consists of two small hamlets and a few scattered farms 4 miles N.E. from Tideswell, and 3 miles S.W. from Hathersage, contains 685A. 3R. 29P. of gritstone land, (besides 500 acres of commons not rated) and in 1851 had 21 houses and 99 inhabitants, of whom 61 were males and 38 females; rateable value £685 . Humphrey Bowles, Esq., is lord of the manor, and owns four-fifths of the land, and Colonel Leslie the remainder. Tithes were commuted in 1848 for £91. There are no mines worked here now, and some of the oldest inhabitants remember twenty houses more than at present in the township. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small chapel, in which a Sunday school is kept. The manor, (Habenae) at the Domesday survey belonged to William Peverel. In the reign of Edward II. it belonged to the family of Archer, and at a later period to one of the Bagshaw family, by whom it was sold to the Bradshaws, when, after two centuries, it passed to the Galliards of Edmonton, in Middlesex. The sister and coheiress of the latter brought it to Charles Bowles, Esq., of East Shean, in Surrey.

Aston is a small village and township containing several scattered houses, situated on an acclivity 1 mile E. from Hope, and 6½ miles N.N.E. from Tideswell, contains 540 acres of land, partly clay and red soil, including 33 acres of plantations, and in 1851 had 23 houses and 119 inhabitants, of whom 62 were males and 57 females; rateable value £335 It is in the manor of Hope. Colonel Leslie, Robert How Ashton, Esq., Rev. Joseph Nodder, with several others are owners. Tithes were commuted in 1847. The vicar of Hope receives £50 for large tithe, and Mr. Joseph Goodwin, 20s. for small tithe.

Bradwell is a large ancient irregular built village and township, in a sheltered situation, nearly surrounded with lofty hills, 4 miles N.N.E. from Tideswell, 10 miles N.N.W. from Bakewell, 4 miles S.W. from Hathersage, contains 2270 acres of land, and in 1851 had 306 houses and 1334 inhabitants, of whom 650 were males and 684 females; rateable value £1,925. It is in the manor of Castleton. Col. Leslie owns nearly one half of the township. There are also about 140 small freeholders. The land is considered good for grazing purposes, and Bradwell hills are noted for their rich herbage, peculiarly adopted for young horses, great numbers of which are sent from various parts of the country. Mining operations are the chief employment of the inhabitants, and veins of lead ore, running from east to west, are worked to a distance of three miles from the village. There are three cupolas for smelting lead ore, two of which are at present standing, the other is worked by the Brightside Mining Compy. Mr. Thos. Burgoyne has large works here for smelting slag. Hats have been made for a considerable period in the village. The Pindale Limeworks are situated 1 mile S. from Hope. The lime is considered to be the best in the county for agricultural purposes; Mr. N. W. Ashton, proprietor. The tithe was commuted in 1844 for £103. The Wesleyan Methodists have a neat chapel here, erected in 1807, and a Sunday school in 1844, at a cost of £200, raised by subscription. The Primitive Methodsits have a large stone chapel, erected in 1845, at a cost of £700, and they now use a chapel, which formerly belonged to the Baptists, as a Sunday school. The Unitarian chapel was rebuilt in 1754. Bradwell Sunday school was erected by general subscription in 1826, at a cost of £300, in which a day school is also kept. A school was built in 1825 by John Birley, Esq., and endowed by Elias Marshall with £3 per annum, for which five children are taught free. Bradwell Dale is a romantic chasm of high rocks and precipitous cliffs, which extend to Hazlebadge. Near Eden Tree, or Bath Tavern, are two saline springs, the property of Mr. Middleton, the use of which has been found very efficacious in many instances; they are only a few degrees of lower temperature than the Buxton or Matlock waters. This place is noted for its crystalized or Bagshaw cavern, which was discovered about 1807, and extends in a succession of rocky fissures and chasms for nearly half a mile. The cavern is entered by a descent of 126 rough hewn steps, which lead to the first landing; from this place the caverns are approached by low narrow passages, but, having surmounted these difficulties, scenes of unparalleled beauty and splendour succeed. The different recesses, from their singular beauty, are dignified with appropriate names, as the Grotto of Calypso, the Grotto of Paradise, the Music Chamber, Constellation Grotto, Hall of State, &c., &c. On entering this cavern, the convenient covering of the miners is necessary, and in visiting it the lover of nature cannot be disappointed, it is so rich in stalactitic matter. Mr. Michah Hall is the guide.

Charities.—Elias Marshall, in 1765, gave a piece of land beneath the Long Meadow Causeway, containing half an acre; another p rcel of enclosed land in the town furlong, with a barnstead at the east end, containing half an acre, all in Bradwell, upon trust, out of the rents to cause five of the poorest children in Bradwell to read. The property now consists of a close called the Molly Pingle, containing 2r. 34p., and an allotment set out at the enclosure of 1r. 22p., in the Butts, let for £3 per annum; another small allotment, too trifling to enclose was sold for £5. The rent is received by one of the trustees, and paid to a schoolmistress, who keeps a school in a room built by Mr. Birley, for that purpose; she instructs five children in reading.

Thomas Hallam, by will, 1729, gave to the poor of Bradwell half an acre of land in a place called the Moor Hall, for ever, the rents thereof to be distributed to poor widows and fatherless children on St. Thomas's day. George Barnsley, who for many years occupied this land at the rent of 12s. 6d., sold it about the year 1806 as his own property, subject to the above rent for the poor. About 1811, an allotment of seven perches on Bradwell Edge was awarded in respect of it, the whole of which is now let for £2 17s. per annum. It seems evident that George Barnsley had no title to the premises, and that the charity is entitled to the land, with the allotment set out in respect of it. The present owner pays 12s. 6d. to the overseer, who distributes it on St. Thomas's day.

Thomas Middleton, by will, 1729, left to the poor of Bradwell the sum of 5s., to be paid every St. Thomas's day. There is also another rent charge mentioned in the returns of 1786, of 5s., given by Thomas Middleton, weaver.. The yearly sum of 10s., is now paid by Thomas Middleton, in respect of the Bank Close, which is distributed as directed.

Mary Hall, by will, 1762, bequeathed to poor widows and fatherless children of Bradwell 15s. yearly, to be paid on St. Thomas's day by her executor, George Barnsley, chargeable on a piece of land called the Moor Law. By an agreement with the overseers, dated 16th December, 1799, the said George Barnsley gave to the poor of Bradwell two cottage houses on Bradwell hills, each of them let at the rent of 18s. a year, on the payment of £5 to the said George Barnsley, and 15s. yearly on St. Thomas's day. The overseers of the township are in possession of the cottages, and the yearly sum of 15s. is paid out of the poor rates, and distributed according to the donor's intention.

Mr. Artram, it is stated on a tablet in Hope church, left to the poor of Bradwell 12s., to be paid every St. Thomas's day. The yearly sum of 15s. is stated to have been formerly paid by Isaac Morton from a piece of land called the Hinde-tongue's Legge, which had been secured by deed dated 12th September, 1667, but it has been discontinued for a long period; attempts have been made to recover it, but there seems to be no sufficient evidence to support the claim.

BROUGH and SHATTON hamlets form a joint township, which contains 980A. 3R. 11P. of meadow, arable, and pasture land, (inclusive of 530 acres of common land,) and in 1851 had 20 houses, and 98 inhabitants, of whom 45 were males, and 53 females; rateable value £539 19s. 7d. It is in the manor of Castleton. The Duke of Devonshire, Colonel Leslie, Francis B. Champion, Esq., Rev. John Champion, Executors of Jonathan Taylor, Mr. William Greaves, Thomas Cockayne, Thomas Wilson, and Miss Rawson, are the owners. The former is lord of the manor.

BROUGH is a small pleasant village, 1 mile S.E. from Hope, and 5 miles N.N.E. from Tideswell; it is a place of considerable antiquity, and was of some importance in the time of the Romans. It is said to have been the Roman station, Crocoland, and that there was a castle near the confluence of two streams, Noe and the Bradwell waters. The angle of two streams is a situation which the Romans seem always to have chosen if they could possibly obtain it. Numerous relics have been found here, consisting of every species of Roman antiquities, amongst which was a gold coin of Vespasian. In 1761, the Rev. Mr. Pegge visited the place, and saw a rude bust of Apollo, and of another deity, in stone. A double row of gritstone pillars formerly crossed the field in which the two streams have their confluence, and foundations of buildings have been turned up by the plough, on every side, when pieces of swords, spears, bridle bits, tiles, and bricks have been found. About seventy years ago, two large urns containing ashes were taken out of the ground in a fine state of preservation, which were sent to London; at a later period, a half-length figure of a woman was found, with her arms folded across her breast, cut in rough gritstone. Brough Mill, which in the reign of Edward III. belonged to the family of Strelley, was then held by the service of attending the King on horseback whenever he should come into Derbyshire, carrying a heroner, (heron falcon.) If his horse should die on the journey, the king was to buy him another, and to provide two robes and bouche of court.

SHATTON (Upper and Lower) 1 mile E. from Brough, consists of four farms.

FERNILEE, or FERNEY-LEY, a scattered village and township pleasantly situated near the river Goyt, on the road from Whaley Bridge to Buxton, 4 miles S.W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, and $5\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.W. from Buxton, contains 2566A. 0R. 36P. of land, (soil various,) and in 1851 had 140 houses, and 651 inhabitants, of whom 335 were males, and 316 females; rateable value £1,632 12s. It is in the manor of the High Peak. The principal owners are Duke of Devonshire, J. W. Joddrell, Esq., Guy Gisborne, Esq., Samuel Grimshaw, Esq., Edward Marshland, Esq., Thomas Williamson, Esq., George Dunn, Esq., Mr. John Dixon, Mrs. Mary Stevenson, and Daniel Rawson, Esq. The High Peak railway passes through the township from Whaley to Cromford, near the Manchester and Buxton turnpike road. In 1848, a National school was erected of stone, the cost being raised by subscription and grants. The building consists of one large long room which will accommodate about 200, and the average attendance is about 80; there is a house for the master and mistress attached.

Buxton Powder Works, situated on the Goyt, 4 miles N. from Buxton, on the Manchester road, are occupied by Messrs. Williamson's.

HORRIDGE or HORWICH END, is a village at the junction of the Buxton, Stockport and Macclesfield roads, 3 miles W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith. In 1821, the Wesleyan Methodists erected a neat stone chapel here, this being the most populous part, having the colliery of the late Thomas Gisborne, Esq., M.P., now in the possession of Guy Gisborne, Esq., and extends into the township of Bradshaw Edge. The lower bed is 4 feet 6 inches thick, of which about 3 feet is very inferior, mostly used for the burning of lime, the remaining 18 inches being used for house fires. A small coal of about 18 inches thick, lying 40 yards above the bottom coal, is in great request for smithies, and the blacksmiths fetch it for 20 miles round. A seam varying from 20 inches to 2 feet, lying 20 yards above the smithy coal, is the best for house fires the neighbourhood produces. New pits have been sunk and a powerful engine put down for the getting this coal; the old workings, by means of a level driven east into the hills, being run out. A lead mine, running nearly east and west, cut vertically through the coal strata, has been worked for more than 20 years, yielding a very fine ore. It is almost invariably fruitful when it passes through the last of the three strata of coal mentioned, and yields specimens of a rib of lead ore with the pure coal adhering to each side. Near Horwich End, on the Derbyshire side the river Goyt, but in Taxall liberty, Cheshire, is a colour manufactory, and the extensive bleach works for cotton yarn, with a water and steam power of upwards of 50 horses. Here is a lodge of the Ancient Order of Foresters, who hold their meetings at the White Horse Inn. Horridge is a corruption of High Ridge, but now spelt Horwich.

Shallcross Hall, 3 miles W. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, a handsome stone residence, was for six generations the seat of an ancient family, John Shallcross, Esq., the last heir male, who was sheriff of the county in 1686, died in 1733. It is now the property of J. W. Joddrell, Esq., and residence of Mr. E. Hall.

Charities.—Thomas Ouff, by will, 1629, left all his estate in Kettleshume, to six townships, Fernilee in Derbyshire, and Taxall, Kettleshume, Disley, Prestbury, and Macclesfield, in Cheshire, to every township an equal share of the profits. By the parliamentary returns of 1786, it appears the late trustee, Robert Longden, paid to every one of the townships £1 3s. 4d., and that he paid the residue of the rent, which was £12 or £14 per annum, to a school in his township of Fernilee. The yearly sum of £18 is now paid to a schoolmaster, who teaches eight poor children, by the tenant of an estate in Kettleshume. The school is taught in an ancient building supposed to have been erected by the above named Thomas Ouff.

Thomas Hibbert, in 1676, gave the interest of £60, to be laid out to the use of the poor children of Fernilee, Taxall, Whaley, and Chapel-en-le-Frith, to be paid every year towards putting out a poor child apprentice, the said sum was fixed upon lands called the Folds, in this township, and £3 is received every fourth year from the tenant, and applied by the overseer in putting a poor child out apprentice.

Rev. —— Shallcross.—The yearly sum of 10s. is received from Wm. Needham, as a charge upon his estate at Upper Hill in Fernilee. We have not been able to obtain any authentic account of the origin of the donation. The amount is distributed by the overseer amongst the poor.

Grindlow or Greenlow, a small village and township, situated in an open country, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles E.N.E. from Tideswell, 5 miles S. from Hope, contains 269 acres of tithe-free land, partly on lime, and partly on gritstone, and in 1851 had 19 houses, and 91 inhabitants, of whom 51 were males, and 40 females; rateable value £320. It appears to have gradually declined with the lead mining interest, for in the year 1789, it contained 30 houses, and by the census of 1811, there were 24; it doubtless took its name from the circular elevation in the centre of the village, which was formerly crowned with timber, of which nothing remains, except a few firs, of very stunted growth. A bold ridge of hills, about half a mile N.E. of the village, rises to a considerable height, and commands some very extensive views of the surrounding country. This manor, Grenaslow in Pecco, was given by King John, 1199 or 1200, to the monastery of Lilleshull, in Shropshire. King Edward VI., in 1552, granted it by the name of Greenlow Grange to Sir Wm. Cavendish. In 1641, it belonged to William Cavendish, Earl of Newcastle, being then valued at £156 8s. per annum. It was afterwards the property of Sergeant Hill, whose heires carried it to the Honourable William Cockayne, from whose family it passed by sale to the Coxes, of Derby, and in like manner, a few years ago, to its present possessor, Andrew Brittlebank, Esq.

Hazlebadge, is a small township, consisting of nine scattered farms, 3 miles N.N.E. from Tideswell, contains 950 acres of land, partly on gritstone, and partly on lime, containing lead, and in 1851, had 55 inhabitants, of whom 29 were males and 26 females; of the rateable value of £830; it is a tithe-free estate, of which the Duke of Rutland is sole owner. This manor (Hæslebec) belonged to William Peverell at Domesday survey.

In the fourteenth century, it was in the family of Strelley, afterwards in the Vernons, but it has long been the inheritance of the family of its present possessor.

HIGHLOW, another small township, situated 1½ miles S.W. from Hathersage, and 4 miles S.E. from Hope, contains 418A. 3R. 34P. of land, and in 1851, had 9 houses and 38 inhabitants, of whom 16 were males and 22 females; rateable value £278 6s. 1d. The Duke of Devonshire is sole owner, and it forms a manor with Brough, Offerton, and Shatton, of which the Duke is lord. This manor in the reign of Edward II. belonged to an ancient family of the name of Archer, supposed to be extinct at an early period. In the following century it became the property and seat of a younger branch of the family of Eyre, one of whose descendents, in the early part of the eighteenth century, took the name of Archer. After the death of John Archer, Esq., it was sold under a decree of chancery, in 1842, to the Duke of Devonshire. Lead Mill, ¾ mile from S. from Hathersage, consists of a few houses. Here formerly were some lead works. Highlow Hall, situated on an eminence 1½ miles S.W. from Hathersage, is an ancient mansion, the property of the Duke of Devonshire, and the residence of Mr. John Bagshaw.

HUCKLOW GREAT, township and pleasant village, on the Sheffield and Tideswell road, 2¼ miles N.E. from Tideswell, contains 1,166 acres of land, partly on grit, and partly on limestone, and in 1851, had 51 houses, and 232 inhabitants, of whom 124 were males and 108 females; rateable value £965. Mrs. Wake, of Sheffield, is lady of the manor and considerable owner. The executors of late John Radford, Esq., and several others, are freeholders. This is a rich mineral district, and lead mines extend east and west of the village, to a considerable distance. Mining is the chief employment of the inhabitants. The Wesleyan Methodists have a neat chapel here, erected in 1806, and the Unitarians have a good one, erected in 1796, of which the Rev. Robert Shenton is the pastor. The Presbyterian congregation was first established at Great Hucklow, by the Rev. William Bagshaw, a celebrated nonconformist divine, commonly called the Apostle of the Peak; he was also a native of the village. Great Hucklow was formerly parcel of the Duchy of Lancaster, manor of the High Peak, on lease to the Duke of Devonshire. Ralph de Archer, held a messuage and lands in Great Hucklow, in the reign of Edward I., by the service of keeping the King's forest with bow and arrows. A considerable freehold estate, then called manor in Great Hucklow, belonged to the Earl of Newcastle, in the reign of Charles I. This estate was sold to John Bagshaw, Esq., of Hucklow, from whom it passed by descent to the family of Rich, and the principal part was purchased some time ago by John Radford, Esq., of Smalley, in whose family it is still vested. Feast, last Sunday in August.

CHARITIES.—John Bagshaw, by will, in 1704, devised to his son, Samuel Bagshaw, and his heirs, a meadow called Gill Meadow, in Driffield, on trust that they should pay to such preaching minister as should serve in Great Hucklow, the sum of £4 at Midsummer and Christmas, and should also pay yearly the sum of £1 amongst the most indigent persons in Great Hucklow, on the feast of St. Thomas. The above sums were paid by the steward of Mr. Milnes, until about the year 1805. Upon the sale of Mr. Milnes's estate to different purchasers, the payments were discontinued. We have not been able to ascertain who is the owner of the land called Gill Meadow, in Driffield.

HUCKLOW, LITTLE, is a small ancient village and township, 2 miles N.N.E. from Tideswell, and 3½ miles S. by E. from Hope, contains 400 acres of land, principally on limestone with lead ore, and in 1851, had 49 houses, and 235 inhabitants, of whom 128 were males, and 107 females; rateable value £380. Captain William Carlyle is lord of the manor and principal owner. Col. Leslie, and Mr. Thomas Pierson, of Sheffield, are also owners. This manor was for many generations in the family of Foljambe. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here. Coplow Dale, ½ mile N. from the village. Windmill a small hamlet, 1 mile S. from Little Hucklow. Feast, last Sunday in August.

PADLEY, NETHER, a small township, pleasantly situated on the Sheffield road, 2¼ miles S. by E. from Hathersage, and overlooking the vale of the Derwent, which separates this from Woodland Eyam. It contains 260 acres of land, a gritstone soil, and in 1851 had 8 houses, and 47 inhabitants, of whom 27 were males, and 20 females; rateable value £239 18s. Edmund Gillings Maynard, Esq., is sole owner and lord of the manor. The tithes have been commuted, large for £24, lamb and wool £3, vicarial £12 3s.

Directory.—John Crossland, farmer, Maynard Arms Farm; Matthew Crossland farmer; Elizabeth White, vict., Grouse Inn, Common; and Thomas White farmer, Tagnes.

OFFERTON, a small township, 4 miles S.E. from Hope, 1¼ mile W. by S. from Hathersage, contains 365A. 1R. 30P. of gritstone land, exclusive of 27A. 3R. 22P. woods, 9A. 3R. 3P. roads and rivers, and 245 acres of common not rateable. In 1851 here was 4 houses, and 27 inhabitants, of whom 13 were males, and 14 females; rateable value £362 7s. 4½d., Here was formerly a seat of the Eyres, which now belongs to Mrs. F. A. Shaw, and S. P. Shaw, Esq. The Duke of Devonshire holds the manor under the crown, and with Thomas Greaves, and Mellor School are owners. Tithes were commuted in 1848, large for £24, lamb and wool for £4 5s., and vicarial for £4. John Heald Bradwell, Robert Bradwell, and Wm. Robinson, Garner House. are the resident farmers, and are also owners.

STOKE, a small township and highly picturesque district, 1½ miles N.E. from Stoney Middleton, and contains 506 acres of land, and in 1851 had 12 houses, and 62 inhabitants, of whom 34 were males, and 28 females; rateable value £415 10s. The Hon. Henry Bridgman Simpson, of Babworth, Nottingamshire, is the sole owner, and lord of the manor. Tithes were commuted in 1847 for £51 10s. 3d. Stoke Hall is a beautiful ancient stone mansion, embosomed in foilage, and situated on a gentle acclivity that forms the bank of the Derwent, the property of the Hon. H. B. Simpson. Knouchley is a pleasant farmhouse. Goatscliff formerly a noted millstone quarry, consists of a few scattered houses. The manor of Stoke was sold by Henry Lord Grey, of Codnor, about the year 1473, to Robert Barley, Esq., whose posterity resided at Stoke for several generations. In the reign of Charles I., it was one of the manors of William Cavendish, Earl of Newcastle. Jacinth Sacheverell was lord of this manor in 1656. The first Lord Bradford acquired it in marriage with the heiress of Simpson, from whom it has descended to the present possessor.

Directory.—Joseph Bennett, farmer, Goatscliff; Wm. Grant and Richard Gravenor, farmers, Knouchley; William Oates, wood steward, The Hall; George Outram, cowkeeper, Robert Outram, Peak and French, millstone maker, Padle Wood Quarry, Grindleford Bridge, and Thomas Outram, woodman.

THORNHILL is a small ancient village and township, situate on a fine eminence, 6½ miles N.E. by N. from Tideswell, 2 miles E. from Hope, contains 500 acres of land, and in 1851 had 29 houses and 151 inhabitants, of whom 81 were males, and 50 females; rateable value £500. Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, but Col. Leslie is the principal owner. Here are also several smaller owners. The large tithe has been commuted for £70, and the vicar of Hope has the small tithe. This manor belonged to a family who took their name from it, and by whom it was conveyed, about the beginning of the 15th century, to the Eyres, of Hope. John Eyre, of Hope, sold it, about the year 1602, to Adam Slack, yeoman, of Tideswell, by whose family it was sold, in 1613, to Thomas Eyre, Esq., of Hassop, ancester of the late Earl Newburgh.

WARDLOW is a small village and township 2 miles E. by S. from Tideswell, partly in Bakewell parish.

WARDLOW MIRES, a hamlet, situated partly in the township of Wardlow, Great Hucklow, and Litton; it is also noticed with Bakewell parish.

WOODLAND HOPE is an extensive district and township, forming the north side of the parish of Hope, 4¾ miles N.N.W, from Hope, contains about 22,000 acres of land, of which 7,000 acres are rateable, and in 1851 had 43 houses, and 256 inhabitants, of whom 138 are males, and 118 females; rateable value £4,200. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and owner of 19,253A. 2R. 25P. of land, which contains no minerals. The houses are all scattered farm houses, of which several have lately been rebuilt. A few oats are grown, but the land is principally grass, and subject to the tithe of lamb and wool. Snake Inn, on the Sheffield and Glossop turnpike road, 17 miles W. from Sheffield, and 7 miles S.E. from Glossop, is a commodious house. This township partakes of John Eyre's charity for teaching poor children and buying prayer books. (See Derwent, in Hathersage parish.)

Fairfield is a pleasant village, township, and parochial chapelry, in the parish of Hope, situated on a gentle eminence which forms a part of the extensive range of hills which surround Buxton, from which it is 1 mile E.N.E., and about 11 miles S.W. from Hope. The river Wye, which rises from hills west of Buxton, here divides the parishes of Hope and Bakewell, and this township from Buxton. The river passes through a culvert under the square in Buxton, four houses of which, with the Quadrant (consisting of 7 houses) the George Hotel, the Stables, Wye House, the new Church, and Chalybeate spa, are in this township, which contains 3920 acres of land, of which the high parts are late and cold, but the valleys and lower lands are rich pastures, and in 1851 had 115 houses and 574 inhabitants, of whom 284 were males and 290 females; rateable value £3350. The Duke of Devonshire is lessee of the manor under the Crown and considerable owner; John Deakin, Esq., of London, Robt. Goodwin, Esq., of Pig Tor, a handsome residence near the verge of an abrupt rocky precipice near Fairfield, and Mr. Samuel Barker are also owners, with several smaller freeholders. The Chapel, St. Peter, a small modern stone structure, was erected on the site of the ancient chapel in 1839, under the superintendence of P Heacock, Esq., late agent to the Duke of Devonshire. The living is a perpetual curacy, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, certified value £10 10s., now £79, in the patronage of the trustees and incumbency of the Rev. Charles Smith, M.A. The Wesleyans have a small chapel here. The tithe was commuted in 1842 for £64 for hay and corn, to the Duke of Devonshire, as impropriator, and £30 for lamb and wool, of which one-third belongs to his Grace, and £1 10s. for small tithe to the vicar of Hope. By letters patent of 37th of Elizabeth, six resident governors were appointed, of the almshouses there to be erected for six poor persons, who were incorporated, and had power to hold lands and purchase to the amount of £40 a year, of which foundation, if it ever took effect, there is no trace; they also have the patronage of the chapel. In default of the governors appointing within six months after a vacancy it lapses to the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield. Here are many scattered farms; of which the Water Swallows consist of three farms, near the Tideswell and Buxton road, where a small stream of water disappears, a little north from the village; north of which is Black Edge and Dove Holes, at the north extremity. The Barmes, north east. Deepdale is a romantic glen, near King's Sterndale; near which is Cow-low, Low-foot, and other scattered farms. Buxton races were formerly held here on the common, but have been discontinued for about 16 years; the grand stand is now in ruins. During the last year several handsome houses have been erected for the accommodation of visitors to Buxton; the Inns and most of the farmers in the village also let apartments. Feast, Sunday nearest to St. Peter's Day.

CHARITIES.—School.—Anthony Swann by will, 1662, gave an annual rent of £4, to be issuing out of certain lands, to be employed after his decease for educating ten of the poorest children of Fairfield, and he constituted the constable of Wormhill and the curate and headborough of Fairfield, and their successors, supervisors of the charity. By an act for enclosing the common land, in Fairfield, the commissioners were required to allot to the trustees of the school, for the benefit of the master and his successors, land of the yearly value of £10; and by their award, 1772, certain allotments were made to the school. The trustees are those appointed in respect of Anthony Swann's charity. We apprehend the appointment of supervisors of this charity precludes us from any investigation.

Rowland Swann, who died in 1693, by his will gave £5, in trust to have the interest thereof laid out annually in books of divinity and given to the poor. The interest, 5s., is laid out in the purchase of spelling books and testaments, which are given amongst the children in the school, taught in respect of Swann's charity.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollens and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

PEAK FOREST, a chapelry, small village and ex. par. liberty, on the road from Tideswell to Chapel-en-le-Frith, ; 3 miles N.W. from the former, and 4½ miles S.E. from the latter, contains 5026A. 3R. 34P. of land, and in 1851 had 130 houses, and 596 inhabitants, of whom 322 were males and 274 females; rateable value £2,834 3s. 3d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Chapel, dedicated to St. James, is a plain neat stone edifice, with turret and one bell. The living is a perpetual curacy, of the value of £70, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield; the Duke of Devonshire, patron, and the Rev. Henry Barrow Chinn, B.A., incumbent. The King's Forest of the Peak, anciently called De Alto Pecco, was of great extent, it is said to have included the different parishes and townships of Castleton, Hope, Chapel-en-le-Frith, Mottram, and Longden Dale. It was in ancient times much infested with wolves. A family of the hereditary name of Wolfhunt held land by the service of keeping the forest clear of those destructive animals. It seems that they had ceased to be inhabitants of the forest before the reign of Edward II. A record of that period states that John le Wolfhunt, son of John le Wolfhunt, held certain lands by the service of taking and destroying all wolves that should come into his Majesty's forest of the Peak. The Peak forest is spoken of as being plentifully stocked with deer in the year 1634; it is probable they were destroyed in the civil wars. Eldon Hole, ½ mile N. from Peak Forest village, and 3 miles westward from Castleton, is a famous perpendicular chasm, and considered one of the seven wonders of the world; its mouth is about 90 feet in length, and 30 in breadth in the widest part; and to prevent accidents, a strong wall is erected round it. The credulity of travellers has often been grossly imposed on by tales respecting its immeasurable depth. It was a matter of such notoriety in the days of Queen Elizabeth, that the Earl of Leicester had a man let down into it, who, when drawn up again (it is said), was speechless, and shortly afterwards died. Calcot has noticed it at some length in his treatise on the deluge, and instanced it as a proof of his theory. Cotton, the natural poet of the Peak, has given an elaborate account of it. John Lloyd, Esq., F.R.S., descended into it in the year 1773. He reached its bottom 62 yards from the mouth, the light from which was sufficiently strong to permit the reading of the smallest print. The interior of the chasm he described as consisting of two parts; one small like an oven, the other very spacious, and in form like the dome of a glasshouse, communicating with each other by a small arched passage. Here he found large masses of sparkling stalactite. The account was published in the 61st volume of the Philosophical Transactions, and has been confirmed by the assertions of several persons who have descended into the chasm at different times. In 1845, the Duke of Devonshire erected a neat school here, which is endowed with £30 per annum; 10 poor children are taught free. The school will hold about 60, and the average attendance is 40. The Wesleyans have a neat stone Chapel, erected in 1851, at a cost of £250, raised by subscription; it will seat about 350. Here are several extensive lead mines in the neighbourhood. The Odd-Fellows have two lodges, and here is one sick society. Feast, first Sunday after St. James.

Barmoor, 6 miles S. by W. from Castleton, and 2½ miles E. from Chapel-en-le-Frith, where is the celebrated "Ebbing and Flowing Well," justly considered one of the wonders of the Peak. Close to this intermitting spring is a small cavity that receives the water, from several apertures by the side of it; from these the water does not however issue at regular intervals; for as that depends on the quantity of rain which may previously have fallen, it has sometimes, though rarely happened in very dry seasons, that the well has ceased to flow for two, three, or four weeks together; sometimes it flows only once in twelve hours; sometimes every hour, and in very wet seasons, twice or thrice within the hour. When it begins to rise, the motion of the water is at first gentle, but in a short time the quantity that issues becomes very large, and it continues to flow four minutes and a half. It has been calculated that, in the space of one minute, twenty hogsheads of water are discharged. Though the flowing of the well does not happen frequently in a dry season, yet its appearance then is far more striking, the cavity that receives it having previously become dry. Barmoor is an extensive district in this liberty. Sparrow Pit, a village on the Castleton and Chapel-en-le-Frith road, 2 miles N.W. from Peak Forest, is principally in Chapel-en-Frith parish.

Charities.—Nicholas Green, in 1700, gave his messuage and lands in Edale, the yearly profits therof to be equally distributed between the poor of Edale and Peak Forest, on St. Thomas's day, by his executors; and he also gave a further yearly sum for ever to the poor of Peak Forest, to be paid by the same executors on 25th December. The present amount of the rent is £5 per annum, one moiety of which is received by the overseers of Peak Forest, and distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day. Nothing is known of the sum of 20s., mentioned in the donor's will.

John Vernon, of Sparrowpit, by will, 1720, gave 10s. yearly out of land at Slack Hall, to the poor of Peak Forest, to be distributed on the feast of St. Thomas. The owner of the estate pays the annual sum of 10s. to the overseer, which is given to the poor.

Humphrey Wilshaw, by his will, left the yearly profits of a close called the Dale Knowl, to be given to the poor. About an acre and a half is let for £1 1s. per annum.

John Vernon, of Smalldale, at his decease, 1750, left 10s yearly, charged on an estate lying near Aston Lee, in Coomb's Edge, to the poor of Peak Forest. The annual sum of 10s. is paid by the tenant of the estate, which is distributed on St. Thomas's day.

Jeremiah Ward, by will, gave £10, the interest to be distributed on St. Thomas's day to the poor of this chapelry, by certain trustees, the minister always to be one. The annual sum of 10s. is paid out of the bank, the money being invested therein.

Samuel Frith, by his will, 1773, gave 20s. year, issuing out of a piece of land in Brownside, to the poor of Peak Forest, to be distributed on St. Thomas's day. The land is in the parish of Glossop. 20s. is paid by the overseers on account of this charity.

John Badely Radcliffe's charity.—(See Chapel-en-le-Frith). The annual sum of £2 13s. 4d. is received on account of this charity, and distributed on St. Thomas's day.

John Frith, by will, in 1775, gave to three trustees £40 on trust, that they and their executors should place the sum out at interest, and apply the same in buying woollen cloth, to be distributed by them yearly to the poor of this township. Mr. Robert Needham now holds the money at 4½ per cent., the interest £1 16s., he lays out in the purchase of linsey, and distributes it to six poor women of the chapelry.

Samuel Needham's charity.—(See Castleton). The annual sum of £6, paid by Mr. Robert Needham, the owner of a close called South Head, in Peak Forest, charged with the payment, attends on 14th February, and with the assistance of the chapelwardens; overseers, and others, makes a distribution of linen cloth to the above value.

Countess and Earl of Devonshire's charity.—(See Edensor). The portion belonging to this township is applied in apprenticing poor children.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charities.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

TIDESWELL, a large parish, and township, with the townships of Litton, Wheston, and the chapelry of Wormhill, together containing 9,208A. 2R. 16P. of land, and in 1851, had 674 houses, and 3,411 inhabitants, of whom 1650 were males and 1761 females; rateable value, £9,283.

TIDESWELL, a parish and small market town, is situated in a valley surrounded on all sides by lofty hills, 7 miles N.N.W. from Bakewell, 7 miles E. by N. from Buxton, 33 N.W. by N. from Derby, 17 E. by S. from Sheffield, and 159 N.W. by N. from London. It contains 3037A. 1R. 39P. of land, (principally grazing), and in 1851 had 418 houses, and 2035 inhabitants, of whom 1009 were males and 1026 females; rateable value, £3,728. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner. James Beech, Esq., the Exors. of the late James Rimmington, Esq., Colonel Leslie, John Radford, Esq., Mr. James Ashton, Mr. Charles Hadfield, Mr. John Joseph Mower, and Mr. Wm. Hudson, are also owners. It is a place of great antiquity, and the name of the town is said to have been derived from an ebbing and flowing well, but now existing only in tradition. The spot where it is said to have been, however, is still pointed out, but it is now choked up, and its ebbings and flowings must have long since terminated.

A Market at Tideswell was granted to Paulinus Bampton, in the year 1250, to be held on Wednesdays, together with a Fair for two days, at the festival of the Decollation of St. John the Baptist. There was a confirmation of this grant, to Richd. Stafford, about the year 1392, and to Sampson Meverel, in 1432. The market is still held on Wednesday, and fairs on March 24th, May 15th, last Wednesday in July, 2nd Wednesday in September, and October 29th; a considerable quantity of cheese is sold at the two last fairs, as well as horned cattle and sheep. The inhabitants are principally employed in calico weaving for the Manchester manufacturers, at the two extensive cotton spinning establishments in the immediate neighbourhood, and in mining. Under the Enclosure Act of 1807, six acres of land were allotted for holding the fair. The manor of Tideswell, was in the crown at Domesday survey, it afterwards belonged to the Peverels; King John granted it, in 1205, to Thos. Arminger, in 1330, it was vested in the coheiresses of Daniel; Elizabeth Meverell, one of the coheiresses, died seized of a third of it; afterwards the whole appears to have been vested in the Meverells,, whose heiress brought it to the Cromwell family. In 1654, Winfield Lord Cromwell, sold it to Robert Eyre, Esq,, of Highlow; Wm. Eyre, his grandson, took the name of Archer, and was father of John Archer, Esq., who died in 1800. It was purchased of his heirs, in 1802, under a decree of chancery, by the late Duke of Devonshire. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a handsome stone edifice of the Decorated character, with the exception of the tower, which appears to have been built somewhat afterwards. It consists of a chancel, two transepts, a nave, aisles, and tower at the west end with six bells, a clock, and musical chimes. The east window is decorated, and of three lights; and on the N. and S. of the chancel are four decorated windows, each of the three lights with square heads, and very lofty. These have a very fine effect, and together with the open wood roof, give to the chancel a noble, lofty, and magnificent appearance. There is a stone altar screen across the chancel, some feet distance from the eastern wall, containing two very good niches. The chancel has also three sedilia of equal height, and a piscina of an ogee arch, cinquefoiled, with a pinnacle on each side. The tower is perpendicular, and though the details are good, yet the effect of the whole is certainly lost by too much crowding; at each corner of the tower is an octagonal turret, having an embattled parapet, whence a short spire arises with crotchets and a finial, between each of these corner turrets arises another of somewhat similar design, but lighter in its construction and of less altitude; these eight turrets on the tower having a confused and unpleasant effect; about thirty years ago, the interior of the edifice was renovated, and 358 free sittings added, towards the expense of which the incorporated society gave £180. In the south transept is a tombstone, dated 1358, to the memory of John Foljambe, who, it is said, contributed largely to the building of the church. In the chancel is an altar-tomb, the sides of which being open, expose to view the figure of an emaciated corpse, lying on a winding sheet, apparently carved in stone; on the the top is a slab of Purbeck marble, inlaid with brasses, to the memory of Sampson Meverell, who served under the Duke of Bedford, in France. and was knighted at St. Luce, 1462. Another altar-tomb remembers the death of Robert Pursglove, prior of Gisburne Abbey, prebend of Rotherham, and Bishop of Hull, upon which is inlaid his effigy in brass, together with a long metrical epitaph, in itself worthy of being known to all admirers of old English orthography,—who died May 2nd, 1579. He was a native of Tideswell, and surrendered the abbey to King Henry VIII., who allowed him a handsome pension. Refusing to take the oath of supremacy to Queen Elizabeth, he was, in the year 1650, deprived of the Archdeaconry of Nottingham, and other spiritualities; in consequence of this, he retired to his native place, and founded the Grammar school and Hospital adjoining the churchyard. There is also another fine monument to Sir Robt. Litton and his wife, Isabella, of whom there are brass figures, they died,—the former, in 1483, and the latter in 1458. There was a chapel at Tideswell, as early as the reign of King John; for, in the year 1215, he gave the chapel of Tideswell, as well as the church of Hope, to the canons of Lichfield, for their common provision of bread and beer. This interesting relic of antiquity formerly stood near the entrance to the town from Middleton. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £7 0s. 7½d., now £240, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £200 Queen Anne's bounty, and £1,200 parliamentary grant, in the peculiar jurisdiction of the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield, and incumbency of the Rev. Wm. Moxon Mann, B.A. The Vicarage is a neat residence near the church. The large tithe was commuted in 1844 for £159, and that of lamb and wool for £30, which is paid to Messrs. John and Wm. Goodwin, as lessees under the Dean and Chapter of Lichfield; £14 is paid to the vicar. The Wesleyans have a chapel, built in 1810. The Independent chapel, built 1845, is under the pastoral care of the Rev. George K. Walker. A Catholic chapel was erected and endowed about 1832, by the Duke of Norfolk; the Rev. Louis M. Le Dréau, of Hathersage, is the priest. The Primitive Methodists have also a small chapel. The Free Grammar school, founded in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, is richly endowed, the particulars of which are given with the charities; the Rev. Henry Barrow Chinn, B.A., is the head master. A commodious and handsome National School, in the early English style, was erected in 1845, at a cost of £1000; of this amount £600 was raised by private subscriptions, and the other by grants from the National society and the Privy Council on Education. The Duke of Devonshire gave the land and was also a liberal contributor. Each school is provided with separate class rooms; the average attendance is about 120. Tideswell Dale is noted for its beautiful marble. In Miller's, or Mill House Dale, two miles S. from Tideswell, are two corn mills on the river Wye, one of which is in Wormhill township. Opposite the Mill house, rises a hill, about 350 yards high, which completely prevents the rays of the sun from shining upon the house, from the first week in November, till New Candlemas day, February 2nd. The Feast is held on the Sunday nearest to St. John's.

CHARITIES.—Grammar School.—Robert Pursglove, Suffragan Bishop of Hull, obtained Queen Elizabeth's Letter's Patent, dated 18th November, in the second year of her reign, that he or after his death, his heirs, or executors, might found a Grammar school, to be called the school of Jesus Christ our Saviour of Tideswell, the master and his successors together with the vicar and wardens of the parish church, to be a body corporate, with power to sue in their corporate name, to use a common seal, and to take lands. By indenture, 18th of June, 1560, the school was founded, and the ordinances and statutes confirmed. The master and his successors to have £10 yearly for their wages at Lady-day and Michaelmas by equal portions. The residue of the rents to be received by the master, vicar, and wardens, and within 12 days after receiving thereof, they, in the presence of six other honest men of Tideswell, should distribute all the same in alms amongst the poor and needy; if it should happen that there was not the full sum of £3 6s. 8d. remaining in the chest, the said master, vicar, and wardens, should reserve so much rents as would repair the school house and chambers over it for the master's lodgings. The estates settled on the school according to the ordinances, and now let at rack rents of £227 15s. exclusive of an estate in the township of Tideswell, and Whetstone, from which no income has for a long time been derived. This estate, containing 18A. was by indenture of lease, dated 3d Feb. 1564, for a certain sum of money paid by Adam Pursglove, by the consent of Robt. Pursglove, to hold the same for the term of 200 years, at the yearly rent of 53s. 4d. to be paid to the corporation of the school. At the expiration of the term, Mr. Goddard, the schoolmaster, claimed the lands on behalf of the corporation for the benefit of the charity. Upon the enclosure of the common fields in Tideswell and Whetstone, under an act passed 47th George III. allotments were set out amounting to about two acres, to every acre of old enclosure. The lease had subsequently been assigned to one of the ancestors of the late Earl of Newburgh. The allotments were set out generally, and not in respect of every particular parcel of land; it appears to us that no arrangment can now be made with the representatives of the late Lord Newburgh, for the restitution of the lands, without the interference, and sanction of the court of equity. It will also remain a subject for their consideration, whether any arrears should be paid by the representatives of the late Lord Newburgh, (who showed a willingness to give an equivalent of lands, though it has been suggested on his behalf, that some of the lands have been sold by his ancestors,) and if so, to what amount, and in what manner they should be disposed of.

Robert Bagshaw, by will, dated 1670, bequeathed to the corporation of the school of Jesus, and their successors, the sum of £10, on condition that it should remain in the hands of his brothers. It appears that William Bagshaw and John Bagshaw, during their lives, paid 12s. yearly to the schoolmaster, and John Bagshaw, the survivor, afterwards paid the same sum during his life. The said John Bagshaw, devised by will, 1704, to his son William Bagshaw, and his heirs all his lands, paying yearly to the free grammar school of Jesus, in Tideswell, 12s. on the feast of St, Thomas. This sum was paid up to Midsummer 1805, by the tenant of an estate in Great Hucklow, which belonged to Mr. Milnes, of Wakefield. It has since been sold to Mr. Bernard John Wake, of Sheffield, who in answer to an application made to him by us, states that the earliest deed relating to that estate, is dated 1722, that such deed does not, nor any subsequent deeds take any notice of the above mentioned outgoing, and that he had no notice of such, and therefore refuses paying.

Donor unknown.—The sum of £6 has been paid many years, by the lord of the manor, for the instruction of poor children. In 1802, the manor, and 181 acres of land, were sold to the Duke of Devonshire, subject to that payment, which is still paid to a schoolmaster in the town, for teaching poor children, but which it is intended to apply to the use of a Sunday school.

Robert Hodgkinson, of Milne Houses, Tideswell, by indenture, 1592, devised his property to Oliver Bagshaw, and his heirs, on condition that they should pay to the vicar, and churchwardens, for the use of the poor, the yearly sum of 40s. The amount is paid out of the lands at Mill house Dale, by the respective owners, of which the Duke of Devonshire pays 30s, Robert Holmes 5s., and Wm. Bower, 5s.

Nathaniel Hamersley, by will, 1736, left the interest of £100 to be distributed as follows, viz. to the vicar, £3 12s. to the poor in bread, £1 4s. and to the sexton 4s. for cleaning the church and chancel four times a year. The above sum is secured at five per cent. on the Sheffield and Buxton road.

Ann Rossington, by will, 1737, gave £20, the interest to be distributed to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

William Holmes gave £50, the interest to be given in bread, by the churchwardens and overseers to the poor.

James Middleton left £10, the interest to be distributed in bread, &c. These several sums, with £20 by some person unknown, making up £100, is secured on the turnpike road from Sheffield to Buxton.

Miss Downes, of Sheffield, by will, about the year 1811, gave the interest of £100 to be divided amongst the poor of the parish of Tideswell, every New Year's day, by her executors. The money was in the hands of Mr. Peter Wright, of Eyam, the brother of one of the executors, and £5 regularly paid as the interest due on New Year's day, till 1825, when Mr. Wright insisted upon the vicar and churchwardens finding some means of laying out the principal on good security.

Robert Mellor, by will, 1766, gave the sum of 10s. a year for ever, to be distributed on Christmas day. The sum is paid by Ann Royston, as a charge upon a house and small quantity of land in Tideswell.

George Robinson, by will, gave forty threepenny loaves to be distributed to the poor of Tideswell township every Christmas eve. Elizabeth White owns three houses in Tideswell from which this rent charge is paid.

LITTON, a township and ancient village, ¾ of a mile E. from Tideswell, contains 1586A. 1R. 26P. of land, and in 1851 had 170 houses, and 945 inhabitants, of whom 421 were males, and 524 females; rateable value £1,999 11s. Lord Scarsdale is lord of the manor, and principal owner. Duke of Devonshire, Col. Leslie, Hy. Newton, Esq., Messrs. M'Connel Brothers, Joshua Baker, George Dickin, and Francis Bramwell, are also owners. The population is principally employed in weaving, framework knitting, or at the extensive cotton factories in the township—a few are employed in lead mines. The schoolroom has been licensed for Episcopal worship. A Methodist chapel was erected, 1834, and the Primitive Methodists occupy a room.

Litton Mills on the river Wye, a little west of the village, is the extensive spinning and manufacturing establishment of Mr. Henry Newton, where about 400 persons are employed, with a water and steam power of 100 horses. The course of the Wye in this locality is beautifully picturesque and highly romantic; the perpendicular crags which invest it on each side form but the basis of towering hills which start from their summit; beautiful wild flowers of delicate hues adorn the jutting crag, and throw their shadows on the waters beneath, which in some places appears a deep, silent, and apparently immoveable stream. Litton was long the seat and property of a family of its own name. Rowland Litton, Esq., sold it to John Alsop, in 1597; in 1606, it was in the family of Bagshaw, and William Bagshaw, who was ejected from the vicarage of Glossop in 1662, was of this family; he was an eminent nonconformist divine, called the "Apostle of the Peak," and died at Great Hucklow, in 1702, where he was a minister of a congregation of dissenters. In 1608, Litton belonged the Bradshaw family; in 1686, to the Uptons; in 1707, the Stathams were possessed of it, from whom it was purchased by Sir Nathaniel Curzon, ancestor of Lord Scarsdale.

Cressbrook, 2 miles S. from Tideswell, is the handsome cotton spinning and manufacturing establishment of Messrs. McConnel Brothers, situated at the head of Monsal Dale, in a romantic glen on the banks of the Wye, the picturesque beauties of which are greatly increased by neat Elizabethan and Swiss cottages erected for the work-people on the brow of a lofty hill covered with luxuriant plantations. A beautiful mansion, the residence of Henry McConnel, Esq., stands near the mill, which appears to be shut up on all sides by lofty hills, and might have remained a profound solitude to the present day but for the enterprising spirit which stamps the British capitalist.

CHARITIES.—Mary Cresswell gave to poor widows of Litton, not receiving relief, land, in 1786, vested in James Jackson, then producing 2s. 6d. yearly. This is supposed to be a charge upon a croft at Taddington, called the Widow's Croft, now belonging to Richard Gibbs, from whom that annual sum is received.

William Bagshaw's Charity, (See Glossop.)—The yearly sum of 5s. to which this township is entitled, is received every few years, and distributed amongst five poor widows not receiving parochial relief.

WHESTON or WHETSTONE, a township and small retired village 1½ miles W. by E. from Tideswell, contains 1312A. 2R. 19P. of land, and in 1851 had 14 houses, and 62 inhabitants, of whom 34 were males, and 28 females; rateable value £964 5s. The principal owners are the Duke of Devonshire, Henry Bowden, Esq., John Radford, Esq., James Ashton, Esq., Colonel Leslie, Mr. Cresswell, and Miss Davis, the former is lord of the manor. The inhabitants are mostly employed in agricultural pursuits. It was enclosed with Tideswell, and the tithe commuted in 1843. £30 is paid for the corn tithe, £10 for wool and lamb, and £3 is paid to the vicar of Tideswell. There is an abundance of limestone, and a few lead mines in the vicinity. Wheston Hall, an ancient building in the village, is now a farm house. In a field, on Mr. S. Middleton's farm is an ancient cross slightly mutilated. It stands on a base placed at the summit of three steps; the shaft is square with the corners bevilled off, and the head is tastefully ornamented with tracery, in the centre of which is a small figure of the Virgin, holding the Infant Jesus in her arms. The Cromford and High Peak Railway is 1 mile N. from Wheston. Tideslow, a farm 2 miles N.E. Feast, nearest Sunday to Midsummer day.

CHARITIES.—Margaret Newton, by will, in 1781, gave £100 in trust, to place out the same on real security. By indenture, 1816, Teresa Mary Newton, being desirous to serve the charity, requested the Duke of Norfolk, who had, in January, 1663, become possessed of the real estates, to receive the £100, and to enter into covenants for the regular application thereof; the Duke of Norfolk, in consideration of the said sum of £100, agreed with the said executrix, and the enclosure called the Great Ridden Flatt, but henceforth to be called the Poor's Close, containing 7A. 3R. 31P., was secured to the township, from which the Duke and his heirs should for ever pay the annual sum of £5 to the poor.

WORMHILL, a township, parochial chapelry, and scattered village, in a fine healthy situation, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles W.S.W. from Tideswell, being screened from the north and east winds by a lofty range of mountains, contains 4583A. 2R. 31P. of land, and in 1851 had 72 houses and 369 inhabitants, of whom 168 were males, and 183 females; rateable value £3,555. The principal owners are Westby Bagshawe, Esq., Wm. Fleming, Esq., M.D., Col. Leslie, H. M. Greaves, Esq., Messrs. Hope Brothers, Jas. Ashton, Esq., M.D., and Rev. Augustus Bagshawe, the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Margaret, a plain edifice with a nave, aisle, chancel, and tower, partly covered with ivy, and two bells. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £2 5s., now £250, has been endowed with £30 per annum private benefaction, and £400 Queen Anne's bounty. The patronage is vested in trustees. The Rev. Augustus Adam Bagshawe, B.A., is incumbent. The parsonage, a neat house a little north of the church, has been considerably improved. The income arises from glebe land. In the church yard, on the south side of the church, is a handsome marble monument, to the memory of W. L. G. Bagshawe, Esq., who was killed in an affray with poachers, in the river Wye, on the night of the 20th July, 1854. The village school was rebuilt by the Rev. William Bagshawe, and is supported by voluntary contributions and the children's pence. The average attendance is 35. The Hall, situated in the village, a pleasant mansion, the property of W. Bagshawe, Esq., is unoccupied. The tithes have been commuted for £184 8s., viz., the vicarial for £30, hay and corn, £112 18s., and lamb and wool for £41 10s. The manor, Wruenele, at the Domesday, survey belonged to Henry de Ferrars. In the year 1320, John Wolfhunt, son and heir of John Wolfhunt, held a house and lands in Wormhill, by the service of chasing and taking all wolves that should come into the King's Forest of the Peak.

CHEE TOR, half a mile S. from the village, in Chee Dale, is accounted one of the seven wonders of the Peak; a guide to which will be found at the Red Lion Inn, Wormhill. The entrance to the dell which contains this huge rock is nearly opposite Wormhill Hall, by a steep and narrow path which leads into the very depths of the dale, at the junction of two formidable springs of water which rush from beneath the rocks, and forming an impetuous current, flow into the river Wye, just below the entrance to this Giant of the Dell, which is separated from these by a bold promontory round which you wind to the Tor. This is one of the most remarkable Tors in Derbyshire, both for its form and position; it is an immense limestone rock, which rises with a bold and broad convex front from the level of the dale below, to the height of three hundred and sixty feet. It is chiefly naked, and the top is deeply fissured and covered with elegant foilage, and here and there the yew and hazel may be seen shooting forth, "varying and adorning this stupendous elevation with picturesque beauty." It is nearly isolated, and protrudes its huge dimensions far into the dell. At its base the river Wye rushes rapidly along, as sparkling and brilliant a stream as ever imparted beauty and life to a scene in nature. On the opposite side, a high range of perpendicular rock rises nearly to the same height, in the form of a noble crescent, but assumes a different character. In some places it overhangs the base very considerably, leaving a spacious alcove beneath; and everywhere the summit is fringed with trees, and the sides adorned with pendant branches. The two extreme ends of this crescent rock are of a lesser elevation than the middle, they are about one eighth of a mile apart, and they approach so near the opposite side of the dell as to leave only a narrow channel for the river. The surrounding scenery is wild and romantic, and abundantly stored with picturesque materials and studies for the artist.

"Above, beneath, immensely spread
Valleys and hoary rocks I view;
Heights o'er heights exalt their head,
Of many a sombre hue."

J. Montgomery.

At Dale Head, 1½ miles N., are two farm houses. At Dove Hole Dale, 2½ miles N.W., lime is burned in considerable quantities, and lead ore obtained. Hargate Wall, ¾ mile N.W., consists of four large farm houses on the Tideswell and Buxton road. The Meadow, 2 miles S.S.W., has three farms; Tunstead, 1 mile N.W., three farms; Tunstead Great Rocks, 1½ miles W., two farms; and Upperend, 2 miles N.W. three farms. Miller's Dale, 1½ miles E. by S., is partly in Tideswell township. Here is the Angler's Rest, a public house on the banks of the Wye.

CHARITIES.—Wormhill School.—Robert Wilson, by will, 1714, after giving his lands for the benefit of a free school afterwards established at Priestcliff, gave £3 a year to a schoolmaster at Wormhill. It is understood £70 was received by the trustees for providing the sum of £3, but that this sum was lost by the insolvency of a tradesman in Manchester, named Bagshaw, in whose hands it had been placed out at interest.

Elizabeth Palfreyman, by will, in 1782, left £40 for teaching four poor children. The sum was placed in the hands of Anthony Wright, the owner of a farm at Wormhill; upon his death, the farm came to his son, William Wright, who paid £1 12s. as interest thereof, until he failed, about the year 1817.

Richard Bagshawe, by will, 1749, gave £20 to be laid out in lands by his executors, the interest to be paid every year to a schoolmaster at Wormhill for teaching poor children. It appears this legacy was in the hands of John Bagshawe, Esq., of the Oaks, near Sheffield, who died in 1801, and no interest has been paid since his death. This and several other matters having been in dispute between the Rev. William Bagshawe, of Banner Cross the executor of the said John Bagshawe, and Sir Wm. Chambers Bagshawe, who succeeded to the Oaks estate, an arrangement was made, dated 30th September, 1825. The said Sir W. C. Bagshawe, and his son, W. J. Bagshawe, Esq., undertook to be responsible for the principal and interest of £20 to Wormhill.

Roger Wilkson charged an estate at Wormhill with a payment of sixpence a week for bread to the poor. The bread is distributed in threepenny loaves on the first Sunday in every month to the poor who attend the chapel.

Anthony Wright, who died in 1768, left £30, the interest to be given to the poor. This money was in the hands of his son, William Wright, and, by his failure, lost.

Gervase Smith, who died in 1760, by will, gave 15s. a year to be given to a number of industrious poor people of Wormhill at Christmas. It is now paid out of a field called the Poor Piece, purchased about 1814, by Sir William Chambers Bagshawe. The chapel-wardens receive the money, and distribute it about Christmas.

William Bagshswe's Charity.—(See Glossop.)—The Rev. William Bagshawe, the owner of the premises, subject, among other things, to the payment of 5s. a year to this chapelry, distributes that sum annually.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity, (See Bradley.)—The sum of £5 10s., received by the officiating curate of this chapelry, is laid out in flannel and woollen cloth, which he distributes about Christmas.

YOULGREAVE parish contains the townships of Youlgreave and Gratton, and the townships and chapelries of Birchover, Stanton, and Winster, in the High Peak Hundred, with the township of Middleton and Smerrill, and the township and chapelry of Elton in the Wirksworth Hundred, which together comprise 10,427A. 3R. 39P. of land and in 1851 had 875 houses and 3764 inhabitants, of whom 1856 were males and 1908 females; rateable value £11764 12s. 10d. The soil is various, principally occupied in dairy farms and sheep walks, has large plantations of mountain pine and fir, with a variety of fine timber trees. It is on the south border of the High Peak, mountainous, and romantic having some extensive lead mines.

YOULGREAVE, YOULGRAVE, or YOLGRAVE, is a considerable and well built village and township, situated on a bold eminence above the river Lathkill, a fine trout stream, 3 miles S. by W. from Bakewell, contains 2531A. 2R. 21P. of land, and in 1851 had 265 houses and 1194 inhabitants, of whom 599 were males and 595 females; rateable value £2822 0s. 5d. The Duke of Rutland, the Duke of Devonshire, W. P. Thornhill, Esq., M.P., and Thos. Bateman, Esq., are the principal owners, besides which there are several smaller owners; the former is lord of the manor. In the centre of the village Miss Hannah Bowman and others, in 1829, erected a circular stone building, enclosing a fountain for supplying the public with water. It rises about 9 feet, and is supplied from a spring of equal altitude from the other side the river, under which it is brought in pipes, near which is a house, erected in 1630, a fine specimen of the architecture of former times; and in the yard a stone coffin. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a vicarage, valued in the King's book £9 4s. 7d., now £230, has been augmented with £200 benefactions and £200 Queen Anne's bounty. Duke of Devonshire is patron, and the Rev. Wm. Buckwell, incumbent. The Church is an ancient structure, partly in the Norman style, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and fine square pinnacled tower, in which are six bells. An organ was placed in the north aisle in 1855, at a cost of £60 raised by subscription. In the north aisle of the Church is an ancient font, which was brought here from Elton, about 30 years ago; it is of curious workmanship, resting on a circular pillar of coarse red gritstone; from the basin of the font proceeds a smaller receptical for water, which is apparently held from below, in the mouth of a dragon with a twisted tail. In the interior of the Church is the effigy of Sir John Rossington, a crusader, he has a sword suspended from his loins, and holds a heart in his hands. The figure is clothed in drapery. In the chancel is an elegant alabastar tomb, containing the effigy of a man in plate armour round the sides of which are figures of angels, bearing shields of arms, he is bare headed, and rests his head upon a helmet, which bears the crest of one of the Cockayne family, viz. a cock. The legs and feet have been destroyed, but the lion upon which they rested still remains. In the north wall of the chancel is an ancient alabaster tomb, richly sculptured, representing a female with an infant in her arms, and surrounded by twenty other children of both sexes. From the inscription it appears to be to Robert Gilbert and his wife, Joan, the latter of whom died in 1492. Lomberdale House, 1 mile S.W. from the Church, the seat and property of Thos. Bateman, Esq., (author of the "Vestiges of the Antiquities of Derbyshire)," is a handsome stone mansion, in the walls of which at irregular distances, are various grotesque and antique busts. It was erected in 1844, and now undergoing considerable improvements. The house has a tesselated pavement, and is adorned with many antiquities, ancient weapons, and a complete suite of polished steel plate armour, fixed as though standing on guard, with beaver down and sword in hand, besides, here is an extensive collection of antiquities, the more important portion of which has been derived from Tumuli, in the Counties of Derby, Stafford, and York, and illustrated by numerous similar objects derived from various other sources, both Britsh and Foreign. The Wesleyan chapel, erected about 50 years ago, is a good stone building, which will hold about 200. The Independents have a handsome stone chapel, erected in 1853, by Thos. Bateman, Esq., at a cost of upwards of £200, will seat about 100. The Primitive Methodist chapel, built in 1822, at a cost of £140, raised by subscription is a neat stone building and will hold about 160. A school was erected by subscription, in 1756, in which 25 children are taught on payment of one penny weekly, in 1824, a house was erected for the master at the expense of the Duke of Rutland, who, with the Duke of Devonshire, and others gives £25 annually towards the support of the school. The inhabitants are principally employed in the mines, but these are not so profitable as they were some years ago. The principal mines now worked are the Longrake, Townend, Youlgreave Ashes, Canton Hill Pipe, and Ladycroft, the former of which is the most productive. Here are several Friendly and Sick Societies in the village. The Feast is held the nearest Sunday to All Saints' Day.

Collinglowe Grange, 2 miles W.N.W. is a neat stone building, with porch at the front entrance, the floor of which is laid with triangular or tesselated pavement, very rarely now seen, it is the property of the Duke of Devonshire, and residence of Mr. J. Blore. Conksbury, 1 mile N. by W., consists of two farms, and a bridge over the Bradford brook, on the Bakewell and Ashbourn road. Meadow Place, a large farm, $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.W. from Youlgreave; both these belonged to the abbey of Leicester. The Church of Youlgreave was given to the abbey of Leicester, in or before the reign of Henry II. King Edward VI., in 1552, granted the rectory and advowson of the vicarage to Sir William Cavendish, from whom they have descended to his Grace the Duke of Devonshire. An act of parliament for enclosing Youlgreave and Middleton passed in 1815, in which the Duke of Rutland is stated to be impropriator of wool and lambs in Middleton.

In the parish register of this Church is a remarkable entry. "This year, 1614-5, Jan. 16th, began the greatest snow which ever fell uppon earth within man's memory. It covered the earth fyve quarters deep upon the playne. It fell ten severall tymes, and the last was the greatest, to the greate admiration and fear of all the land; for it came from the foure p'ts of the world, so that all e'ntries were full, yea, the south p'te as well as these mountaynes. It continued by daily increasing untill the 12th day of March, (without the sight of any earth, eyther uppon the hilles or valleyes,) upon wh daye, being the Lorde's day, it began to decrease, and so by little and little consumed and wasted away till the eight and twentyth day of May, for then all the heapes or drifts of snow were consumed, except one uppon Kinder-Scout, wch lay till Witson-week." It appears by a further account, that it decreased so gradually, that though several floods occurred, yet no damage was done. This extraordinary snow is mentioned by Stowe, in his Chronicle, 1615. "A dry summer. There was no rain from the 25th day of March, till the 2nd day of May, and then but one shower; after which there fell none till the 18th day of June, and then there fell another; after that there fell none at all till the 4th day of August, after which tyme there was sufficient rayne uppon the earth; so that the greatest pt of this land, especially the south pts, were burnt upp, both corn and hay." "Only Lankishyre and Cheshyre had rain enough all summer."

BIRCHOVER is a small village, township, and chapelry, which is partly in Stanton liberty, 1¼ mile N.W. from Winster, 3 miles S.E. by E. from Youlgreave, contains 583A. 3R. 37P. of gritstone soil, principally occupied in dairy farms, and in 1851 had 14 houses and 78 inhabitants, of whom the number of males and females were equal; rateable value £761 7s. 8d. William Pole Thornhill, Esq., M.P., the Duke of Rutland, J. H. Bradley, T. Robinson, and J. and G. Gregory, Esqs., are the principal owners, the former of whom is lord of the manor. The Chapel is a small square building, situated at the end of the village. The living, a donative in the gift of W. P. Thornhill, Esq., M.P., Rev. J. F. Garrett, B.A., of Elton, officiating minister. The Chapel was built by Thos. Eyre, Esq., of Row Tor, who died in 1717, and endowed it with £20 per annum, for the performance of divine service on the first Sunday in every month. The service is now performed every Sunday. It is exempt from ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The Primitive Methodists have a small neat brick chapel here, erected by subscription in 1853, at a cost of £50, will seat about 90.

Row Tor or Rov Tor, on Stanton moor, near this village, are a remarkable assemblage of gritstone rocks, which extend from 70 to 80 yards in length and from 40 to 50 in height. A subterraneous passage about 90 feet in length runs through these rocks, being in some parts very low, there are also other natural passages in several parts of them, also armed seats of solid rocks, and various other curious fragments. A little E. of this pile, is a large rocking stone of an irregular shape, 12 feet high and 36 in circumference, and estimated at 50 tons weight. This formerly could be shaken by the pressure of the hand, but having been forced from its equilibrium, it now requires the whole strength to put it in motion; it has since been put in its former situation, but the exact balance it once possessed is destroyed. A little N. is a second rocking stone, of the shape of an egg, which can be moved by a single finger, though 12 feet in length and 14 in girth. A third rocking stone stands a little further north, resembling the latter both in figure and facility of motion, and a little west are seven stones, piled on each other, varying in size and form, but all moveable by the pressure of a hand. Adjoining, the lord of the manor has recently erected a house of entertainment for the accommodation of visitors, designated "The Druid" of Row Tor. Mr. Geo. Marsden, the proprietor, conducts visitors through these rocks. Row Tor Old Hall, of which there are only few remains, is now occupied by Mr. Francis Walker, who has in his possession several old relics, amongst which is a carved oak bedstead of the date 1586. Feast, Sunday nearest Oct. 10.

ELTON, a small village, township, and chapelry, situate in the Wirksworth hundred, 1¾ miles W. from Winster, on the summit of a bleak eminence, and contains 1399A. of good land on limestone, principally in dairy farms, and in 1851 had 132 houses and 545 inhabitants, of whom 245 were males and 300 females; rateable value £1274 17s. 3d. Hylton Jolliffe, Esq., Wm. Pole Thornhill, Esq., M.P., Andrew Brittlebank, Esq., Mrs. Mary Robinson, Wm. A. Sheldon, Esq., Mr. T. Webster, and Mr. Jph. Briddon, are the principal owners, the two former are joint lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is a neat plain stone building, with square tower and three bells, and can be seen at a great distance. The living is a perpetual curacy, of the value of £98 per annum, principally derived from tithe land, it has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £200 Queen Anne's bounty, and £200 parliamentary grant; the inhabitants are patrons, and the Rev. J. F. Garrett, B.A., incumbent. At the enclosure, in 1809, 49 acres of land were awarded in lieu of tithes, and 30 acres to other tithe owners. The Parsonage is a neat stone residence, erected 1838, pleasantly situated near the Church. The manor was held by the Bardolfs, as lords paramount, by the render of a pair of gilt spurs; from whom it passed to the Tibetots; afterwards to the Stevensons, from one of whose coheiresses a moiety was carried to Hylton Jolliffe, Esq., and Bache Thornhill, Esq., purchased from the other. It pays a quit or chief rent of 15s. 4d. The Wesleyan Reform chapel is a handsome brick building, erected by subscription, in 1852, at a cost of £90. The Primitive Methodist chapel built 1843, at a cost of £90, defrayed by subscription, is a good stone building. The Wesleyan chapel, built in 1851, by subscription at a cost of £90, is a good substantial building, each of which will accommodate about 100. The mining operations here are not as productive as formerly, the principal mine owners at present are Messrs. Milnes & Co., and Messrs. Heathcote, one thirteenth lot of the ore got, is due to Peter Arkwright, Esq., as lessee of the crown, but he takes one twenty-fifth. The Duke of Rutland claims one tenth for tithes, but takes one twenty-fifth. 3d. per load is also paid to the Barmaster on lead ore and 6d. per ton on brown ore, and one thirtieth in this parish as in all others in the Wapentake of Wirksworth, is paid to the land owners upon all ores raised out of cultivated hillocks. The Odd Fellows have a lodge here, and the feast is held on the 1st of November.

GRATTON, a small village and township situate in a pleasant valley, 2 miles S. from Youlgreave, and 2½ miles W.N.W. from Winster, contains 844A. of land, and in 1851 had 5 houses and 38 inhabitants, of whom 24 were males and 14 females; rateable value £919. Wm. Pole Thornhill, Esq., M.P., is lord of the manor and owner. In 1723, John Thornhill, Esq. purchased it from the Lowes, to whom it had descended from the Middletons. Feast, nearest Sunday to All Saints' day.

MIDDLETON AND SMERRILL township, in the Wirksworth Hundred, contains conjointly 2,500 acres of good strong pasture and meadow land, a portion of which on the moors is arable, and had in 1851, 57 houses, and 276 inhabitants, of whom 149 were males and 127 females; rateable value, £2022 15s. 6d.

MIDDLETON is a well-built rural village, 1½ miles S.W. from Youlgreave. In the romantic glen of the Lathkill, is a factory, formerly employed in making tapes, but now used partly as a day school, and partly as a colour manufactory. Thos. Bateman, Esq., is the lord of the manor, and he, with the Duke of Rutland, are the owners. Here are 14 acres of church land awarded to the vicar in lieu of tithe. The Independent chapel, erected in 1826, by the late Thos. Bateman, Esq., is a handsome stone building, and is endowed with £40 per annum, left by Mr. Bateman. It will accommodate about 200. Beneath the chapel is a school room, used both for week-day and Sunday instruction. The Primitive Methodist chapel, built of wood, in 1850, at a cost of £90, will hold about 100. Here is a lodge of Odd Fellows; and the Feast is held on Friday in Whitsun week. This manor belonged to the Herthills, and passed with their heiress to the Cockaynes. In 1771, it was the joint property of Lord Viscount Howe and Matthew Raper, Esq. Its late possessor purchased it from the co-heiress of Viscount Howe. The remains of an ancient Druids' temple are still visible, situate on an eminence three miles N.W., and occupying about two acres of land, in the possession of Mr. Geo. Howe. Smerrill (Grange) consists of only one farm, the property of the Duke of Rutland, 1 mile S. from Middleton; the whole is tithe-free.

STANTON is a pleasant village, township, and chapelry, 4 miles S.S.E. from Bakewell, 1¾ miles E.S.E. from Youlgreave, contains 1534 acres of good pasture, meadow, and arable land, besides 427A. 3R. 38P. of plantations, not rated; and in 1851 had 162 houses, and 705 inhabitants, of whom 340 were males, and 365 females; rateable value, £1,800. Wm. Pole Thornhill, Esq., MP. is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Duke of Rutland, Mr. Thos. Robinson, and Mr. Walter Holmes, are also owners. In different parts of the township are considerable plantations of pine and fir. The Church, a neat stone structure, with nave, chancel, and transepts, a square tower, and sexangular spire with six bells, was erected in 1833, at the sole expense of W. P. Thornhill, Esq., M.P.. who presents to the living, which is a donative, annexed to Youlgreave vicarage. It will seat about 360 persons, nearly all of the sittings being free. In 1847, an organ was placed in the church, presented by Wm. P. Thornhill, Esq. The Rev. J. F. Garrett, B.A. is the officiating minister. In the church is a handsome marble tablet, erected in 1855, to the memory of Col. Wm. Thornhill. The Wesleyans, Primitives, and Reformers, have each places of worship here. In 1856, a new Parochial school was erected, with a house for the master, and opened 28th of July. It is situated ¼ mile S.E. of the church, and was built at the sole expense of W. P. Thornhill, Esq., M.P., will hold about 70, and about 60 attend. Here is a Sick society, consisting of 100 members. Feast, nearest Sunday to All Saints. On the summit of a hill at Stanton Wood, a small square tower was erected, in commemoration of the passing of the Reform bill, in 1833. By act of Parliament, passed in 1799, the open lands were enclosed, when allotments were awarded to the Duke of Rutland, and Mr. Thornhill, as joint impropriators of tithes. The Marchioness of Sligo, was entitled to certain moduses, as tithe of hay.

Stanton Hall, a large handsome mansion, which was rebuilt in 1799, and a deer park, with extensive plantations added, is the seat of William Pole Thornhill, Esq., M.P., Stanton, was the joint property of the Duke of Rutland, and Mr. Thornhill, till the year 1809, when, in consequence of an exchange made under an enclosure act, the whole became vested in Mr. Thornhill. The Hall, had for two centuries been the residence of the Baches, when the estate, in 1604, passed to John Thornhill, Esq., of Thornhill, who married Anne Bache, the niece and heiress of Raphael Bache, Esq., of Stanton.

Stanton Woodhouse, two miles E.S.E. from Stanton. Here is an ancient Elizabethan house, situated on a fine elevation, surrounded with terraces, ancient yews, Spanish chesnut, walnut, elm, and other trees, commanding extensive prospects. It is the property of the Duke of Rutland, by whom it is occupied as a shooting box. It was formerly the residence of the Allens, and forms the manor of Stanton Lees, of which the Duke of Rutland is lord.

Stanton Lees. 2½ miles N. is a good substantial stone residence, in the occupation and property of Mr. Walter Holmes.

WINSTER, a township, chapelry, and small market town, irregularly built on the side of a rocky eminence, and situate in a valley, 6½ miles S.S.E. from Bakewell, 6½ miles N.W. from Wirksworth, 19 miles N.N.W. from Derby, 145 miles from London, and about 3 miles N. from the High Peak Railway, contains 1034 acres of meadow and pasture land, and in 1851, had 240 houses, and 928 inhabitants, of whom 460 were males and 468 females; rateable value, £2184 12s. 0d. It is a freehold estate. Andrew Brittlebank, Esq., Robt. Cresswell, Esq., Mrs. Eliz. Roberts, Mr. Thos. Roberts, Lord Scarsdale, Mr. Richard Witham, Mr. Wm. Briddon, and the Rev George Mason, are the principal owners, besides several freeholders. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a perpetual curacy, certified at £12, now £104; has been augmented with £400 benefactions, £200 Queen Anne's bounty, and £300 parliamentary grant; the resident freeholders, patrons; Rev. Wm. Dyke, incumbent. In 1702, Mrs. Anne Phenney and Mr. Henry Fenshaw endowed the chapelry with one fourth of the tithes of corn and hay of the township, for which, at the enclosure, 37A. 1R. 29P. of land were allotted to the incumbent. The Church was rebuilt in 1842, in a neat modern style, (except the old tower, now grown over with ivy, and in which are five bells,) at the cost of upwards of £1,600, raised by subscriptions, aided by £150 from the Incorporated society, and £150 from the Diocesan Society; in consequence of which, 295 sittings remain free and unappropriated for ever. In 1846, a clock was placed on the church, by subscription, at a cost of £80. On the entrance to the church is the following inscription:—

"Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise."

In the chancel is a very ancient carved stone font, lined with lead, and here are several tablets to the Holmes and Moore families, and one to Thomas Wall, who was engaged in most of the great actions during the Peninsular war. The Wesleyan Methodists have a neat stone chapel, erected in 1837; the Primitive Methodists built one in 1823; and the Reformers, a neat chapel, erected at a cost of £155, in 1852. The Market is held on Saturday, and Fairs are held for cattle, Feb. 11th, March 30th, and May 8th, and for cheese and cattle on October 10th, or the day before, should any of these days fall on Sunday. The fairs, which had long been discontinued, were again revived in 1855, when the cheese and cattle fair was held on Oct. 10th, which was well supplied with fat stock, cheese, &c., at which fair James Haywood, of Middleton, in this parish, had £2 awarded for the best dairy of cheese. Here are two Lodges and two Sick societies. Feast, first Sunday after Midsummer day. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in mining operations, new openings being continually made. There are several levels, of which the Portway mine is the greatest, which drains several mines in its course of three miles to the Derwent. Every 13th part of the ore is due to the Duke of Devonshire, as lessee under the crown, in right of the Duchy of Lancaster for lot, but he takes every twenty-fifth, and 4d. per load is paid to him as cope. The Duke of Rutland claims every tenth, but takes every twenty-fifth, for tithe; but there are no manorial claims. There is also a considerable quantity of Brown and Green ore, of the average value of 20s. to 40s. per ton, which is liable to a duty of one-thirteenth lot, one-tenth tithe, and 10d. per ton cope. On opening a barrow in the neighbourhood, in 1768, two glass vessels were found, each containing clear, but green coloured water. A silver bracelet, with some glass beads, and various other trinkets were also found.

"During the present year (1856), a discovery of considerable interest, was accidentally made in the garden attached to the residence of Charles Carill Worsley, Esq., in this township. Whilst lowering a bank of earth for the purpose of making some improvements in the pleasure ground, the labourers uncovered two graves at the depth of upwards of four feet from the present surface, each containing a human skeleton, lying on its right side, with the knees drawn up and the head pointing towards the north-east. A careful examination of the place and the objects there discovered, affords evidence of the interments having been made in the following manner:—A wood fire was, in the first place, lighted upon the ground, in or around which some large stones were put so as to become calcined. This having burned out, the place it occupied was cleared for the reception of the body, which was then deposited in the position before mentioned, along with the implements and weapons of deceased. The calcined stones were next piled carefully over the corpse, and, finally, earth was heaped up above the whole, probably while the ground was still warm. The first skeleton was accompanied by a small spear head, or knife, of iron, much corroded, and the lower stone of a hand-mill, anciently used in every household for grinding corn; the latter had passed the fire. With the second interment was found the upper stone of the same mill, very neatly wrought in sandstone, but split to pieces by the great heat to which it had been exposed. Some pieces of a very coarse vessel of plain earthenware were found near the head of this skeleton, and behind it lay a large spear head, of iron, two feet long, a curved instrument of the same metal, five inches long, originally fixed in a wooden handle, the bone ferule of which still remains, and a ring-like bead or decoration of light coloured porcelain, about an inch and a half in diameter.

"The whole of the articles exhumed from these graves (which may be assigned to the Teutonic or Tiron period, including the time from the end of the 5th to the 7th century, A.D.) by the kindness of C. Carill Worsley, Esq., have been deposited in Mr. Bateman's Museum of Antiquities, at Youlgreave."

Charities.—School.—By indentures, dated 30th November and 1st December, 1762, it is mentioned that the school was built by charitable subscriptions, and that a barn and croft had been purchased for £8 8s. A sum of £23 18s. 9d. remained in the Rev. Edward Timperley's hands, out of the said subscription, and to perpetuate the charity, he thereby conveyed the school and property on trust. The school premises consist of a lower room, used as the boys' school, and an upper room for girls, with a house, built for the resident master, about 1823, at the expense of the Duke of Rutland. Of the £23 18s. 9d., £8 was vested in the hands of the late Mr. Richd. Sheldon, at the interest of 5 per cent., but which has since been expended in the repairs of the school. The residue was in the hands of Mr. John Alwood, a farmer, who died about 1819, without leaving sufficient property to pay his debts.

Ellen Webster's charity.—(See Bakewell.) No part of this charity was applied for benefit of this school, from 1812 to 1826, but by an account then made, it appears £7 19s. is due as a balance from Mr. Alexander Bossley, which has been paid to the newly elected trustees, by whom it is to be paid, with the surplus of the accruing rents, to the vicar and churchwardens of Youlgreave, to be applied in purchasing good and useful books for the use of the school.

James Roberts, of Alport, by will, 1681, left 40s. to be yearly given to ten of the most needy old men and ten of the poorest widows in Youlgreave. A loaf of bread of the value of 1s., and cheese of the same value, is distributed in the church, after service, on Christmas day. Samuel Roberts, by his will, 1752, confirmed the above, and settled the payment of it on three pieces of land, one called Barrin's Pingle, and the other the High Flats, in the parish of Youlgreave.

Frances Staley left, by will, in 1728, 40s. yearly, out of two closes called Shogdales. These closes are now the property of Mrs. Brown, who sends 40s. to the vicar, which is distributed to 40 of the poorest inhabitants.

John Hancock, of London, by will, in 1821. gave to his executors £100 three per cent. consolidated bank annuities, to be kept in their own names till six months after the death of his brother, Joseph Hancock, and then to be transferred by them to the vicars and churchwardens of the said parish for the time being, on trust that the dividends should be given to 12 poor parishioners, not being paupers, in bread and coals, on New Year's day. The annual sum of £3 is transmitted by the executors to Mr. Joseph Hancock, the brother of the donor, which he distributes to about 20 poor persons.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. is paid to the vicar, and is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Winster Chapelry.—Anthony Moore, by will, in 1651, gave to Robert Moore and his heirs all his lands, that 20s. a year should be paid to the poor of Winster for ever on St. Thomas's day. Robert Moore, mindful to secure the said payment, and to make an augmentation thereto of other 20s. a year, after his decease, by indenture dated 27th April 1672, enfeoffed to two persons and their heirs a close called the Grisshill, in Winster, to pay the sum of 40s. yearly, on the feast of St. Thomas.

William Hall, by will, dated 1685, directed that his close, called Grisshill, in Winster, should at his decease be given to the poor of Winster, at the discretion of his executors. The close, stated to contain 1A. 2R, 15P., and worth about £3 a year, was for some time occupied by the overseers of the poor. But the field having since been let, the rent is distributed amongst the poor as above, on St. Thomas's day.

John Slater, alias Buxton, who was buried in 1694, left to the poor of Winster, 20s. a year out of the revenues of the New Close, to be distributed on the feast of St. John the Evangelist.

Joseph Haynes, who was buried in 1706, gave, by his will, to the poor of Winster, a close called Knot-Greaves; the yearly rents to be paid at three times, viz.— one moiety on Christmas-day, another part on Trinity Sunday, and another on the 2nd July. The close contains 3½ acres, let by the inhabitants for £7 10s. per annum. The overseers receive the rent and distribute it to widows and other poor persons.

Robert Oates, by will, 1719, left to the minister of Winster for the time being, for ever, the sum of 10s. for a sermon to be preached on the day of his burial, being the 14th May. He also directed 24 wheaten loaves, each of the value of 6d., to be distributed to 24 poor people who should be then present at divine service; and that 2s. should on the same day be paid to the ringers, to be continued for ever. The sum of 24s. is annually paid by the trustees of the late Thos. Norman, out of a close called Headland, in Winster.

Anthony Moore, by will, in 1721, gave lands situate in Dore, and the reversion thereof, to the children of his three sisters and their heirs, &c., subject to payment of 10s. per annum, payable at Michaelmas, on trust, that they should divide the same amongst the poor of Winster, on St. Thomas's day yearly; and he charged the same on a farm then in the possession of Anthony Siddall. There is no trace of this having been received since 1778, though the returns of 1786 state that it was paid by Anthony Gallimore. We have not been able to identify the farm.

Elizabeth Buxton, by will, 1730, gave 10s. per annum to the curate of Winster and his successors, for preaching a sermon in remembrance of her on the day of her burial; but if that was Sunday, then on the following day; 5s. to the ringers, 20s. to 40 poor inhabitants of Winster, and 10s. per annum to buy two bibles, to be given, on the anniversary of the day on which her aunt Ashmore was buried, to two scholars at Winster school; and she gave 10s. yearly to the said curate and his successors, for preaching a sermon in remembrance of her said aunt, in Winster chapel, on the day of her burial (10th November); 5s. to the ringers, and 20s. yearly to be distribnted to forty poor inhabitants; these to be reputed her aunt's charity. She also gave 10s. yearly for preaching a sermon in remembrance of her mother, Anne Buxton, on the day of her interment (15th December); 5s. to the ringers, and 20s. to be distributed to the poor; and she charged the said annual payments on all her lands and tenements situate in Winster. The amount of the above payments, £5 15s,, is paid as issuing out of a close in Winster, called the Ashmore Pingle. The minister receives the sums, and makes the distributions agreeably to the donor's will.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and by him distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Thomas Eyre, who died in 1717, gave by his will £20 per anuum to the minister, for instructing twenty poor children until they could read a chapter in the bible. The annuity was charged on the estate of the said Thomas Eyre. By indentures, dated 28th and 29th July, 1777, Lady Massarene conveyed an estate called the Great Rocks, in Wormhill, to trustees, charged with the payment of the said annual rent.

Robert Moore, by will, in 1718, reciting that there was paid out of his estate £8 yearly for charitable purposes, viz.—£5 for teaching 10 poor children to read the bible, and £3 yearly in dole money, chargeable as follows,—the £3 to be paid from his moiety of the tithes of wool and lamb, and the £5 to be paid out of the lands devised to his son, Anthony Moore. The annuity of £5 is now paid by the agent of Lord Scarsdale, as charged on the estate in Winster of which he is the owner. We have not found any trace of the payment of £3 as dole money for the poor: and by the act of enclosure passed in 1763, the tithes of lamb and wool are not mentioned.

SCARSDALE HUNDRED.

Is bounded on the north by Yorkshire, where the north-east point considerably protrudes, and the Shire Oak stands where the counties of Derby, York, and Nottingham converge. A fine thriving young oak occupies the site of the original tree, which is not remembered by any person now living. From this point it has Nottingham on the east. This boundary is very irregular, but very romantic, partly on sandstone and partly on lime, and the south side of this hundred very narrow, where it is bounded by the Morleston and Litchurch hundred, and on the west by the High Peak and the Wirksworth hundreds. It is very extensive, and the most populous hundred in the county, and forms a deeply undulating district, mostly a strong soil, in a high state of cultivation, of which a full proportion is arable. It abounds in coal and ironstone, and has extensive blast furnaces for smelting the ironstone, with foundries and forges for manufacturing bar iron. The northern boundary is partly included in the Sheffield corporation of Cutlers, (which extends six miles around that town,) and is the great seat of the manufacture of scythes, sickles, reaping-hooks, &c. It contains 144,614 statute acres of land. The houses are mostly built with stone and roofed with slate, though some yet remain thatched; and the north-east angle of the hundred is noted for the number of ancient yew trees growing there

The following table is an enumeration of its 35 parishes, shewing their territorial extent, the annual value, and their population from 1801 to 1851, as returned at the five decennial periods of the parliamentary census.

* The letters after the names signify P for Parish, C for Chapelry, and T for Township.

(a) The returns for Dethick and Lea, include the hamlet of Holloway.

(b) The townships of Shirebrook and Stoney Houghton are included in the returns for Pleasley.

(c) The hamlet of Higham is returned with Shirland.

ALFRETON is an extensive parish, 14 miles N.N.E. from Derby, 9¼ miles E. by N. from Wirksworth, and 140 miles N.N.W. from London by road, and 138 by railway. It contains the township of Alfreton, with the hamlets of Greenhill Lane, Somercotes, Pyebridge, Swanwick, Riddings, and Ironville, but the two latter have been recently made into separate Ecclesiastical districts; consists of 4,570 acres of land, and in 1851 had 1638 houses, and 8326 inhabitants, of whom 4,292 were males, and 4,034 females; rateable value, £12,761.

ALFRETON, a township and market town, pleasantly situated on the brow of a hill, consists of two good streets, intersecting each other at right angles in the Market place, and is well paved and lighted with gas. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the collieries and iron works of the neighbourhood, or in stocking weaving; besides which, here are a few malting establishments in the town, which was anciently noted for its ale. The Market is held on Friday; and Fairs, July 31st, (which is very large for cattle and horses,) and a hiring statute, on November 24th; with smaller fairs on January 26th, Easter-Tuesday, Whit-Tuesday, and October 6th. Wm. Palmer Morewood, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner. Rev. John Wood, Chas. Seely, Esq., Jas. Oakes, Esq., Wm. Jessop, Esq., G. C. Hall, Esq., Geo. Wooding, Esq., John Holmes, Esq., and Richard and Thomas Elnor, Esqrs. are also owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Martin, is an ancient building of various styles, apparently built at different periods, consists of nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a handsome tower, and five bells. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £17 8s. 9d., now £153, with surplice fees about £200; it has been augmented with £200 benefactions, and £200 Queen Anne's bounty. Wm. Palmer Morewood, Esq., is the patron, and the Rev. John Chas. Hall Deacon, M.A., the incumbent, who has 12A. of glebe. The Vicarage is a good residence, near the east side of the church. On the north wall of the chancel is a stone slab, into which brass figures of two persons, in a kneeling position, have been inlaid, which, according to a brass tablet are the effigies of John Armond and Joan his wife, who died, the former in 1503, and the latter in 1507. In the north aisle, are beautiful monuments to the Morewood family. The tithes were commuted for £642 9s. 11d.

The National Schools, with residence for the master, are situated on Sheldon road, and were erected in 1846, at a cost of £1,200, raised by subscriptions, aided by a grant of £350 from the Committee of Council on Education. It is a handsome brick building in the Elizabethan style of architecture, capable of accommodating 250 children. It is a mixed school, and the average attendance is about 100.

The Independents have a handsome chapel in Church street, erected in 1850, at a cost of £1000; will seat about 300 persons; the Rev. Alfred Crisp is the pastor. The Wesleyan Methodists chapel, Chapel street, was built in 1809, and with the galleries, will seat about 500 persons. The General Baptists had a chapel here, but which for the last six years has been occupied by the Primitive Methodists, it is situated on the Nesbit road. The Wesleyan Reformers occupy a room in the Red Lion yard.

The Town Hall, a handsome brick building, erected in 1856, by W. P. Morewood, Esq., has a noble room on the floor, 48 feet long by 30 feet wide, and 30 feet high, which is appropriated for public meetings, concerts, balls, &c., underneath which, on the basement story, are the various offices connected with the county court, magistracy, and petty sessions. It is a great ornament to the town, and reflects much credit on the architect, Mr. Benjamin Wilson, of Alfreton.

Petty Sessions are held at the Town hall on the 2nd and 4th Friday in the month, and the presiding magistrates are, W. P. Morewood, Esq., G. Turbutt, Esq., William Milnes, Esq., and Alfred Jas. Oakes, Esq.; Mr. Benj. S. Rickards is their clerk.

The Mechanics' Institution, established in 1856, is held in a room in the Red Lion yard, in connection with which is a small library of about 100 volumes of books. Rev. A. Crisp is the president, and Mr. W. C. Briggs, librarian.

The Savings' Bank, established May, 1845, is at Mr. Samuel Rowbottom's, the actuary, and is open on the first and third Fridays in every month, from half-past one to half-past two o'clock. On the 20th Nov., 1855, the balance due to 466 depositors was £12,724 17s. 0d.

The Lock-up, a substantial brick building, erected in 1844, cost upwards of £600, and consists of four cells, with a residence for the superintendent constable.

The Stamp Office is at Mr. Brudenell Sharp's, Market place.

Gas Works were erected here in 1848, by a company of shareholders. The annual consumption of gas is about 674,000 cubic feet.

County Court.—The New Small Debts' Act, or County Courts. This important act which superseded the Court of Requests, came into operation on the 15th March, 1847. Alfreton County Court is held at the Town hall, monthly, and comprises the following district:—Alfreton, Annesley, Ashover, Bagthorpe, Birchwood, Blackwall, Brackenfield, Butterley, Codnor, Codnor Park, Crich, Felley, Fritchley, Greenhill Lane, Higham, Ironville, Kirkby, Kirkby Woodhouse, Morton, Newton, Normanton (South), Okerthorpe, Pentrich, Hartshay, Pilsley, Pinxton, Riddings, Ripley, Selston, Shirland, Somercoates, Stretton, Swanwick, Tibshelf, Underwood, Wessington, Wheatcroft, Wingfield (South), Wood Linkin, Woolley Moor. J. T. Cantrell, Esq., Judge; Philip Hubbersty, Esq., of Wirksworth, and Michael Jessop, Esq., Alfreton, are Registrars; and Mr. Wm. Marsh, Wirksworth, High Bailiff.

The Pinxton Canal passes through the parish, and the Midland Railway on its western verge, having a station 1¾ miles west of the town. This town, anciently called Alfredingtune, is supposed to have been built by, and derived its name from King Alfred, the site of whose palace is still pointed out. Robert, the son of Ranulph, lord of Alfreton, was one of the four knights who murdered Thomas à-Beckett, Archbishop of Canterbury. In expiation of his guilt, he founded the monastery of Beauchief, to which he gave this church. Alfreton, by marriage, afterwards came into the possession of the family of Chaworth, one of whom was a considerable benefactor to this religious house. The rectory of Alfreton, with the advowson of the vicarage, was granted by Henry VIII. to Francis Leake, Esq., whose descendant, Nicholas, Earl of Scarsdale, sold them, in 1673, to John Turner, of Swanwick, gent. The rectorial tithes were sold by auction, about the year 1779, chiefly to the several landowners. The advowson of the vicarage was purchased by Geo. Morewood, Esq. The land is all freehold, and abounds in coal and ironstone.

The manor of Alfreton was given by Wulfric, a noble Saxon, and confirmed by Ethelred II., to Burton Abbey. At the Domesday survey, it was held by Ingham, under Roger de Busli. This Ingram was the immediate ancestor of Robert Fitz-Ranulph, or Fitz-Ralph, lord of Alfreton, who founded Beauchief Abbey. His descendants were denominated De Alfreton. On the death of his great grandson, in 1296, this manor descended to Thomas de Chaworth, his nephew, and Robert de Latham, who had married one of his sisters and coheiresses, to whom a market was granted in 1251. Chaworth purchased Latham's moiety, and was summoned to parliament as a baron in 1296. William Chaworth, Esq., the last of this branch of the family, left an only daughter and heir in the reign of Henry VII., married to John Ormond, Esq., whose heiress brought it to Sir Anthony Babington, of Dethick. Henry Babington, Esq., the grandson, sold it, about the 1565, to John Zouch, Esq., of Codnor. His son sold it, in 1618, to Robert Sutton, Esq., of Aram, in Nottinghamshire, by whom it was sold, in 1629, to Robert Morewood, Esq., in whose family it continued, and was their residence, till the death of Geo. Morewood, Esq., the last heir male in 1792. His widow, who enjoyed the estate under his bequest, married the Rev. Henry Case, who in 1793, previous to his marriage, took the name of Morewood, by the King's sign manual.

Alfreton Park, on the west side of the town has been the seat of the Morewood family for upwards of a century. It contains a large handsome stone mansion, beautifully situated on a good elevation, which is seen to great advantage from the Derby road. In 1855-6, great alterations were made to the mansion from the designs, and under the superintendence of Mr. Benj. Wilson, architect, by its present possessor, Wm. Palmer Morewood, Esq.

Greenhill Lane, is a large, improving, but scattered district, 2½ miles S.E. from Alfreton, and half a mile N. from Riddings. The Wesleyan Reformers have a neat chapel here, built in 1854, at a cost of £450, will seat about 300 hearers. In 1749 a labourer found an urn containing about 700 Roman coins here.

Newlands, forming a part of Greenhill Lane, and near to Riddings, consists of several cottages and a farm, the property of James Oakes, Esq., also a good Inn, occupied by Mr. Richard Elnor. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here.

Riddings is a considerable village, situated on a new line of road from Nottingham to Manchester, 3 miles S.W. by S. from Alfreton, was anciently a chapelry, but the chapel has long since been demolished. It is now an Ecclesiastical district, which consists of Riddings, Greenhill Lane, south-east part of Swanwick, Birchwood, nearly all Somercotes and Pye Bridge, with a population in 1851 of 3800 souls; for whom a Church, dedicated to St. James, was erected in 1845, at Riddings, at a cost of £4000; it will accommodate 1000 persons; upwards of 600 sittings are free. It is a handsome stone edifice, in the early English style, with nave, chancel, and lofty spire, with one bell. The commissioners under the late act for promoting the building of additional churches and chapels, furnished £2000 towards the expense, £1000 was raised by subscription, and the remainder from other societies. The living is a perpetual curacy of the value of £150. The vicar of Alfreton is patron, and the Rev. Arthur Chas. Pittar, B.A., incumbent.

Handsome National Schools, with a residence for the master, were built in 1845, at a cost of £2000, raised by subscriptions, aided by a Parliamentary Grant of £245; about 64 boys, 45 girls, and 100 infants attend. The Wesleyan Methodists' chapel, rebuilt in 1838, is a large brick building, capable of seating 400 persons. The Independent chapel, erected 1821, was enlarged 1839, and will now seat 400 persons. The Rev. Thos. Colledge is the pastor. The Baptist chapel, enlarged about 1833, is now a good brick edifice which will seat 300 persons.

The Alfreton Iron Works in this liberty, are carried on by Messrs. James Oakes and Company. A Branch of the Cromford Canal, connected with Mansfield by a railway, which passes through it. A market has been established, and is held on Saturday. Riddings House is the seat and property of James Oakes, Esq. The manor of Rydinge was held by the Chaworth family, with Alfreton. In 1817 it was the property of Launcelot Rolleston, Esq., of Watnall; but is now held by Jas. Oakes, Esq.

Ironville, a part of the Riddings manor, together with Codnor Park, a rapidly improving and important district, was made into a new Ecclesiastical District parish, in June, 1850, with a population in 1851 of 2276 souls. It forms the south-east extremity of the parish, and also of the Hundred of Scarsdale, 3½ miles S.E. from Alfreton, having the Cromford Canal, which here enters the Erewash Canal, on the south. The Pinxton Canal also commences here. This forms part of a very busy and populous district, employed in the Iron Works and Furnaces for smelting iron ore. Immense quantities of ironstone are obtained in the immediate neighbourhood, and of Codnor Park, which adjoins Ironville on the south. These establishments formed about 1801, have greatly increased the population, which was, prior to that period, but small, though in early ages Riddings was a place of great consequence. The Church, dedicated to Christ, was built in 1852, at a cost of £6000, by the Butterley Iron Company; it is a handsome stone structure, with nave, transepts, chancel, and tower, with one bell; and contains about 540 sittings, of which 300 are free. An organ was put up at the same time, at a cost of £200 by subscription. In the chancel are three beautiful stained glass windows, in memory of the late Wm. Jessop, Esq. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued at £150, in the patronage of Fras. Wright, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. John Casson, B.A. New National Schools for boys, girls, and infants, were also erected here in 1850, by the Butterley Iron Company, aided by a Parliamentary Grant of £490. It is a substantial brick building, capable of accommodating 100 boys, 80 girls, and 250 infants, the average attendance is about 200. In August, 1843, an artizans' and mechanics' library was opened here; it has 61 members, and a library of 600 volumes; Mr. Geo. Cotterell, librarian.

Somercotes, is a large village, on the Nottingham road, 2 miles S.E. from Alfreton, and 14 miles N.W. from Nottingham. A Chapel of Ease to Riddings, dedicated to St. Thomas, was formed here in 1854. It was formerly used as Methodist Chapel, but was purchased by subscription for about £400, and after undergoing the necessary alterations and improvements was dedicated as above. It is now a neat brick and stone edifice, with turret and one bell, and will seat about 600 persons, there is a burial ground attached of about one acre. The Wesleyan Reformers' chapel, situated in Birchwood lane was erected by John Smedley, Esq., of Lea Bridge. It is a handsome building with tower and one bell. In connection with which is a good school, eligible for all the children in the village. The school-room is lighted with gas and heated with hot water, will accommodate about 200 children; average attendance 125. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel, built in 1839, and enlarged in 1852; and in 1845 a corn mill, called the Alfreton Steam Mill, was erected by Mr. John Chadborn; it is of 12 horses power, and works three pairs of stones. About 1 mile N.W. is Cotes Park, a rapidly improving district, containing two extensive collieries and a few farms. J. H. Barker, and Charles Seely, Esqrs. are the owners. To the N.E. of the village is a small district called Nether Birchwood, and 3 miles S.E. from Alfreton is Pye Bridge, a railway station on the Erewash Branch of the Midland Railway, from whence there are trains to Mansfield, Nottingham, and Derby, three times a day. A Sick Society is held here at the Dog and Doublet Inn.

SWANWICK, a hamlet and populous village on the Derby road, 1½ miles S.W. from Alfreton, 7 miles N.N.E. from Belper. W. P. Morewood, Esq., and Haslam Brothers have collieries here, and are considerable owners. The Wesleyan Methodists' chapel, Sleet Moor, built in 1824, was taken down and rebuilt in 1845, at a cost of £350, and will now seat about 400 hearers. The Particular Baptist chapel, Sleet Moor, built in 1796, and enlarged in 1828, at a cost of £650, is a large brick edifice, with accommodation for 600 persons; it has a small burial ground attached. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel built in 1849. A Church is intended to be built here very shortly, subscriptions towards which have already been commenced and for which a site has been given by the Rev. John Wood, who resides at the Hall, a neat brick mansion a little south-east from the village. The Grange, 2½ miles S. from Alfreton, is a neat modern mansion, the property of G. C. Hall, Esq., and the residence of Wm. Needham, Esq. At the Grove half a mile east of Swanwick, is a good free school and residence for the master, founded in 1740 by Mrs. E. Turner; 40 children are educated free.—(See charities). Sleet Moor, a district N.W. Somercotes. About 1 mile S.E. of Alfreton lies the Swanwick Colliery, the property of William Palmer Morewood, Esq. The superior quality of this coal has induced a number of persons to vend a very inferior article in its name, in places where it has never been introduced. The seam is about five feet in thickness, and is raised to the surface by a small engine of eight horses' power. The works are kept dry by an engine of forty horses' power, which is also assisted in very wet weather by a smaller one. The coal is conveyed by railway first to the summit of an inclined plane, by means of a small engine of eight horses' power, the waggons being attached to a wire rope, about 400 yards long. On the summit is a wharf for the sale of coal, near to which is the Alfreton Old Poorhouse, converted into cottages since the New Poor Law came into operation. The situation of the wharf and poorhouse is called Sleet Moor, and about fifty years ago it was a wide common which was used as a race course. The Cromford Canal, at the Swanwick wharf, separates the parishes of Alfreton and Pentrich. The South Wingfield station, on the Midland Railway is distant about two miles.

CHARITIES.—Margaret Reynolde in 1621, gave a rent charge of 20s. yearly, out of the Leader Close, to be distributed at the feast of St. Thomas, and on Good Friday to the poor.

George Turner in 1641, gave to the vicar of Alfreton 10s. yearly, for preaching a sermon on the 5th of November, and an annual sum of 20s. to the poor on the same day. 15s. is paid from some closes near Sleet Moor, and 15s. from some land, the property of the Rev. John Wood. 10s. is paid to the vicar, (though no sermon is preached), and 20s. is distributed, in sums from 1s. to 2s. amongst the poor.

Rowland Morewood, Esq., in 1647, left a rent charge of £5 per annum, issuing out of land called the Drunken Closes, for the benefit of the poor. By indentures, 1736, Samuel Dalton, Esq. conveyed to trustees lands called the Wheat Fields, Over Housteads, in Birchwood, and the Drunken Closes, in Alfreton, on trust for the poor. In 1771, an information was filed by the Attorney-General against George Morewood, Esq., in order to establish the charity by a decree of the court. The defendant, George Morewood, set forth by his answer, 1772, that the mention of the Drunken Closes in the deed of 1736 was a mistake, that in the year 1659, the sum of £100 had been laid out by his ancestors for the £5 payable out of those closes. In 1774, however, it was decreed that the Drunken Closes were part of the charity estate, which now consists of 27A. 0R. 11P., with a cottage and a barn; the rents, amounting to £39, are distributed in sums varying from 5s to 15s. There is a bed of coal on the estate, and timber to the amount of £54 has been sold.

John Ludlam in 1684, charged his lands at Newton with the payment of 50s. per annum to the most necessitous poor of Scarliff, 10s. to the poor of Bakewell, and 10s. to poor persons in Alfreton Riddings.

Thomas Hunter in 1735, gave his cottage and lands, near Windmill Hill, on trust for the use of the poor of Alfreton, Kilburn, Horsley, Horsley Woodhouse, Ripley, and Wessington, and 10s. yearly to the vicar for preaching a sermon on the day on which he was buried. The rent of the estate is £12 per annum, of which the share of Alfreton is £3 15s. This is given in sums varying from 1s. 6d. to 2s.

Jane Boot in 1795, bequeathed 20s. per annum out of premises in Alfreton to 20 poor widows, to be distributed at the tombstone of her late husband in Alfreton churchyard.

Adam Parker in 1800, devised his estate at Shirland, on trust, to pay five guineas to 20 poor widows; he also left the churchwardens and overseers 5s. yearly for their trouble. The Shadwell Plots and Park Closes are subject to the payment.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the vicar, is expended in warm clothing, and given to the poor.

Swanwick School.—George Turner conveyed a piece of land, to the intent that a charity school should be erected theron. Elizabeth Turner, widow, in 1740, conveyed the sum of £457 17s. new South Sea annuities, on trust, to sell the same, and purchase lands out of the rents thereof, to pay £15 for the instruction of 12 children, Swanwick and Greenhill Lane always to have the preference—the surplus to be laid out in such charitable uses as the trustees shall think fit. In 1741, a sum of £500 arising from the sale of the stock, was invested in 43A. 2R. of land in Swanwick, and in 1816 an allotment was made to the trustees of 2A. 2R. 18P. The schoolmaster occupies the estate, and instructs 40 poor children in reading, writing, and arithmetic. About 4A. of the land has been much injured by coal being got under it. Under an ancient grant from Sir John Zouch, in 1618, to the Morewood family, they are considered to be entitled to work the coals in various lands in Alfreton without making any compensation to the owner.

ASHOVER is a large scattered parish, which contains the township of Ashover, in Scarsdale Hundred, and the township and chapelry of Dethic and Lea, with the hamlet of Holloway, in Wirksworth Hundred, and together have 10,501A. 3R. 8P. of land, and in 1851 had 762 houses, and 3311 inhabitants, of whom 1634 were males and 1677 females; rateable value, £11,484 17s.

ASHOVER is a romantic and picturesque village and township, situated in a deep narrow valley, watered by a branch of the small river Amber, which rises in the parish, and crosses its whole extent. On the lofty hills in some places barren rocks protrude through the soil, in others they crest the summit, and houses are scattered amongst the projecting crags and verdant slopes. Few villages are better situated for excellent water. The river Amber rises in this parish, and bears that name for ten miles. Ashover is 19 miles N.W. by W. from Derby, 7 N.N.W. from Alfreton, 7 miles S.S.W.. from Chesterfield, and 4 miles N.E. from Matlock, and contains 9098A. 3R. 13P. of land, of which 8,615 are rateable, and has 55 miles of roads, 577 houses, and 2,445 inhabitants, of whom 1,220 were males, and 1,225 females; rateable value, £8,379 14s. 0d. Wm. Milnes, Esq., of Stubbin Edge Hall, is a considerable owner and one of the lords of the manor, the rights of which are divided amongst various persons. John Bright, M.D., Thos. Lee, Robt. Milward, John Hopkinson, John B. Gregory, and Thos. Coleman, Esqrs., Rev. Joseph Nodder, the Trustees of the late Sir Henry Hunloke, Exors. of the late Charles Gladwin, and Chesterfield Corporation, besides several others, are also owners. The Church, All Saints, a rectory, valued in the King's book £12 3s. 1½d., now £481; the Rev. Joseph Nodder, M.A., is the patron and incumbent. The church is a large ancient structure, in the Gothic style, and is supposed to have been built in 1419. It has a square embattled tower in which are 5 bells. from the centre of which rises a handsome spire, 69 feet high. It was repewed in 1844, at a cost of £500; it contains 600 sittings, of which one-fifth are free. It has two monuments inlaid with brasses, and an altar-tomb with recumbent figures, to the memory of Thos. Babington and Edith his second wife. There are also memorials to the Milnes, Bournes, and Dakeyne families, also a magnificent Gothic obituary window of stained glass, to the Nodder family, placed in the chancel, in 1845. Here is also a very remarkable and ancient font, the base is of stone, the lower part is of an hexagonal form, the basin of the font is cylindrical, and is surrounded by twenty leaden figures, loosely draped, standing in ornamental niches. The Rectory is a pleasant mansion, a little S.E. of the church, near which the rector, in 1846, built a handsome school, of gritstone, for girls, at a cost of £400. The boys' school at Ashover Hill, half a mile N.W. from the church, was erected in 1703; the endowment and subscriptions amount to £22 9s. per annum,—(see charities). Here is 84A. 2R. 14P. of glebe. The great and small tithes were commuted in 1850, for £540 3s. 11d. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each a chapel in the township, besides which the Primitive Methodists have one erected the present year (1856) at Alton. This manor, Essoure, at the Domesday survey, belonged to Ralph Fitzhubert, under whom it was held by Serlo. The posterity of Serlo were called de Plesley, from Plesley, the place where they resided. Serlo de Plesley, his descendant, who died about the year 1203, left two daughters, co-heiresses, married to Willoughby of Lincolnshire, and Deincourt, who possessed the manor in moieties. The co-heiresses of Deincourt married Reresby, of Lincolnshire, and Musters, of Nottinghamshire. Sir Robert Willoughby exchanged his share of Ashover with the Reresby family, for their interest in the Plesley estate. The share of Musters family was subdivided between two sons, from one of whom, Geffry, a portion of the manor passed to Robert Pierepont.

From this time Ashover appears to have been divided into four manors, known by the names of Newhall, Oldhall, Musters', and Pierepont's manors. The Newhall manor, with the advowson of the church, was given, in 1302, by Margaret Reresby, widow, to Adam Reresby, her youngest son, and continued to belong to his descendants, who resided at New Hall, afterwards Eastwood Hall, till the reign of James I., when Sir Thos. Reresby made it over to trustees, and it was sold, in 1623, to the Rev. Immanuel Bourn, then rector of Ashover, who died in 1797, and bequeathed the manor and advowson to trustees, for the benefit of his niece Jemima, the wife of Mr. John Nodder, in whose descendant it is now vested. Eastwood and the site of the old manor was sold, in 1762, to the governors of Queen Anne's bounty, to augment the chapel of Brimington, near Chesterfield. The Oldhall manor was purchased, in 1737, by Roger de Hynfield, of Edelstow Hall, who also purchased the Muster's manor. Edelstow Hall was considered the hall of this manor, and after several changes became the seat of a branch of the Gladwin family, one of whose co-heiresses brought it to Dr. Bourne, who then resided at the Spital, near Chesterfield. It was sold, in 1808, by the widow of the Rev. John Bourne and her daughters, to Mr. John Milnes, of Ashover. Pierepont's manor is in many shares. The Butts estate was purchased by James Milnes, of Ashover, in 1696. Marsh Green Hall, a picturesque mansion, is the residence of the Rev. Jph. Nodder, M.A., and R.D. The township contains many scattered hamlets and farms, and it is divided for parochial purposes into quarters, but keep their poor conjointly. Ashover Quarter is situated within one mile from the church, and contains Appletree Knowl on the N., Butts House W., Eastwood Hall E., Hillside E., Marsh Green NW., Meadow Lane E., and Rattle W. Mill Town Quarter, contains Mill Town, a small village one mile S., and the quarter extending S. and S.W. from Ashover, and contains the following villages and hamlets: Butterley, 2½ miles S.S.E.; Gorse Hall, 1¼ mile W.; High Oredish, 2 miles S.; Littlemoor, 2 miles, S.E.

Overton Hall, ¾ mile S.W. The family of Hunt, or Le Hunt, were possessed of considerable property in Overton. In the year 1556, Thos. Hunt (son of Christopher), who had removed to Aston-upon-Trent, sold his estate at Overton to Richard Hodgkinson, of Northedge Hall. The daughter and heiress of Wm. Hodgkinson married Joseph Banks, Esq., of Revesby Abbey, Lincolnshire. His son Robert, who took the name of Hodgkinson, died in 1792; on his death, this estate devolved to the Right Hon. Sir Jph. Banks, Bart., and Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, and President of the Royal Society, who usually spent a few weeks in the autumn at Overton Hall. It is now the property and occasional residence of John Bright, Esq., M.D., who purchased it in 1829. A younger branch of the Hunts resided also at Overton, till 1596, when Wm. Hunt sold his mansion and estate to Robert Daken, of Chelmorton, by whom it was conveyed, in 1600, to Mr. John Gregory. Wm. Milnes, Esq., of Stubbin Edge Hall, in 1828, purchased part of Overton. The family of Crich had for many generations been resident, and had large possessions in Ashover. The last of the family died in very reduced circumstances, at the great age of 101, in the year 1789, and lies buried in Ashover Church. Till within a few months of his death he frequently attended Chesterfield market.

Stubbin Edge Hall, an ancient mansion, 1½ miles S.E. from Ashover, formerly belonged to the Crich family, but in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, passed to Richard Daykeyne, who married the widow of William Crich; he had no issue by this marriage, but by his marriage with Catherine Strange, daughter of the Earl of Rothes, he had two sons, John and Arthur; she was the favourite maid of honour to Mary Queen of Scots, and attended her unfortunate mistress to the scaffold; she was largely remembered by her in her will, and was especially recommended to the care of Queen Elizabeth. John, their first son, was born in 1587. He was disinherited by his father, and his senior representative was the late John Deakin, or Dakeyne, Esq., of Boythorpe House, and from a third son of the said John, the Dakeynes of Darley Hall, are descended. The second son of Arthur Dakeyne, enjoyed the Stubbin Edge Hall estate, until the year 1720, when it passed away by a female to the Hopkinsons, of Bonsall, now extinct; there are memorials in the Ashover Church, to the Dakeynes as early as 1537, and as late as 1720. The estate, after passing through several hands, is now the property and seat of Wm. Milnes, Esq., deputy lieutenant. The hall is seated on an eminence, and was modernized and improved in 1821, and now forms a handsome mansion. The farms and houses in the Mill Town Quarter extends from one to 2½ miles S. from Ashover. The Upper End Quarter includes the N.W. part of the township, extending from 1¼ to four miles from Ashover. At Kelstedge, a small hamlet, 1¼ miles N.W. is the lace-thread manufactory of Mr. William Cartledge, of which Mrs. Cawood is the owner. The Alton Quarter includes the N. and N.E. division.

Alton or Aulton is a village one mile NE., and North Edge 1¼ mile N.N.E. from Ashover. The hamlets and small villages in the parish present a singular appearance and want of uniformity. The soil is very various; in the valley near the village it is very fertile, bearing a rental of from 35s. to 50s. per acre; on the hills and moorlands the value is from 3s. to 35s. per acre, and some good corn is grown. The limestone got here is well adapted for agricultural purposes, and the beds of gritstone for making grindstones. Here are a few framework knitters in cotton, a lace thread doubling factory, a colliery and two lead mines. On the declivity of a hill on Ashover common, is a "Rocking Stone," called Robin Hood's mark, which measures about 26 feet in circumference, and from its extraordinary position, evidently appears not only to have been the work of art, but to have been placed with great ingenuity. About 200 yards to the North of this, is a singularly shaped rock called the Turning Stone, 9 feet in height, and supposed to have been a rock idol. Fairs are held at Ashover, April 25th, Oct. 15th, and Monday before Martinmas day, which is also a hiring statute for servants. Feast is on first Sunday in July.

CHARITIES.—Samuel Sleigh, by will, 1684, on condition that the inhabitants of Ashover should build a free school, gave £4 per annum out of his lands in Washington Hay for the use of such school, 20s. yearly towards a schoolmaster's wages, and 20s. to the poor out of King's Lant. George Wollatt pays the rent charge out of Washington Hay, and the annuity of 20s. is paid out of the estate of the late Sir Windsor Hunloke. The schoolroom was built in 1703, by George Hodgkinson, and in 1728, it was conveyed to five trustees.

Anthony Storer, in 1705, gave 5s. yearly to the schoolmaster, out of George Marsh's cottage and croft upon the Hay.

Richard Hodgkinson left 20s. yearly for the use of the schoolmaster, the amount is supposed to be paid out of a croft the property of Lady Banks.

Sarah Bower, previous to the year 1789, gave £40 to this school. In 1819, the Rev. Francis Gisborne proposed to give certain closes for the better endowment of the school, if the inhabitants would add £60 to the above sum. The amount was accordingly raised, and the £100 was vested at four per cent. in the hands of William Milnes, Esq.

Rev. Francis Gisborne, by indenture, 1819, granted four closes of land containing 6A. 2R. 6P., called the Marsh Flat, and an allotment of 1R. 10P. on trust, out of the rent thereof to pay all expenses in the reparation of the school, and the residue of the clear rents for the benefit of a schoolmaster, and for providing the children with books. The income arising from the above gifts amounts to £21 9s., out of which the master receives £18 for teaching 20 poor children.

Elizabeth Hodgkinson in 1733, gave £60 to be invested in land, out of the produce thereof eight penny loaves to be given every Sunday, and the residue in bread on Christmas day, Good Friday, and Easter Sunday. In 1786, the amount is mentioned as being vested in the Rev. Lawrence Bourne, and £2 2s. is paid by Miss Jemima Nodder, who is in possession of an estate called Marsh Green, which was formerly the property of the Rev. S. Bourne; £1 from Sleigh's Charity, and 6s. is added to the above sum from the poor rates, making in the whole £3 8s., from which a distribution of bread is made to nine poor widows every Sunday.

John Bunting, in 1666, left 15s, per annum to the poor out of land at Peasenhurst.

George Bower, of Gorse Hall, left 10s. yearly, issuing out of Stanesley Fees, to be given to 30 of the poorest housekeepers.

Thomas Calton, in 1705, gave 5s. per annum out of Lang Croft, for a distribution of bread. The agent of Lady Banks distributes £1 5s. in money, and bread to the amount of 10s. in respect of Bower, Calton, and Bunting's charities, being 5s. more than the annual amount.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent is expended in flannel, and given to the poor.

DETHIC & LEA form a chapelry, and with Holloway a joint township in the parish of Ashover, and the hundred of Wirksworth, containing together 1,402A. 3R. 35P. of land, and in 1851 had 185 houses, and 866 inhabitants, of whom 414 were males, and 452 females; rateable value £3105 3s. Dethic or Dethwick, is a small hamlet, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles S.W. from Ashover, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ S.E. by E. from Matlock, and consists of four farm houses and a corn mill. Thomas Hallowes, Esq., of Glapwell, is lord of the manor, principal owner, and patron of the living, a perpetual curacy, value £93, has been augmented with £1000 Queen Anne's bounty, and £400 benefactions. The Rev. Nathan Hubbersty, incumbent. The tithe is paid by a small modus to the rector of Ashover. The Chapel is a small neat stone edifice, with a handsome and lofty spire, and one bell, and is dedicated to St. John. It was founded by Jeffery Dethic and Thomas, prior of Felley monastery, in Nottinghamshire, in 1279, and is stated to have been rebuilt by one of the Babington's in 1530. In the reign of Henry III., Dethic belonged to a family who took their name from this place, the elder branch of whom became extinct by the death of Robert Dethic, whose heiress brought this place to Thomas Babington, elder son of Sir John Babington, and brother to Sir Wm. Babington, who was appointed Chief Justice of the King's Bench, in 1423. John Babington, son of Thomas, was killed at the battle of Bosworth Field. Anthony Babington, the sixth in descent from Thomas, was a principal actor in the conspiracy formed against the life of Queen Elizabeth, in 1586, being zealously devoted to the Catholic religion; he had secretly made a voyage to Paris some time before, where he formed an intimacy with Thos. Morgan, a bigoted fugitive from England, and with the Bishop of Glasgow, the Queen of Scots' ambassador at the court of Paris. These parties employed every means to get young Babington to join them in their conspiracy, and having succeeded came to England bent upon the assassination of Elizabeth, and the deliverance of the Queen of Scots. In the prosecution of these views he employed himself in increasing the number of his associates and secretly drew into the conspiracy many catholic gentlemen discontented with the government, but their desperate projects were soon discovered by the vigilance of Elizabeth's council, and they obtaining intelligence of it, disguised themselves and fled, and concealed themselves in woods or barns, but were soon discovered and thrown into prison. They were afterwards tried, condemned, and executed in September, 1586; John Balliard, a priest of the English seminary at Rheines, and the instigator of the rebellion in England, suffered first, and Babington undauntedly beheld his execution, whilst the rest turned away their faces and fell on their knees. He ingenously confessed his offence, and being taken from the gallows, and about to be cut up, he cried aloud several times, parce me domine Jesu, "Have mercy upon me, Lord Jesus." He is said to have made over his estate at Dethick, previously to his attainder, to a younger brother. It was afterwards sold to Wendesley Blackwall Esq., and having been divided into severalties, the whole became eventually the property of Samuel Hallowes, Esq., from whom it passed to the present proprietor. The old mansion, which was of considerable extent, has been much altered, and is now occupied as a farm house.

Lea, or Dethic Lea, is a populous village, 16 miles S. from Dethic, and $2\frac{1}{2}$ from Cromford station. W. E. Nightingale, Esq., T. Hallowes, Esq., Mr. Wm. Walker, and Mr. Saml. Sims, are the principal owners, the former is lord of the manor. Mrs. Ann Wass has extensive lead works here, where about thirty tons of lead are produced weekly. John Smedley, Esq., of Lea Mills, has also an extensive establishment for merino spinning and the manufacturing of hosiery, and here is also a considerable hat manufactory worked by Mr. Wm. Walker. Lea Hall is now divided into two dwellings. The Wesleyan Reformers chapel, situate betwixt Lea and Holloway, was erected by John Smedley, Esq., in 1853, and is a handsome stone building with turret and one bell. It is capable of seating 350 persons, and has a burial ground attached. It is also licensed for marriages, Mr. Smedley, (or some one appointed by him,) officiating in both cases free of charge. In connection is a day school for boys and girls which is supported by Mr. Smedley, about 60 attend. The Wesleyan chapel is a beautiful structure, erected by the late Joseph Wass, Esq., at a cost of £1000. In 1856 it underwent considerable improvements at the sole expense of Mrs. Ann Wass. The Unitarians have also a small chapel here. Lea School, built by subscription in 1808, is supported by William Edward Nightingale, Esq., except a small charge of 2d. per week from each of the children. This manor, in the reign of King John, belonged to Robert de Alveley, who left two daughters, co-heiresses; one moiety passed with the elder daughter to Ferrers, of Lockesley, in Staffordshire, and was sold by her son to Geffrey Dethick; it afterwards descended to the Babingtons, and has long been in severalties. The other moiety was sold by a descendant of De la Lea, who married Alveley's youngest daughter, of the Frechevilles, of whom it was purchased in the fourteenth century by the Rollestons. Francis Rolleston, Esq., of the Lea, and his son, were convicted in 1571, for conspiring to set at liberty Mary Queen of Scots, then in the custody of the Earl of Shrewsbury. This manor having passed in marriage to the Pershalls, was sold in 1648 by Sir John Pershall, Bart., to Hodgkinson and Cowley, who conveyed it to Spateman. In 1707, it was purchased of the last mentioned family by the late Peter Nightingale, Esq., and is now under his will the property of William Edward Nightingale, Esq., whose seat is Lea Hurst, a handsome mansion in the Gothic style of architecture. There was formerly a domestic chapel at Lea Hall, founded in the reign of King John, and a chantry was founded in the chapel in the reign of Henry IV., by Roger de Wingerworth. By an inscription on the side of a gothic window, it appears to have been rebuilt in 1478, but there are no remains left of it now.

Dethic Chapelry.—Francis Allyn, by will, 1663, gave the yearly sum of 40s. out of his messuage in Lea, towards maintaining a minister at Dethic chapel; he also gave to the poor of Lea, Over-howay and Nether-howay, a sum of 10s. yearly.

Holloway is a small scattered village and hamlet, standing on a bold acclivity, partly situated in the parish of Crich, and forming the S.E. extremity of the township, 3 miles

S.E. from Matlock, and 1½ miles N.W. from Whatstandwell Bridge Station. W. E. Nightingale, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here erected in 1854, it is a neat stone building in the old English style of architecture, and will seat about 120 hearers. A neat house, the residence of Mrs. Smedley, was erected in 1844.

Crichley, to Chesterfield, Sat.

AULT, or HAULT HUCKNALL parish includes Ault Hucknall, with the manor of Hardwick, the hamlets and villages of Astwith, Harstoft, the manor and village of Rowthorne, the manor and village of Stainsby, which keep their poor conjointly, and contain 4221A. 3R. 26P. of land, and in 1851 had 136 houses and 690 inhabitants, of whom 375 were males and 315 females; rateable value £3262 8s. 3d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and owns nearly all the parish, but here are a few small freeholders. The soil is principally a good strong clay with a portion of limestone and hazle soil.

AULT HUCKNALL is a small scattered village, situate a little S. of the Chesterfield and Mansfield road, 7 miles S.E. by S. from the former and 3½ miles S.W. from the latter. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, situate at the north-east extremity of the village, is an ancient edifice with low tower, the interior being neatly fitted up. In 1828 it was repewed at a cost of £334, towards which the Duke of Devonshire subscribed £100 and the late vicar £5, the remainder being raised by a rate. It again underwent considerable repairs in 1850, when the interior was neatly painted and varnished, the cost being defrayed by subscription. In the chancel is a handsome monument, with a Latin inscription, to the memory of Anne, first Countess of Devonshire; she was the daughter and coheiress of Henry Kighley, Esq., and died in 1598; she had three sons, Gilbert, William, and James, and the same number of daughters, Mary, Elizabeth, and Francis; James, the youngest son, lies buried near his mother. William, Earl of Devonshire and Baron Hardwick, and sole survivor of his mother, desirous of preserving the memory of his brothers and sisters, has caused this monument to be erected, dated 1627. Near the above is a plain stone, with a Latin inscription, to the memory of Thos. Hobbes of Malmsbury, the celebrated philosopher and free-thinker, who died at Hardwick, on the 4th December, 1679, in the 92nd year of his age. This well known writer had been tutor to the second and third Earls of Devonshire, and continued to reside in this family till his death. Among his numerous publications was a Latin descriptive poem on the wonders of the Peak, De Merabilibus Pecci. A few weeks before his death, the Earl of Devonshire removing with his family from Chatsworth to Hardwick, he insisted on being removed also, and in so doing it was necessary to carry him on a feather bed. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book, at £6 0s. 5d., now, £113, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, and £800 parliamentary grant. The Duke of Devonshire is patron and impropriator, the Rev. G. H. Arkwright, incumbent, and the Rev. Thos. Stevens, curate. The Church was appropriated to the priory of Beauchief. In 1544, the impropriate rectory was granted to Francis Leake, Esq., but has long been possessed by the present noble family. Here are about 23 acres of glebe land.

The manor of Hardwick forms the south side of the parish, and is on the border of Nottinghamshire, from which it is separated by the river Meden or Mayden, which rises at Skegby. On the south, the Erewash has its source near this point in the parish of Kirby-in-Ashfield, here forming a deep indentation on the Derbyshire border. The former stream flowing through a deep romantic glen, bounds the county for some distance to the north; the latter, running south, bounds the county till it falls into the Trent, near Long Eaton. The manor of Hardwick was granted by King John, in 1203, to Andrew de Beauchamp In the year 1288, Wm. de Stenesby held it of John le Savage, by the annual render of three pounds of cinnamon, and one of pepper. John Stenesby, his grandson, was seized of it in 1330. The Hardwicks afterwards possessed it for six generations. Elizabeth, third daughter, and (after her brother's death) coheiress of John Hardwick, Esq., brought this to her second husband, Sir William Cavendish, from whom it has descended to its present noble possessor. When the hall of the Hardwicks was erected is uncertain, but John Hardwick died here in the nineteenth year of the reign of Henry VIII, and it is said that Cardinal Wolsey lodged one night in the house, on his way from York to Leicester Abbey, where he died, November, 1536. The present house was built in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, by the countess of Shrewsbury. She had been married twice before she became the wife of the Earl of Shrewsbury, namely to Robert Barley, Esq., and Sir William Cavendish.

The situation of Hardwick Hall is exceedingly picturesque and beautiful. It stands in a fine park, richly wooded with venerable oaks of the most gigantic proportions. A high ridge commands some extensive and interesting views to the west. The hall, a noble mansion, exhibits a complete specimen of the style of architecture which prevailed during the reign of Queen Elizabeth; it has undergone no alteration since its erection, and appears to have been finished about the year 1597. It is built of stone, and round the top is a parapet of open work, in which the Countess's initials E. S. frequently occur. At each extremity is a lofty tower. The state apartments are spacious and lofty, with numerous windows, admitting a profusion of light. The hall is hung with tapestry of exquisite workmanship, and has long been celebrated for its antique furniture. In the chapel, which is on the first floor, is a very rich and curious altar cloth, 30 feet long, hung round the rails of the altar, with figures of saints under canopies wrought in needlework. The great dining-room is on the same floor, over the chimney piece of which is the date of 1597. The most remarkable apartments in this interesting edifice, are the state room or room of audience, and the gallery; the former 64 ft. 9 in. by 33 ft., and 26 4 in. high; at one end of it is a canopy of state, and in another part a bed, the hangings of which are very ancient. This room is hung with tapestry, on which is represented the story of Ulysses; over this are figures rudely executed in plaster, in bas relief, among which is a representation of Diana and her nymphs. The gallery is about 170 feet long and 26 wide, extending the whole length of the eastern side of the house, and hung with tapestry, on a part of which is a date of 1478. It is probable that this as well as many other articles of the furniture of this mansion was removed from the old Hall at Hardwick, or from Chatsworth, when that splendid mansion was rebuilt. Among other interesting portraits at Hardwick, are those of Queen Elizabeth, Lady Jane Grey, Sir Thomas More, Cardinal Pole, Bishop Gardener, the Countess of Shrewsbury, Sir William Cavendish, the first Earl of Devonshire, Colonel Charles Cavendish, and Thomas Hobbes. There are also many good paintings in various parts of the house. The delapidated shell of the ancient hall, which remains near the mansion, appears to have been a very magnificent edifice, and from the style of its architecture could not have been built any great length of time before the erection of the present mansion. It is now in a ruinous state; but one of the rooms remains entire, which is 55 ft. 6 inches by 30 ft. 6 inches, and 24 ft. 6 inches high. It is floored with terras, and the sides are fitted up to a considerable height with oak wainscoting, ornamented with Ionic pilasters, over which are ornaments in plaster, consisting of two rows of arches. Over the large stone chimney piece are colossal figures, one on each side, in Roman armour, reaching to the cornice; from which this room has obtained the appellation of "The Giant's Chamber." The present hall has acquired an interest from the supposition that it was one of the prisons of Mary Queen of Scots, but it was built after the death of that unfortunate princess. The second floor of this mansion is said to have been allotted for the residence of the royal prisoner, and the rooms are shown as retaining their furniture in the same state as when she inhabited them. Over the door of a bed room said to have been appropriated to her use, are the arms of the Queen of Scots, with her cypher. There is a portrait of Queen Mary in one of the apartments, said to have been painted in the tenth year of her captivity. A bed, a set of chairs, and a suit of hangings, are shown as having been the work of the royal captive; it is very probable that they were; she was very fond of needle-work, and employed many hours of the day during her captivity in that occupation. The furniture was probably used by her, and brought from Chatsworth before the old hall of that place was taken down. It is certain, if the unfortunate Mary ever was at Hardwick, it was only during a short and occasional visit of the Earl of Shrewsbury to that place. The Countess being at Hardwick in 1577, several years before the present hall was built, wrote to the Earl, intimating her wish that he would come to Hardwick, if the Queen would give him permission. In the postcript she says, "Lette me here how you, your charge, and love doth, and commend me, I pray you. Yt were well, you sente fore or fyve pieces of the great hangings, that they might be put oup, and some carpets; I wyshe you wollde have thynges yn that redynes that you myght come w^{h} in 3 or fore dayes after you here from courte." The carriage road to the hall from the Chesterfield and Mansfield road, is about a quarter of a mile east from the village of Heath. Near the hall is a school, built by the second Duke of Devonshire, in 1724, where about 20 children attend. (See Charities.)

Astwith, is a hamlet and small village, two miles S.W. from the parish Church.

Harstoft, a hamlet and small village, on the Chesterfield and Tibshelf road, 2½ miles S.W. from the Church. The river Dawley rises a little S.E of this village, and runs directly north to the Rother, on the north of Staveley. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small chapel here, built in 1835; it is a plain stone building, and is also used as a Sunday school.

ROWTHORNE, a small village one mile E. from the Church, and 7½ S.E, from Chesterfield. The manor of Rugetorn, at Domesday survey, was the property of Roger de Busli. It afterwards belonged to the family of Tilly, whose heiress married Savage. Robt. de Lexington, to whom it had been conveyed by the last mentioned family, gave it to the abbot and convent of Newstead, in Nottinghamshire. In the year 1563, this manor was vested in the coheiress of Roger Greenhalgh. In 1583, Lord Chancellor Bromley, acting it is supposed as trustee, conveyed it to Sir Wm. Cavendish, ancestor of the present noble owner. The last four deaths in this village up to the first of June, 1856, are as follows: Wm. Bromley, aged 88, Rd. Marriott, 92, Richard Shaw, 77, and Wm. Fisher, 95, the four making a total of 352 years.

STAINSBY, a small village 1 mile W. from the church, and 6 miles S.S.E. from Chesterfield. The manor of Stanesby was held at Domesday survey by Roger de Poiton. In the reign of King John it was in the family of Savage, and in the year 1235, William, son of Walkelin de Savage, held it by the annual render of a sore hawk (a hawk of the first year). In 1580 or 1581, John Savage conveyed this manor to Lord Chancellor Bromley, by whom it is probable it was again conveyed, about the same time as Rowthorne, to Sir William Cavendish. A feast is held first Sunday in July.

CHARITIES.—Hardwick School.—Thomas Whitehead, in 1720, gave his dwelling at Moor Heigh, with 20A. of land, then valued at £8 per annum, on trust, and directed 10s. a year to be expended in books, and the remainder to be given to the schoolmaster. The property consists of a good farm house, and 21A. 1R. 9P. of land, let for £23 15s 2d. per annum, the whole of which is paid to the schoolmaster. The master also receives £2 10s. from Phillips' charity, and an annual gratuity from the Duke of Devonshire. In respect of these sums, all the poor children of the parish are instructed on payment of two-pence per week. The school is kept in a house rented by the Duke of Devonshire, which has lately been adapted for the residence of the master, out of the funds of the charity founded by the Countess and Earl of Devonshire. (See Edensor.)

William Derry, 1794, directed his personal property to be converted into money for the use of the poor. In 1797, the sum of £59 8s. 10d. which was laid out in the purchase of £105 18s. 2d. three per cent. consols. The dividends, amounting to £3 3s. 6d. are distributed to the poor.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the vicar, is laid out in warm clothing, and distributed among the poor.

BARLBOROUGH, is a considerable village and parish, 8 miles N.E. from Chesterfield, 10 miles S.E. from Sheffield, and 2 miles E. from Eckington station; contains 3,268 acres of land and in 1851 had 177 houses and 933 inhabitants, of whom 495 were males and 438 females; rateable value £7,580. W. H. de Rodes, and E. S. C. Pole, Esqrs., are the principal owners and joint lords of the manor, which is freehold. Here are also several small freeholders. The northern part of the parish is divided from Yorkshire by a small rivulet, that runs into Pebley Ponds, which covers an area of 52 acres, mostly in this county. The turnpike roads from Chesterfield to Worksop, and from Sheffield to Mansfield, cross here at right angles. The Church, St. James', which stands on an eminence in the centre of the village is a large ancient edifice, with nave, chancel, north aisle, square embattled tower and five bells. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £10 1s. 5½d., now £750, in the patronage of W. H. de Rodes, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Martin Stapylton, M.A., who resides at the Rectory, a large handsome modern mansion, opposite the church. The tithes are paid by a rent charge. Here are 73A. 2R. of glebe land. In 1795, an act was obtained for enclosing the commons, and the award was made in 1798. The land has a bold undulating surface, with a variety of soils, and wheat and oats are extensively grown. There are several extensive collieries and ironstone mines in the vicinity, and lime burning is carried on to a considerable extent. Mr. Charles Brown, has extensive saw mills here for the manufacture of wood hoops, edge-tool handles, spade, shovel, tool, fork, and other shafts. Axe, adze, &c., and all other kinds of plain or fancy handles, ornamental turning, &c. The Mechanics' Library, (at Thos. Lenthall's), established in 1856, by Mr. Charles Brown, contains about 300 volumes of carefully selected books in various branches of literature, which afford the means for social, intellectual, and moral elevation. It is open to all classes, the subscriptions being 4s. per annum, a reading room is about being added, which will be supplied with both daily, weekly, and monthly papers, periodicals, &c. The late Mr. George Boaler left by will, the sum of £50 towards the erection of a Wesleyan Chapel here, but it has not yet been applied for that purpose. There are two schools in the village, both of which are well attended. The village is about to be lighted with gas. Here is an Hospital for six poor persons, founded by Margaret and Mary Pole, in 1752, and endowed with an estate now producing £72 per annum.—(See Charities.) Feast, first Sunday in July.

Barlborough Hall, 1 mile N. of the village, and near the verge of the county, is a spacious Elizabethan structure, with a semi-octagonal projection at each corner and in the centre, which being carried to a considerable height, gives it an imposing appearance. A beautiful avenue of lofty limes stands in front of the hall, and the noble trees, profusely scattered in the adjoining grounds, add greatly to the picturesque beauties of the surrounding scenery. It is the seat and property of William Hatfield de Rodes, Esq. The family of Rodes is of great antiquity and has flourished upwards of 600 years in the counties of Lincoln, Nottingham, York, and Derby. They are lineally descended from Gerard de Rodes, a baron who lived in the reigns of Kings Henry II., Richard I., John, and Henry III., and received great favours from each of them, and by King John was sent an ambassador into foreign parts. Balbro' Hall was erected, and became the family seat, from the time of Sir John Rodes, son of Judge Rodes. Sir Francis, his son, who was the thirteenth generation from the above Gerard de Rodes, was, on the 9th of August, 1641, knighted, and five days afterwards was created a baronet. Sir Francis Rodes, the second baronet married the daughter of Gervase Clifton, of Clifton, in the county of Nottingham, and died in the year 1651. Sir Francis Rodes, his son, married the daughter of William Thornton, of Grantham; he was succeeded by Sir John Rodes, his son, at whose decease in 1743, the title became extinct; his sister, Frances, married Gilbert Heathcote, M.D., whose grandson inherited this estate, and took the name of Rodes, and died in 1768, when his nephew, Cornelius Heathcote, Esq., who took the name of Rodes in 1776, succeeded to the estate, at whose demise, the estate again passed to a nephew, the late Rev. Cornelius Heathcote Reaston, who took the name of Rodes, from whom it again passed to a nephew, William Hatfield Gossip, who has taken the name of De Rodes, and attained his majority in 1785.

Park Hall, is an ancient mansion 2 miles N.N.W. of the village, the residence of Mrs. Middleton. Knitacre Hill, a farm, 1 mile N.E. Pebley Inn, 1¼ miles N., a noted Inn, on the ancient Sheffield and London road, near which is Pebley dam. Whitebrick Moor, 1 mile E.N.E., consists of a few scattered farms.

The manor of Barleburgh was given to Burton Abbey by Wulfric Spott; at the Domesday survey it was included in the same manor as Whitwell, and there were a priest, a church, and one servant; it belonged to Ralph Fitzhubert, under whom it was held by Robert, most probably ancestor of Robert de Meinell, one of whose coheiresses brought Barlborough to Sir Matthew de Hathersage; the coheiresses of Hathersage brought it in moieties to Goushill and Longford about the latter end of the reign of Henry III., and was held by those families for several generations. Anthony Wingfield, who had married a coheiress of Sir Robert Goushill, suffered a recovery in 1513. Thomas, Earl of Derby died seized of a manor in Barlborough, which appears to have been this moiety, in 1521, and was held by Edward Stanley, Lord Monteagle, his uncle, in 1523. Sir William Holles, some time Lord Mayor of London, died seized of a manor, which seems to have been this moiety. Queen Mary, in 1554, granted to Dame Ann Stanhope the manor of Barlborough, which had belonged to the Earl of Derby; Sir Thomas Stanhope sold this manor in 1571, to Sir Richard Pype, who died seized of it, with the advowson of the rectory, in 1587. Francis Rodes, Esq., one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, in 1585, purchased of the family of Selioke an estate, described as the manor of Barlborough, which had belonged to the Constables. Sir John Rodes, son of the judge, had a Chancery suit with Humphrey Pype, Esq., son of Sir Richard, who claimed to be lord of the manor, and asserted the estate of the Seliokes was freehold, but not manorial, and it is probable they afterwards purchased Pype's moiety. The other moiety passed with a coheiress of Nicholas Longford, Esq., who died in 1610, to a younger son of the Poles of Wakebridge, Park Hall, in Barlborough, which continued to be the property and seat of this branch of the Pole family till the death of the last survivor of two maiden ladies, in 1755. It then passed by will to a younger son of the Radborne family, and has since devolved to the elder branch. A survey, of the year 1630, describes three parks in Barlborough, containing about 400 acres.

CHARITIES.—Godfrey Godley, who died in 1629, left £30, the interest to be given to the poor. Since 1757, the yearly sum of £1 10s. has been paid by the Rodes family.

Christopher Slater, who died in March, 1649, left £1, to be paid yearly on St. Thomas's day. In respect of this charity, 5s. is paid by Mr. Rodes, and 6s. 8d. from another estate.

William Cooke, who died in 1640, left £20, the interest to be given to the poor. There are also various other benefactors, mentioned on a tablet in the church, of which the whole amount is £102, which appears to have been vested in two dwellings, and the Poor's Close, 3A. 2R. 23P., for which, till the enclosure in 1797, the annual rent of £6 7s. was paid. By the award, 15th September, 1798, an allotment was made of 7A. 2R. 3P. on Hollingworth Common, and set to the overseers of the poor, for the above premises; also an allotment was made to the overseers, in lieu of all their interest in the lands, of 3A. 5P. This land is now let for £10 per annum, and given in sums varying from 1s. to 7s.

George Sloter, in 1640, left £1 per annum. The owner of an estate here pays the above sum, which is distributed amongst eight poor widows.

Margaret and Mary Pole's Hospital.—By indenture, dated 11th October, 1752, the said ladies conveyed to Francis Bower and six others, a messuage and a piece of ground, to be for ever used as an hospital for six poor persons, with various other tenements and lands, amounting to 46 acres, on trust. Out of the estate at Froggatt to pay to each inmate, weekly, the sum of 2s., and provide for each two stack loads of coals, and out of the residue keep the hospital in repair. The Hospital, situate in the village of Barlborough, consists of six dwellings of two rooms each, and a small garden to each. The property now consists of 88A. 1R. 26P. of land, of which 33A. 3R. 23P. was an allotment to the Froggatt estate, made under the Baslow inclosure act, in 1824, let for some time rent free on condition of the tenant fencing it, but it will make a valuable addition to the charity. The alms people now receive 3s. 6d. a week, and twice in the year a load of coals. Mr. Rodes, in respect of a sum of £25, either given or left by will, by Mr. Heathcote, his half brother, pays 25s. annually to the alms people.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charities.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., is received by the vicar, and laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, which he distributes to the poor about Christmas.

Woodthorpe Hospital.—Poor persons of this parish are eligible to this hospital as well as those of Staveley.

BARLOW (GREAT) is a large village and parish, situated on a bold eminence, and commanding a most extensive view of the finely cultivated country, 4 miles N. W. by W. from Chesterfield, and 10 miles S. from Sheffield. It includes part of the township of Little Barlow, in Dronfield parish. The parish forms a romantic district of lofty hills and deep ravines, having some extensive and thriving plantations; the soil is of an indifferent quality, and mostly arable. It contains 3335A. 1R. 11P. of land, and in 1851 had 128 houses, and 636 inhabitants, of whom 342 were males, and 294 females; rateable value £2511 1s. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and principal owner, here are also several small freeholders. The Church, a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £6 now £98, has been augmented with £400 and £10 per annum benefactions, £400 Queen Anne's bounty, and £1,300 parliamentary grant. The rector of Staveley is the patron, it having been formerly considered a chapelry in that parish, from which it is separated by the intervention of the parish of Whittington. The Rev. George Shipton, is the incumbent. The Church, situated on an eminence on the S.E. side of the parish, is a small ancient edifice, with a square wooden turret, mantled with ivy, a little west of which is the parsonage, a good substantial stone building, situated within the township of Little Barlow, besides which, several other houses are similarly situated. In the church are monuments and other memorials to the Barlow family, but they are much defaced; one represents a Knight in armour, and is the tomb of Robert Barlow, who died in 1467. The manor of Barlow was held, with Staveley, by the Musards; it was afterwards in the ancient family of Abitot, a branch of which, on settling here, is supposed to have taken their name from the place. The family of Barlow, or Barley, possessed it for several generations. James Barley, Esq., sold it in 1593, to George Earl of Shrewsbury; the Earl of Newcastle purchased it of the Shrewsbury family in the reign of James or Charles I.; having passed by descent to his Grace the Duke of Portland, it was in 1813, exchanged with the Duke of Rutland for the manor of Whitwell. Feast, second Sunday in August.

Bole Hill, ½ mile south of the village, contains a few cottages and a boarding and day school erected in 1677, and situated on a commanding eminence having a beautiful prospect of the country around. In 1831 a good substantial stone house for the master was erected by the Duke of Rutland for the accommodation of boarders, which has since been enlarged at the sole expense of the present master, Mr. Edward Straw, who has occupied it for the last 36 years; the average attendance of boarding and day scholars is 55. In connection with the school is a library, established in 1839, which contains about 600 volumes. Mr. Edward Straw, is librarian. It was at Bole Hill that Montgomery wrote his poem "Bole Hill Trees." Barlow Woodseats Hall, 2 miles N.W. from the church, is an ancient and commodious farm residence, the property of Charles Thorold, Esq., and occupied by Mr. Robert Bradbury. The parish contains many other scattered hamlets and farms which are given in the directory.

CHARITIES.—Robert Mower, in 1775, gave a yearly sum of 20s., which is distributed about Christmas. The poor have also the interest of £5 given by John Mellor in 1735.

The interest of £50 given by Thomas Stephenson, in 1743, is distributed on St. Thomas's day amongst poor housekeepers.

Susannah Stephenson, in 1752, left 40s. yearly for the instruction of five poor boys. By indenture, 1781, a close in Newbold was conveyed to trustees for the school and the poor, supposed to be in satisfaction of the above donation. The land, about 3 acres, is let for £6 per annum, £2 14s. of which is paid to a schoolmaster, and the residue is given to the poor. A school was erected many years ago, and in 1817, a house for the residence of the master was built by subscription.

John Grashaw, in 1816, left the interest of £20 to be distributed to the poor.

The poor also have bread to the amount of 10s. per annum from the bequest of John Bargh.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in warm clothing, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

BEAUCHIEF ABBEY, an extra parochial liberty, bounded by the parish of Norton, on the W., 4 miles S.W. of Sheffield, and 3½ miles N.W. by N. from Dronfield, contains 780A. of land, and in 1851 had 24 houses, and 133 inhabitants, of whom 62 were males, and 71 females; rateable value, £850. The Church is a small neat edifice, erected about 1660, with reeded windows, double buttresses at the angles, and an ancient tower, which belonged to the abbey that formerly existed here. The living, a donative in the presentation of E. V. P. Burnell, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. J. Cokerton, M.A., of Dronfield. In the church is a monument to Elizabeth, wife of Benjamin Broughton Steade, who afterwards assumed the name of Pegge Burnell, on coming to this estate. On the monument is the figure of an old woman, craving charity at the door of a large mansion, from the steps of which is descending a lady with a dish in her hand, as if in the act to serve her. The poor beggar's stick lies on the steps besides her, seemingly to have been thrown there on the approach of her benefactress. The monument is of marble, and on the head are the arms of the Burnell family. About two years ago, a handsome stained glass window was put up in the church, representing the Resurrection of our Saviour, under which is the family vault of the Burnells.

The ABBEY OF BEAUCHIEF, or De Bello Capite, was situated at this place, in a little valley near the northern boundary of the county. It was founded by Robert Fitz Ranulph, between 1172 and 1176, and opened for the reception of an abbot and canons of Premonstratensian order, about 1183. They were also called white canons, from their habit, which was a white cossack, with rochet over it, a long white cloak and white caps. It was dedicated to Thomas a Becket and the Virgin Mary, and, from the former patron, has been supposed to have been erected in expiation of his murder, by its founder, who has been represented as one of the executioners of the proud Archbishop of Canterbury. Dugdale states, "That Robert Fitz Ranulph, lord of Alfreton, Norton, and Marnham, was one of the four kights who martyred the blessed Thomas a Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury." Bishop Tanner, also says, "Beauchief, an Abbey of Premonstratensian, or White Canons, founded by Robert Fitz Ranulph, one of the executioners of Thomas a Becket." The late Dr. Pegge, the learned antiquarian of Whittington, discountenances this tradition, —his arguments, however, being chiefly founded on the circumstances of the founder's brother being afterwards in great favour with Henry II., does not appear conclusive,— particularly when opposed to Dugdale, Fuller, Bishop Tanner, and others, who have written on the subject. The founder, besides granting land for building of the Abbey, endowed it with the Churches of Norton, Alfreton, Wymondeswold, and Edwaldeston, (Elvaston,) and the mill at Norton, with all the tolls of the business. He also granted lands in various other places. William, the son, and Robert, the grandson of the said Robert, were also considerable benefactors to the Abbey. The advowson of the Church of Dronfield, land in Brampton, and various tenements in Chesterfield, Brampton, Newbold, Boxthorp, Hasland, and Heath, also formed part of the endowment of Beauchief Abbey.

In 1487, the convent consisted of an abbot and twelve brothers. John Sheffield, the last abbot, surrendered the house into the King's hands, Feb. 4, 1536; at which time the clear, spiritual, and temporal estate of the abbey amounted to £126 3s. 4d. "At its dissolution it was valued, according to Leland, at £15 10s. 2d." On the 10th of April, 1537, Henry VIII. granted the site of the Abbey with the estate belonging to it, to Sir Nicholas Strelley, of Strelley, Nottinghamshire, for the sum of £223. The son and grandson of the founder were both interred at Beauchief, and it is most probable that the founder himself was buried here. Strelley Pegge, Esq., of Beauchief, in 1742, married Miss Mary Boughty, and was succeeded in his estate, by his son, Peter Pegge, Esq., who afterwards took the name of Burnell; he married one of the daughters of Wm. Milnes, Esq., of Cromford, but had no issue. He was succeeded by Broughton Benjamin Pegge Burnell, Esq., at whose death the estate passed into the hands of its present possessor, Edward Valentine Pegge Burnell, Esq., who occasionally resides at The Hall.

Smith Wm. Broughton, Esq., The Hall

BEIGHTON, is a parish of considerable extent, being situated at the north-east extremity of the Scarsdale Hundred, and of the county, bounded on the east and north by Yorkshire, having the river Rother on the east, and a small stream on the north, which falls into the Rother at the north-east extremity. It is a rich agricultural district, in a high state of cultivation, and contains 2,999A. 1R. 21P. of land, and in 1851 had 241 houses, and 1,123 inhabitants, of whom 559 were males and 564 females; rateable value £6,124 11s. 2½. The parish comprises the township of Beighton and the hamlets of Hackenthorpe, Birley, and Sothal. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor, and owns about two-thirds of the parish; here are also several smaller owners. The parish is intersected by the Midland, and the Manchester, Sheffield and Lincolnshire railways, both of which pass Beighton on the east, the latter has a neat station here. The Chesterfield canal also crosses the parish at its north-east extremity.

BEIGHTON is a large village, pleasantly situated on an eminence, 7 miles S.E. from Sheffield, and 11 miles N.E. by N. from Chesterfield. The approach to the village from Eckington is through a massive stone cutting. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is a large ancient structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and square tower, in which are six bells. In the vestry room, adjoining the chancel, are two flagstones with inscriptions in latin. In Bassano's volume of "Church Notes" is mentioned a monument to Edward Dowsette, who died in 1501. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £6 11s. 3½d., now £312, endowed by the patron in 1732, with £10 per annum, and in 1733 with £200, Queen Anne's bounty. Earl Manvers is patron and impropriator, and the Hon. and Rev. Thomas Erskine, M.A., incumbent. The Vicarage is a large and good residence, situated close to the church. The Reform Chapel is a small handsome stone building, erected by the Wesleyans in 1849, at a cost of £200, defrayed by subscription; it will seat about 130. The National Schools for Hackenthorpe and Beighton, situated about midway betwixt the two villages, was erected in 1854, and opened March 1st, 1855; it is a neat stone building, with a house attached for the master, will hold about 150, the average attendance being 60. The whole were erected at a cost of £800; Earl Manvers gave the site, (one acre), and the government granted £367 towards the cost, the remainder being raised by subscription. Here is an Odd-Fellows Lodge and a Funeral society. At the inclosure in 1800, the common land was exonerated from the tithe, and in 1840 the other was commuted under the act, when £258 9s. 6d. was valued as impropriate corn rent, and £187 0s. 10d. the vicarial.

Birley and Birley Vale form the western side of the parish, where, on the Mosborough road, the Wesleyan Meshodists have a chapel; and here is an extensive colliery, now under lease to the Sheffield Coal Company, from whence coals are forwarded to all parts of the kingdom.

Birley Spa, 4½ miles S.E. from Sheffield, has long been noted for its great efficacy. These baths were first brought into repute by a lady now resident in the neighbourhood, who taking a delight in bathing, often resorted here in her childhood for that purpose, previous to the erection of the first bath, which took place several years ago. The medicinal virtues of the waters becoming more generally known from numerous well authenticated cures obtained here, Earl Manvers, the owner, empowered a committee of four gentlemen to erect a respectable and commodious establishment, with seven baths, of various dimensions, for the use and comfort of the public generally, which was carried into effect in 1843. It is situated in a sylvan and rural glen, entirely surrounded by romantic hills, tastefully laid out and planted. Tea, coffee, and other refreshments are provided at the Spa lodging house, by the resident manager. The water has been analysed by Professor West, of Leeds, and found to possess properties of a very valuable nature; and many cures have been made since the present baths were opened.

Hackenthorpe is a village 4½ miles S.E. from Sheffield, noted as one of the ancient seats of the sickle manufacture, which appears still to rank high in that trade, about 30,000 dozens being made here yearly. Messrs. Thomas Staniforth and Co., are the most extensive manufacturers in the kingdom, giving employment to the principal part of the village, as well as many others in the neighbourhood, in the manufacture of scythes, sickles, reaping-hooks, &c. The Reformers have a small neat stone Chapel here, erected by the Wesleyans, several years ago, which will seat about 70. The Hall, 5 miles S.E. of Sheffield, is a large ancient mansion, erected in 1653, the residence of James Hounsfield, Esq.

Sothall, a hamlet consisting of a few scattered farms, pleasantly situated on an acclivity, half-a-mile N.W. from Beighton. Beighton Villa, a neat residence commanding extensive views, is the property of the Rev. Thos. Mountain, and residence of Mrs. F. A. Moad.

CHARITIES.—William Jessop, by will, 1666, left Thorn-Close and a tenement in Sothall, on trust, to apply one moiety of the yearly rent in apprentice fees, and the other for the benefit of poor housekeepers. The property consists of 5A. 0R. 20P.. About 1½A. were allotted at the enclosure in 1798. The whole produces a rental of £14 5s. per annum, which is given to the poor.

John Newbold, in 1699, devised certain lands at Handsworth, in Yorkshire, on trust, and directed 40s. yearly to be paid towards the education of four boys, and the residue to be distributed amongst the poor. The land produces an annual sum of £5 15s. 6d., of which £2 17s. 6d. is paid to the schoolmaster, and the remainder given to the poor on St. Thomas's day.

Godfrey Morton bequeathed £40, Richard Worrall, £20, and Seth Shipley, 6s. a year to the poor. The sum of £60 was expended in land called Salter Frith close, and certain lands in the Town Field, altogether containing about 6 acres, producing a rental of £9 per annum, to be distributed to the poor, but which we are informed is not carried out.

Robert Green, in 1712, after several contingencies, gave an acre of land, in the Mean meadow, for the benefit of the poor. By other documents it appears that a part of a close called Davy Gap, in the possession of William Hewitt, was exchanged for the Mean meadow, in 1733. The owner gives stuff for three gowns to poor widows, the expense of which is about 30s. The trustees had no power to make the exchange, but the 1A. 1R. 20P. in Davy Gap ought to be measured, and marked with boundary stones as belonging to the charity.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., sent to the incumbent, is laid out in warm clothing and given to the poor.

George Jessop, in 1768, left 40s. per annum, out of Foulish croft, for teaching poor children to read. The owner pays the amount.

John Newbold left 6s. a year, for the instruction of one boy, out of his messuage and land called Batesquare. Earl Manvers rebuilt the school some years ago, which stood on his land. The master altogether instructs 10 children free.

BLACKWELL, a parish and pleasant healthy village, 3½ miles N.E. from Alfreton, 7 miles S.S.W. from Mansfield, and 16½ miles from Derby, contains 1,668 acres of land, and in 1851 had 98 houses and 467 inhabitants, of whom 217 were males and 250 females; rateable value £1609. The Duke of Devonshire and the Dowager Countess of Carnarvon hold the manor jointly, and are considerable owners. John Slater Wilkinson, George Adlington, Edward Sampson, Henry Rowland, and William Downing, Esqs., have also estates in the parish. The Church, dedicated to St. Werburgh, rebuilt in 1824, is a handsome stone edifice, with nave, chancel, sides aisles, and tower, with three bells, and contains some ancient monuments to the Adlington and Wilkinson families; it formerly belonged to the priory at Thurgarton, Nottinghamshire. In the churchyard is an ancient stone cross ornamented with braids and knotwork. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £5 4s. 2d., now £101, has been endowed with £800 Queen Anne's bounty. The Duke of Devonshire is the patron, and the Rev. Thos. Leeson Cursham, D.C.L., incumbent, who has 1A. 2R. 3P. of glebe. The tithes have been commuted for £101. The lords of the manor, in 1835, endowed a school with £20 per annum, for which 12 children are taught free.

HILLCOTE, is a small village quarter of a mile S. of Blackwell, with a few farm houses and the hall, an ancient mansion half a mile S. of the Church, overgrown with ivy is the property of J. Wilkinson, Esq., whose ancestors have long held the estate, and their seat here, but which is at present unoccupied. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here.

NEWTON is a small village, half a mile N. of Blackwell. Scanderland, ¾ mile W., and West House, 4½ miles W. of Blackwell, are farm houses. The parish is noted for its collieries, which are worked by John Chambers, Esq. The feast is at Midsummer. Gilbert Holles, Earl of Clare, and Sir John Molineux, Bart. were lords of the manor in 1710. In 1742, the Duke of Newcastle's trustees sold their part to the Duke of Devonshire.

CHARITIES.—John Ludlam's charity.—(See Alfreton).—The annual sum of 40s., received from his bequest, is distributed amongst the poor on Good Friday and Michaelmas.

Samuel Boot, by will, 1736, gave to the minister and churchwardens a close called the Rail, on trust, that they and their successors should for ever, on the day of his death, and no other day, distribute the rents thereof amongst the poor. The close contains 1A. 1R. 13P., and the annual rent, £2 10s., is distributed at Midsummer.

Thomas Strutt, who died about 1790, left by will £25, the rent to be dealt to the poor on St. Thomas's day. This sum was in the hands of Wm. Butcher, a draper at Sutton, in Ashfield, who failed about 1818, since which nothing has been paid.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed amongst the poor about Christmas.

BOLSOVER is a large parish, and contains the townships of Bolsover and Glapwell, which together, comprise 5441A. 3R. 4P. of land, mostly a strong clay, with some limestone soil, abounding in coal and ironstone, and in 1851 had 378 houses and 1611 inhabitants, of whom 846 were males and 765 females; rateable value £5328 0s. 5d.

BOLSOVER is a large village, township, and decayed market town, situated on one of the highest points in the county, 6 miles E. from Chesterfield, 24 miles N.N.E. from Derby, 8 miles N.W. from Mansfield, and 145½ N. by W. from London. It contains 4702A. 1R. 5P. of land, and in 1851 had 357 houses and 1512 inhabitants, of whom 792 were males and 720 females; rateable value £4665 6s. 3d. The Duke of Portland is principal owner and lord of the manor, which is copyhold; and a court is held every three weeks at the Swan Inn. Thos. Walkden, Esq., steward. Earl Bathurst, the Duke of Devonshire, and others are also owners. The Church, (St. Mary) a vicarage, valued in the King's book £5 19s. 4d., now £111., has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £400 Queen Anne's bounty, and £200 parliamentary grant. The Duke of Portland is patron and impropriator. Rev. John Hamilton Gray, M.A., Rural Dean, incumbent. The Church is a large structure, partly in the Norman style, intermixed with the early English, with a tower surmounted with a short spire. It was given by Wm. Peverel to Darley Abbey, and confirmed by Wm. de Ferrars, Earl of Derby; it was afterwards appropriated to that monastry. The Earl of Oxford gave £10 per annum as an augmentation of the vicarage, in 1716. Attached to the south aisle is a mortuary chapel belonging to the Cavendish family, and contans two monuments to the members of that family, one of which, in the Gothic style, is to the memory of Sir Charles Cavendish, who died in 1617, and has his effigy in armour, recumbent on a mat, under an enriched arch, supported by Corinthian columns. Underneath is a recumbent figure of his lady, the heiress of Cuthbert Lord Ogle, and beneath her are the effigies of their children in kneeling postures. The costly marble monument of Henry Duke of Newcastle, who died in 1691, has a marble sarcophagus, supported on each side by Corinthian columns; it commemorates also Frances, Duchess of Newcastle, who died in 1695; Margaret, their daughter, wife of John Holles, Duke of Newcastle, who died 1716; Sir Charles Cavendish, brother of the first Duke of Newcastle; and Charles Viscount Mansfield, the Duke's eldest son, who died in his lifetime.

In April, 1854, the vault under these remarkable monuments was opened to receive the remains of the late Duke of Portland, he makes the fourteenth inhabitant of this family mausoleum. The others are, first, Sir Charles Cavendish, died 1617; second, Catherine, Baroness Ogle, his wife; third, Sir Charles Cavendish, their second son, died 1658; fourth, Charles Cavendish, Viscount Mansfield, eldest son of the Marquis of Newcastle, died 1659; fifth, Henry Cavendish, second Duke of Newcastle, died 1691; sixth, Frances Pierrepont, his Duchess, died 1695; seventh, Margaret Cavendish, their daughter and heiress, wife of William Hollis, Duke of Newcastle, she died in 1718, and her funeral was the last occasion on which this vault was opened, until the interment of the late Duke of Portland, who was her great, great, grandson and heir. The six other bodies contained within the vault are those of infants of various generations of the family.

In the chancel is the tomb of Huntington Smithson, architect, who died in 1648; with other memorials to the Woolhouse family, and Barkers of Norton Lees Hall. Lady Barker, relic of the late Sir Robert Barker, Bart., the last of this family, and heiress of Brabazon Hallowes, Esq. was buried at Bolsover, in 1806. The most ancient and remarkable object in the Church is a carved stone over the chancel door, representing the Crucifixion; it was pronounced by the Archeological Association, on their visit to Bolsover, in 1851, to be Saxon, "pre-Norman." In the Church is an ancient sculptured stone, placed within the rails of the communion table; it is five feet long by three feet wide, and was discovered in the early part of the last century, previous to which it had been a step to the north door of the Church. On the under side of this stone is a rude sculpture in high relief, representing the nativity of our Saviour. The Virgin Mary appears to be sitting in a stable, with a multilated figure of the infant Jesus in her lap, who seems to have had one hand on a dove, three figures standing round the Virgin mother are most likely the wise men of the east, who fell down and worshiped the infant Jesus, and opening their treasures presented him with gifts, gold, frankincense, and myrrh. Two camels' heads are looking over into the manger, and the great projection of them seems very singular; the style of the drapery and other parts of the sculpture seem to attribute it to the 12th or 13th century, and it then was most likely an altar piece and held in high estimation. From the situation in which it was found, it probably was put there as a place of safety, during some of the frequent attacks which were made on Bolsover Castle.

The vicarage is a small house near the Church. There was a market at Bolsover as early as the year 1225, which was discontinued about the middle of the last century; but fairs are held on the last Friday in April and first Friday in October, for cattle and cheese, and a statues for servants is held on the first of October. The Wesleyan Methodists and Independents have each chapels here. In 1855 a National school for boys and girls was erected here in the Gothic style of architecture; it is a neat stone building, with a master's house attached. The parish was enclosed under an act passed 1777, and the award signed in 1780. Feast second Sunday in August.

The manor Belesover, which belonged to Leurie, was at the Domesday survey, held by Robert under William Peverel. It is probable that Peveril afterwards held it in demesne, and built a castle; for long after the forfeiture of this estate by Wm. Peveril the younger, for poisoning Ralph, Earl of Chester, in 1153, Bolsover castle is mentioned as being given with the manor by Richard I. in 1189, to his brother John, on his marriage with one of the Earl of Glocester's co-heiresses. On the agreement entered into between Longchamp, the Bishop of Ely, and John, the king's brother, then Earl of Morteyne, during Richard's absence in the Holy Land, Bolsover Castle was committed to the custody of Richard del Pec. Two years after John's accession, Geoffrey Luttrel was appointed one of the overseers of the expenditure of £30, for enclosing Bolsover Park for the King. In 1204, the government of this castle was given to William Briuere; Bryan de Lisle was appointed governor in 1207; Nicholas de Chevat in 1208. In the year 1215, it was in the possession of the rebellious barons, when William Ferrars, Earl of Derby, having raised troops for the king, took it by assault, and in recompense was appointed governor. The same year Byran de Lisle was reinstated in his government, and in 1216 received a mandate to fortify the castle against the rebellious barons, or if he found it not tenable to demolish it. The same year the King appointed Gerard de Furnival to reside in Bolsover castle, with his wife and family, for the better preservation of the peace of those parts. William Ferrers, Earl of Derby, was again appointed governor by King Henry III., soon after his accession (in October, 1216), and held the government for six years. During the twelve following years there was a quick succession of governors. In or about the year 1234, the manor and castle of Bolsover were granted to John Scot, Earl of Chester, who, dying without issue, it passed to Ada, his fourth sister and co-heiress who married Henry de Hastings, Lord of Bergavenny, having been assigned as part of her portion in 1236. Other lands having been given in exchange to Hastings, 1243, Bolsover reverted to the crown and was not afterwards in possession of a subject till 1514. Roger de Lovetot was made governor in 1253. Ralph Pipard was appointed governor of Bolsover and Hareston castle for life, in 1301; he died in 1308. Sir Richard Surry died seized of the castle and manor in 1395; Edmund of Hadham, Earl of Richmond, father of King Henry VII. died seized of it in 1456. King Henry VIII. in 1514, granted Bolsover and Hareston castles to Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, in reward for his service in the expedition against France, to be held by the service of one knight's fee, but on the attainder of his son, the second Duke, in the 38th year of the same monarch, they reverted to the crown. King Edward VI. in 1552, granted a lease of the manor of Bolsover to Sir John Byron, for fifty years, and the next year granted the fee to George Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, in whose family it continued till 1613, when Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury sold the the manor of Bolsover to Sir Charles Cavendish. Henry, second Duke of Newcastle, grandson of Sir Charles, dying without issue, the estate became the property of Margaret, his sister, who had married John Hollis, Earl of Clare, afterwards Duke of Newcastle, their daughter married Harley, Earl of Oxford, from whom by a daughter also, Bolsover was conveyed to the Bentincks, Dukes of Portland, in whose possession it still continues. Long before this the old castle had been in ruins, for we find in the time of Leland (about 1550) this ancient fortress was fast decaying. It was purchased by Sir Charles Cavendish, when it was in ruins and now not a vestige of it remains. The present mansion was rebuilt from the foundations of the old one, by Elizabeth, Countess of Shrewsbury, whose passion for castle building is well known, and was completed by her son, Sir Charles Cavendish, in 1613, after which it was transferred to him by the Shrewsbury family. The new castle was built exactly on the foundation of the Norman keep, which can be distinctly traced, and the character of a Norman castle was preserved throughout, so that it is a remarkable specimen of the Elizabethan restoration of an ancient Norman castle of the times immediately succeeding the conquest. The Bailey Wall, also was restored, on its exact original position and is one of the very few specimens of the Bailey Wall, of a fortress now existing in England, and as such it is an object of great interest to antiquarians. Sir Charles Cavendish died about two years after he had completed it, and was succeeded by his elder son, William, who, at the age of 15, was made Knight of the Bath; in 1620, created Baron Ogle and Viscount Mansfield; in 1628, Baron Cavendish of Bolsover, and Marquis of Newcastle-upon-Tyne; and in 1644, Baron of Bothaland Hepple, and Marquis of Newcastle; and in 1665, Earl of Ogle, and Duke of Newcastle. This loyal nobleman entertained King Charles I. with great magnificence at Bolsover, when he was on his way to Scotland, in 1633. The expense of the dinner was £4,000. Lord Clarendon speaks of it as "such an excess of feasting as had scarce ever been known in England before, and would still be thought very prodigious, if the same noble person had not within a year or two afterwards made the King and Queen a more stupendous entertainment, which (God be thanked,) though possibly it might too much wet the appetite of others to excess, no man ever after in those days imitated." The Duchess of Newcastle, in her Memoirs of her noble husband, expressly says, that this second entertainment was the year after the former, which the King "liked so well, that a year after his return out of Scotland, he was pleased to send my lord word, that her Majesty the Queen was resolved to make a progress into the northern parts, desiring him to prepare the like entertainment for her Majesty as he had formerly done for him; which my lord did, and endeavoured for it with all possible care and industry, sparing nothing that might add splendour to that feast which both their Majesties were pleased to honour with their presence. Ben Jonson he employed in fitting such speeches and scenes as he could best devise; and sent for all the gentry of the country to come and wait on their Majesties; and resigned Welbeck for their Majesty's lodgings. The whole entertainment was conducted in such a magnificent style, that the expenses of the second visit alone cost between fourteen and fifteen thousand pounds."

On the breaking out of the Civil wars, the Duke, owing to his attachment to the royal cause, was obliged to leave the country and reside at Antwerp till the restoration. The Earl of Newcastle being commander in chief of the King's forces for the northern and midland counties, placed a garrison at Bolsover, of which he made Colonel Muschamp governor. The Earl was at Bolsover with his staff in the month of December, 1643. About the middle of August, 1644, Bolsover Castle was taken by Major-General Crawford. The parliamentary writers represent it as having been well manned and fortified with great guns and strong works. It is said to have surrendered on summons, and that 120 muskets were taken in it, with much plunder. When the Marquis's estates, which had been seized by the parliament, were about to be sold, his friends in England made great efforts to save Bolsover and Welbeck, but in vain. Bolsover was purchased on speculation, with the intention of pulling down the castle and selling the materials. After part of it had been pulled down, Sir Charles Cavendish re-purchased it at a great disadvantage for his brother. The family portraits, by Vandyke, were preserved, and Lord Mansfield, after the death of his uncle, had Bolsover Castle some time in possession, but was unable to repair it. When the King's affairs had grown desperate, the Marquis of Newcastle retired to the continent, and resided chiefly at Antwerp, till the restoration, after which he returned to England, and in 1665 was created a Duke, as before mentioned. About this period, he retired from public life, spending his time chiefly in the country, "pleasing himself," as the Duchess in the life of her husband expresses herself, "in the management of some few horses, and exercising himself with the use of the sword, which two acts he had brought to an absolute perfection." During his residence at Antwerp, he published his celebrated work on horsemanship. A second edition was published in England, in 1667. After the Duke had a little recovered from the wreck which had been made of his fortune, he repaired Bolsover Castle, and occasionally resided there during the latter part of his life. Both the Duke and Duchess of Newcastle found great resources in literary pursuits; they were both dramatic writers and poets. The Duchess's printed works, which were chiefly philosophical, filled ten folio volumes, and she also left three more in manuscript. Her printed works are become rare, and few of them would afford amusement to readers of the present day, except her Life of the Duke. The Duchess died in 1673, the Duke in 1676; they were buried in Westminster Abbey, where a magnificent monument was erected to their memory.

Henry, the second Duke of Newcastle, who resided often at Bolsover, died there in 1691, and was buried in the parish church. Leaving no son, his estates devolved to his daughter and co-heiress Margaret, married to John Holles, Earl of Clare, who, in 1694, was created Duke of Newcastle. Henrietta, their only daughter and heiress, married Edward Harley, Earl of Oxford. Lady Margaret Cavendish Harley, heiress of the Earl of Oxford, brought the manor, or as it is called in some records, the barony, of Bolsover, to William, Duke of Portland, great grandfather of the present noble owner, William John Cavendish Bentinck, Duke of Portland. The barony of Bolsover and Woodthorpe was valued in 1641, at £846 8s. 11d. per annum.

Bolsover Castle stands on the abrupt brow of a steep hill, and commands some beautiful and extensive prospects, while it is a most picturesque object to the inhabitants of the surrunding country. It consists of two detached buildings, one of these, the Castle, is the restoration of the ancient Norman fortress. It is a square mansion, with turrets and a high tower at the north-east corner. All the rooms in the basement and first stories, are arched and supported on pillars. The Norman character is perceived in these pillars and arches, and some antiquarians believe that the tower portions of the pillars in the basement storey are original, and as old as the time of King Henry I. The kitchen, larder, and servants' hall are noble and lofty rooms. In the first story, the pillars next on the spot immediately above the pillars in the basement, are of a similar height, but of a more ornamented character. The arched roof of the drawing room, or pillar room, is elaborately and beautifully carved. The pillars in the centre are both elegant and massive, the wainscoting is walnut, richly carved and gilt, and the furniture of the room is made to suit the Elizabethan period; there is here a very beautiful statue (life size) of the only daughter of the Rev. John Hamilton Gray, in marble, executed in Rome. An ante-room, furnished with engravings and marble busts, conducts to the drawing room, which also is supported on pillars, and adorned with a profusion of beautifully carved oak cabinets, and gilded wainscot, from Venice. The dining room communicates with the entrance hall, which is also furnished with fine carved oak cabinets. The dancing and drawing rooms are about twenty-five feet square. The only large room in the house, is the Star chamber, on the second story, which is upwards of forty feet long, and has been fitted up as a library and museum; the former of which contains a very considerable collection of books, &c., but what possesses the most attraction, is the rare and valuable assemblage of Etrurican vases, which the Rev. Jno. Hamilton Gray collected in Italy, and which is considered to be one of the finest private collections in England; besides the collection of the Etrurican vases, there are also a number of interesting relics of the royal family of Stewart. The Norman Castle has always been kept in good repair, and during the last twenty-six years, that it has been inhabited by the Rev. John Hamilton Gray, M.A., (the vicar), it has been fitted up in the style of the seventeenth century, so that a stranger unacquainted with the story of the place, might imagine the quaint old carvings and curious cabinets, and chests, to have been actually the property of the famous "Bess of Hardwick," instead of having been collected during the last quarter of a century.

There have been various opinions concerning the date of the magnificent range of buildings which extend along the grand terrace, now unroofed and in a dilapidated state. Mr. Bray was of opinion that the apartments in it were fitted up for the royal visists before mentioned. Dr. Pegge supposes it to have been erected some time after the Restoration. Lord Orford was of the same opinion. The date of Diepenbeck's view of Bolsover (1652), decides the point, that the building was erected before the Restoration; it is equally certain that it must have been erected before the civil wars, indeed before the royal visit before mentioned, it being impracticable that the King and Queen, with their court, and "all the gentry of the county," could have been entertained in the mansion already described. From the slight manner in which the Duchess, in the life of her husband, speaks of the additions made by him to Bolsover Castle, it is a more probable conjecture that the great range of building, now in ruins, was built, as well as the mansion, which is now habitable, by his father. The Duke's additions probably consisted of the spacious riding-house, for the practice of his favourite amusement, the smithy, &c. During the sequestration of the estates of its noble owner, Bolsover Castle suffered much, both as to its buildings and furniture, but these damages were repaired by the Duke after the Restoration. It is certain that the state apartments were not dismantled till after the year 1710, at which time Bassano speaks of them as furnished, and describes the pictures then in the several rooms, which are said to have been removed to Welbeck. The portraits of the Duke of Newcastle on horseback, described by Bassano, are not now to be found there; probably they were in a state of decay. In the saloon at Welbeck is a very fine whole-length portrait of the Duke, by Vandyke; there is a whole-length of the Duchess of Newcastle, in one of the passages, in a fancy dress, by Diepenbeck. The gallery at Bolsover was about 220 feet in length by 22 it width; the dining room, 78 feet by 32; the two drawing rooms, one 39 feet, the other 36 feet by 33.

Bolsover Park, which was enclosed in the year 1200, has long ago been converted into tillage. A few years ago, when the venerable proprietor of this Castle, the late Duke of Portland, attended his 81st birth-day, a festival was held within the walls of this magnificent ruin, and on the broad terrace below, when no less than three thousand persons assembled to do him honour, on a spot which commands one of the finest views in England, and amid scenes, rich in some of the most stirring incidents in English history. In the distance the mountains of the Peak, the beautiful undulations of Scarsdale, the rich scenery of Sutton Park, the noble woods and mansion of Hardwick,—below the vale of Sutton, and above the battlements and turrets of the ancient Bolsover Keep, formed a picture of uncommon beauty. The terrace and tilt-yard, were thronged with groups in their gayest holiday attire, music and shouts resounded in the walls, and old Bolsover never saw such a stirring scene since the days of King Charles the First, and the loyal Marquis of Newcastle.

Bolsover was formerly noted for its manufacture of steel spurs and buckles, which were so admirably tempered, that it used to be said, a loaded waggon might pass over them without injuring them, and every ploughman and waggoner wore them. Tobacco pipes also formerly were extensively manufactured here, excellent clay being found in the neighbourhood. Both these sourses of employment are now extinct, and besides agriculture, part of the inhabitants are employed in the collieries and iron works in the neighbourhood. Hockley, a district, which forms the N.W. part of the village. Oxcroft, a small hamlet and manor, 2 miles N. from Bolsover. The Duke of Newcastle is lord of this manor, and owner of 458a. of land. Shuttlewood, a hamlet, 2 miles N.N.W. Here are the remains of a bath, of which the water is strongly sulphurous, similar to that of Harrogate. Stanfree, a small hamlet, 2 miles N.N.W. Whaley, a hamlet and small village, 3 miles N.E.; through which formerly a stage waggon went from this place to London. Woodhouse, a small hamlet and village, one mile N.N.W. from Bolsover.

Glapwell, a small village and township, on the Chesterfield and Nottingham road, 5 miles N.W. fr. Mansfield, 3 m. S. fr. Bolsover, and 7 S.E. from Chesterfield, contains 739a. 1r. 39p. of land, including woods, &c., and in 1851, had 21 houses, and 99 inhabitants, of whom 54 were males and 45 females; rateable value, £662 14s. 2d. Thos. Hallowes, Esq., is the sole owner, and resides at the Hall, an ancient mansion, on a bold elevation near the village. The manor (Glapewelle), at the Domesday survey, was held with Bolsover; during the thirteenth century it was in the family of De Glapwell, whose heiress, it is probable, brought it to the Woolhouses. Wm. Woolhouse, Esq. died, seized of it, in 1411. The heiress of Woolhouse, about the middle of the 17th century, married the the ancestor of the present proprietor. There was formerly a Chapel at Glapwell. About the year 1260, an agreement was entered into between the Abbot of Darley and his parishioners of the ville of Glapwell, about roofing the Chapel; they agreed to give five acres of land for the purpose of repairing, or, if necessary, of rebuilding of it. There was many years a Presbyterian congregation here. William Woolhouse, Esq., who died in 1667, gave a rent charge of £20 per annum to the minister. The Feast on November 12th.

Charities.—Richard Youle, in 1699, gave 20s. for a distribution of bread on Christmas day. Wm. Wilkson left 6s. 8d. a year to poor widows; and Francis Tompkin 10s. annually to the poor, which are distributed at Christmas. The poor have also 10s. a year from the bequest of Richard Johnson, (who also left 10s. yearly to the poor of Clown), and the interest of £10 from the bequest of Ann Stones.

Samuel Dowker, in 1738, left the interest of £10 for a distribution of bread.

Francis Leach is supposed to have left the annual sum of 3s. 6d., which is paid out of a farm.

Isabella Smithson, 1795, gave the sum of £2,000 to be disposed of as her niece, Ann Morton, should judge most proper for the benefit of the poor. The above sum, by a suit in chancery, with the interest due to August, 1774, was recovered and laid out in the purchase of £3,308 4s. 3d. three per cent. annuities, by a scheme approved of and confirmed by the Master of the Rolls; it was directed that £20 or £25 should be paid to four women in any year as marriage portions, provided they had resided four years in the parish of Bolsover at the time of their marriage, and the person with whom they should intermarry had resided there the same period. The remainder of the dividends, deducting £6 for the vicar for his trouble, was to be distributed to poor persons. No marriage portions have been paid, though some applications have been made, but regarded as not being qualified. The divideds, amounting to £99 5s., are annually distributed on Christmas day and on Easter Tuesday, among poor persons of Bolsover.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity. (See Bradley.)—The sum of £5 10s. received by the vicar, is laid out in woollen cloth and blankets, and given to the poor.

BRACKENFIELD & WOOLLEY formed a chapelry in Morton parish, but by an Order of Council, agreeable to the recommendation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, it was made a distinct parish in 1844.

BRACKENFIELD is a scattered village, principally situated upon an open green, 4½ miles N.W. from Alfreton, 7 miles S. from Chesterfield, and 18 from Derby. It contains 1494A. 3R. 28P. of land, and in 1851 had 82 houses, and 399 inhabitants, of whom 192 were males, and 207 females; rateable value £1795 7s. 7d. Thomas and Wm. Wragg, Esqrs., are joint lords of the manor and owners, but Gladwin Turbutt, Esq., is also a considerable owner. The Chapel, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, is a small ancient building, very rude and curious, with an antique rood screen, and at the end of one of the benches are carved the Arms of the Babingtons. A new church is in course of erection, about one mile east from the former, the site for which was given by Gladwin Turbutt, Esq., of Ogston Hall. It is a neat stone edifice in the decorated style, with nave, chancel, and north aisle, the cost of which was about £1400, raised by subscriptions, aided by grants from the Incorporated and Diocesan Societies. A tower or spire is intended to be added as soon as sufficient funds are raised. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £58, originally endowed with £32 per annum Queen Anne's bounty, has been augmented with £20 per annum by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and £6 Corden Fund. The rector of Morton is the patron, and the Rev. Thomas Openshaw, B.A., of Sherland, is the incumbent. A handsome National school was erected on the Green at Brackenfield, in 1845, with a residence for the master, at a cost of £450, raised by subscription, aided by grants from the Committee of Council and the National Society. The Midland Railway crosses the eastern side of the parish, and it appears is charged in the poor's rate, in all cases according to the traffic, the value of which is taken annually.

Ogston Hall and manor, one mile E. from the church, is the seat and property of Gladwin Turbutt, Esq., a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for the county. Road Nook an ancient hall, which is the manor house of Brackenfield, is the property and residence of Mr. George Wragg. The family of Heriz possessed Ogstone and Brackenfield, then called Brackenthwayte, in the reign of King John. Sir Richard Willoughby held Brackenfield under the Deincourts, in 1369. About this time Ogstone became the property and seat of the Revels. The sisters and co-heiresses of William Revel, Esq., who died in 1706, married Richard Turbutt, Esq., of Doncaster, and Sir Paul Jenkinson, Bart., of Walton, near Chesterfield. Mr. Turbutt purchased a moiety of John Woodyeare, Esq., of Crookhill, near Doncaster, who married a granddaughter of Lady Jenkinson. Feast, first Sunday after Whitsuntide.

CHARITIES.—£8 10s. is received from the rector of Morton in respect of Gisborne's and Turbutt's charities, which is distributed to the poor.

BRAMPTON is an extensive parish and small pleasant village, situated 4 miles W. by N. from Chesterfield. It contains many scattered hamlets and good houses; and at the north extremity the constablewick of Cutthorpe, the whole of which keep their poor conjointly, and for parochial purposes is divided into the Upper and Lower divisions. It contains 7920 acres of land, and in 1851 had 971 houses, and 4409 inhabitants, of whom 2202 were males, and 2207 females; rateable value £10,288 13s. The Duke of Devonshire is principal owner and lord of the manor, which is chiefly freehold; a part of Cutthorpe is copyhold. The Duke of Portland, Sir George Sitwell, Bart., and Robt. Arkwright, Esq., with several others, are also owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is a perpetual curacy, valued at £143, has been augmented with £200 benefaction, and £200 Queen Anne's bounty. Bishop of Lichfield patron, and the Rev. Wm. Peach, M.A., incumbent. The church is an ancient embattled stone edifice, on a bold elevation, on the north side of the village; it has nave, chancel, side aisles, and handsome low tower, surmounted by a short spire. The Parsonage is situate near the church, and has 20 acres of glebe; the tithes have been commuted; the large for £411 8s. 10d., and the small for £90 6s. 4d. A small school and residence for the master were erected here in 1830, towards which the National School Society gave £100 for endowment. (See Charities.)

Brampton Moor and New Brampton form the south-east portion of the parish. An act was obtained for inclosing the Moor in 1825, which now forms a populous district, adjoining to Chesterfield, where a district church, St. Thomas, was erected in 1830, and opened in 1831; it is a spacious structure, with a handsome pinnacled tower, and cost £2,930 4s. The living is a perpetual curacy, which the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have endowed, and the value, including pew rents, is £150; the Bishop of Lichfield is patron; the Rev. John Beridge Jebb, B.A., incumbent; and the Rev. John Jones, assistant curate, to whom the Pastoral Aid Society allow £100 per annum. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each places of worship here, and a National school has also been erected. The parish is about eight miles in length from east to west, and 3½ miles in breadth, New Brampton forming the east extremity. It is noted for its extensive brown earthenware and stone bottle manufacture, generally designated as Chesterfield ware.

Three manors are noticed in Brampton (Brantune) at Domesday survey, two of which belonged ta Ascoit Musard, the other to Walter Deincourt. The two former appear to have been united at an early period. This manor of Brampton was given by King Henry II. to Peter de Brampton, whom it is supposed was the second son of Matilda de Cauz, or Caus, heiress of the barony of Caus, by her second husband, Adam de Berkin; the grandson of this Peter assumed the name of De Caus. This family became extinct in the male line, about the year 1460; two of the co-heiresses married Ash and Baguley, or Balguy. The whole of the manor of Brampton, otherwise Caus-hall, became eventually, by purchase, the property of the Earls of Shrewsbury; it was purchased of the Shrewsbury family by the Earl of Newcastle; and was in 1641, valued at £142 4s. 8d. per annum. Having passed with other estates to the Duke of Portland, it was included in an exchange with the late Duke of Devonshire. Birley Grange formerly belonged to the monastery of Lowth. The abbot and convent of Rufford had lands in Brampton, which were granted by Henry VIII. to the Earl of Shrewsbury, and have passed with the manor. Brampton House, 1 mile W. from Chesterfield, is the property and residence of Wm. Claughton, Esq. Bridge House, ½ mile W.N.W. from Chesterfield, is the property and residence of Mrs. Rooth. Ashgate, an ancient mansion, formerly the property of the Clarks, 2 miles W. from Chesterfield, is now the property and residence of John Gorrell Barnes, Esq. Cutthorpe, a small village, pleasantly situated on an eminence commanding fine views, forms the north side of the parish, 1½ miles N. by E. from Brampton. The Hall, now a farm house, is a very ancient building. Linacre, formerly esteemed a subordinate manor, was the seat of an ancient family named Linacre. Somersall Hall, a venerable mansion, formerly a seat of the Clarkes, 2 miles S.W. from Chesterfield, is now the property and seat of Samuel Johnson, Esq. Three Birch, a farm and district, noted for extensive slate quarries. Watshelf, Watchell, or Wadeseel, which took its name from Wade, the Saxon owner, in the reign of Edward the Confessor, was given by the Musards to Beauchief Abbey. It is a small village, which forms the S.W. extremity of the parish. Wigley, a small village, ½ mile N. from Watshelf, was the original residence of the ancient family of Wigley. The scattered farms are named in the Directory. Brampton Feast is the nearest Sunday to St. Peter's day, and Cutthorpe Feast second Sunday in August.

Charities.—Brampton School, near the church, is endowed with the following benefactions, viz.:—£1 per annum is received as the rent of half an acre of land awarded at the enclosure. In 1679, Peter Calton left 10s. per annum; Robert Sutton, 20s.; John Watkinson, 40s.; Sir Gilbert Clarke, £2 6s.; John Akerode, £1 10s.; Henry Glossop, 20s.; and Dorothy Heath the interest of £40. In consideration of these sums, the master instructs 16 children free.

Sir Gilbert Clarke, in 1701, gave his lands at Harwood, in Bakewell parish, upon trust, to apply one third of the rents to the minister of Brampton, one third towards the support of a schoolmaster, and the remaining third part in apprentice fees. By an old book, the property of the charity is stated to be £110, of which £106 17s. was laid out in £200 three per cent. consols, and the residue, £3 3s., was in the hands of William Peach. The dividends amount to £6 3s. per annum; of this sum, £2 6s. is paid to the minister, £1 6s. 8d distributed in bread, and the rest carried to a fund for clothing the poor. We conceive the income should be disposed of in accordance with the donor's intentions.

Henry Glossop, in 1748, left 20s. per annum to the schoolmaster, 10s. for a distribution of bread, and 2s. 6d. a year to the clerk for repairing his tomb.

John Wilcockson, in 1718, left the interest of £30 to the poor. Nathaniel Newbold, the interest of £20 to the minister for preaching a sermon on Easter Tuesday; and Joshua Hibbert, 10s. for a sermon on the same day, and 5s. to be given in bread. The poor have also the benefit of £10 left by John Memott, £10 by Richard Kindar, and £5 left by Samuel Tomlinson. These sums, amounting to £90, were invested in land, producing a rental £6 13s. 4d., of which £1 8s. 6d. is paid to the minister, £2 6s. 6d. is laid out in blankets and clothes, and 5s. in bread for the poor.

John Akrode, in 1705, gave £300 upon trust, to be invested in land, out of the profits thereof 20s. to be given for the education of two boys, 50s. to be expended in bread for the poor, and the overplus to be paid to the minister. A sum of £1 10s. is now paid to the schoolmaster, £2 10s. for a distribution of bread, and the residue £9 14s. 6d., is paid to the minister.

George Milward left £10. This sum, with that of James Shaw's, John Akrode's, and a sum of £40 not accounted for, making £360, was put forth on lands and a messuage in North Wingfield, from which a rent charge of £16 per annum is paid, and given as above.

Godfrey Foljambe's Charity.—(See Chesterfield.)—The scale of division, according to the population, recommended by the Commissioners, will give Brampton £33 8s. 10½d.

James Shaw, of London, in 1630, devised certain premises at West Smithfield, charged with £20 for the following uses, viz.—£5 to the aged poor, £14 for apprentice fees, 10s. for a sermon in the church on the day of distribution, 2s. each to the churchwardens and parish clerk, and the remaining 4s. to be spent by such ancient parishioners as should be present.

The sum of £100 was received as a fine on a lease, and vested on turnpike security. The income is now £23 12s. 6d.. of which £17 12s. 6d. is paid in apprentice fees, £5 to the poor, 10s. for a sermon on St. Thomas's day, and 10s. to the clerk and churchwardens for refreshments.

Henry Hatley, in 1592, left a rent charge of 20s. per annum, which is paid in respect of a farm at Dog Hole, and distributed on Christmas eve.

Anthony Boote, in 1712, devised a messuage and lands with the payment of 20s. yearly, to be distributed to 40 poor persons in the church porch on the 1st of January. The amount is paid by the owner of the estate.

John Belfit, in 1725, left 5s., charged on a field in Whittington, to be given in bread.

George Wilkes, it is stated, gave £10 to the minister for preaching a sermon on St. Thomas's day, and £5 for the poor, but we have not got any further information respecting it.

William Andrew left £20 for the poor of the parish; 18s. is paid as the interest, and distributed in bread on Christmas day.

Elizabeth Tomlinson, in 1779, directed her executors to place out the sum of £600, and pay the interest in the same manner as Foljambe's charity. The interest £24, is distributed in sums varying from 2s. to 5s. to poor persons.

Ann Stevenson, in 1743, gave to the poor of the hamlet of Watshelf £5, for which 5s. as interest, is distributed to poor widows.

BRIMINGTON, parish and large village, formerly a chapelry belonging to Chesterfield, but by order of council, 3rd September, 1844, was made a distinct parish for all civil and ecclesiastical purposes. It is pleasantly situated on the Barlborough road, 2 miles N.E. from Chesterfield, and contains 1522A. 0R. 25P. of land, and in 1851 had 243 houses and 1103 inhabitants, of whom 560 were males and 540 females; rateable value

£4014 14s. The houses are neat and modern built. Richard Barrow, Esq. is lord of the manor and owner. E. V. P. Burnell, Esq., Mrs. Susannah Heywood, Exors. of the late John Meynell, Esq., Col. E. T. Coke, and Peter Hartley, with several others are also owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a neat structure, with nave, chancel, side aisles, a handsome stone tower, in the decorated style of architecture, with three bells, and has also a good clock, was rebuilt partly by rate and subscription in 1808; the tower having previously been rebuilt by Joshua Jebb, Esq., in 1796, and was raised in 1846, when the Church was again rebuilt and considerably enlarged, the cost being defrayed by subscription, aided by a grant of £200 from the Incorporated Society for building and enlarging churches, on condition that 365 seats should remain free and unappropriated for ever. It will now seat 572 hearers. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £10, now £102, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, £600 Queen Anne's bounty, and £1200 parliamentary grant. The vicar of Chesterfield is patron. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners impropriators, and the Rev. Frederick Arnold, B.A., incumbent. The Parsonage, is a substantial residence, erected about twelve years ago, a little W. of the Church. The Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists have each chapels here, the former built 1806 and the latter in 1835. The National school for boys and girls was erected by subscription, in 1840, towards which grants were obtained from the National School society of £62, and from the Committee of Council on Education of £75. The site was given by the late G. H. Barrow, Esq.; it is a neat brick building. In 1854, a library was established in connection with the school, and contains 250 volumes of well selected books; Mr. H. Turton is the librarian.

Tapton Grove, 1½ miles N.E. from Chesterfield, is a large handsome mansion, on the verge of an abrupt declivity, at the foot of which a brook bounds the parish; it was erected by Avery Jebb, Esq., and is surrounded with a park, it is the property of Godfrey Meynell, Esq. (a minor), and seat of Mrs. S. B. Meynell. The Hall situate at the S. of the village is an ancient mansion, and formerly belonged to Major General Gell, who was one of Cromwell's officers; it is now the property of Colonel E. T. Coke, and seat of Capt. S. C. Wilmot. The manor of Brimington was formerly an appendage of Newbold and was successively in the families of Breton, Loudham, and Foljambe; it was purchased about the year 1800 of the Foljambe's by John Dutton, Esq., but is now the property of the Barrow family. The ancient family of Brimington became extinct in the time of Edward III.

CHARITIES.—Joshua Jebb in 1794, left £5 yearly, out of his real estate at Tapton, to five poor old women in Tapton or Brimington. The amount is given as directed.

Brailsford Charity.—10s. yearly is paid out of a farm at Lockerford, supposed to have been left by Elizabeth or Isabel Brailsford. The amount is given in bread to the poor.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £7 5s. is laid out in warm clothing, and given to the poor about Christmas.

Post Office, at Abel Toplis's, letters arrive from Chesterfield at 7 a.m., and are despatched at 7 p.m.

CHESTERFIELD.

CHESTERFIELD, an extensive market and Borough town, comprises within its parish six dependent townships, and is the head of an extensive Poor-law-union. It is pleasantly situated on an eminence, between the rivers Rother and Hipper. (which are at this place but inconsiderable streams), 25 miles N. by E. from Derby, 12 miles N.W. from Mansfield, 12 miles S.S.E. from Sheffield, 151 miles N.N.W. from London, on the Sheffield and London road. The Midland Railway between Derby and Leeds passes near the town on its eastern side, where a handsome stone station, with convenient waiting rooms for passengers, has been built; at Masborough, the railway is connected with Sheffield by the Sheffield and Rotherham Railway, the Midland Railway Company being lessees of that line, and have a station at Sheffield. The parish includes the townships of Calow, Hasland, Newbold with Dunstan, Tapton, Temple Normanton, and Walton, and previous to the 3rd of September, 1844, had the chapelry of Brimington annexed, which at that period, by order in council, was made a distinct parish for all civil and ecclesiastical purposes. The parish contains 12,012 acres of land of the rateable value, including the buildings, of £37,810, and in 1851, had 2,671 houses, and 12,318 inhaitants, of whom 6090 were males and 6228 females.

CHESTERFIELD is the capital of the Hundred of Scarsdale, and of the deanery to which it gives name, and is a polling place for the north division of the county. The township is of the rateable value of £18,379 14s. 0d., but contains only 212A. 1R. 8P. of land, having in 1851, 1455 inhabited houses, 58 uninhabited, and 12 houses building, with a population of 7,101 souls, of whom 3473 were males, and 3628 females. From an actual survey, in 1778, Chesterfield contained 801 houses, and 3,626 inhabitants. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and a considerable owner of property. The Parish Church, dedicated to All Saints, is an ancient cruciform structure, said to have been dedicated in the year 1232. Twelve years ago, the interior was restored at considerable expense, with open seats, defrayed by public subscription. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £15 0s. 2½d., now £357, and was, in 1817, augmented with £400 parliamentary grant. The Bishop of Lichfield is the patron, and the Rev. George Butt, M.A., the vicar. This spacious structure is in the Decorated style of English architecture, with a square embattled tower rising from the intersections, surmounted by a lofty spire 230 feet high, which, from the peculiar mode of putting on the lead with which it is covered, though perfectly upright, appears in every direction in which it is viewed, to incline considerably from the perpendicular. The east window is a fine composition in the latter style, and a beautiful screen and rood-loft ornaments the south transept; the chancel and nave contain some antique monuments in memory of the Foljambes and others, with several effigies in the attitude of prayer. There was anciently a guild at Chesterfield, dedicated to St. Mary and the Holy Cross, valued at £19 per annum. It was established in the time of King Henry II., who maintained two or three priests here; it also appears by an inscription, that before the year 1500, there was a chantry belonging the Church. In 1100, William Rufus gave the Church to the Dean of Lincoln. In the town were three chapels, St. Thomas's was situate in Holywell street, now in small dwellings, St. Helen's on the site of the Grammar school, and St. James's at Lord's Mill bridge. At Old Spital there was a house for leperous persons, founded in the 10th of Richard I.; these, with the Endowed chapel and chantry, were swept away at the dissolution of the monasteries, in the reign of Henry VIII.

By the death of the late Dean of Lincoln, the patronage of the church, agreeable to the plans of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, is now vested in the Bishop of Lichfield, the rectorial manor and tithes are in the hands of the Commissioners for ecclesiastical improvements. A memorandum in the parish register, dated 1586, notices "the great plague began in Chesterfield." In the months of June and July of the following year, 106 persons were carried off by this awful scourge, which seems to have disappeared during the succeeding winter. In March, 1608, it again made its appearance, but after May it seems gradually to have subsided. The Church register notices that the assizes were held here 15th and 16th March, when five men and one woman suffered the extreme penalty of the law. The assizes were held here owing to the plague being at that time prevalent in Derby. In 1662, the Rev. John Billingsley, M.A., and his curate, the Rev, James Ford, were ejected for nonconformity. In 1756, the church organ was erected at a cost of £500. In 1820, a new peal of ten bells was put up, which cost upwards of £500. A sum of £350 was expended in 1824, in sundry dwelling houses and gardens, on the north side of the church, which were taken down and the space added to the church yard. The church clock was erected in 1836, at a cost of £352, raised by a rate. On the 17th May, 1837, the first-stone of Holy Trinity Church was laid by his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, who gave the land for the site. It is a neat Gothic structure, with tower, surmounted with pinnacles, capable of accommodating 1,000 persons, and cost £3,300, of which sum £500 was obtained from the Diocesan Society, and the remainder was raised by voluntary subscriptions; a considerable surplus was applied towards the endowment. The patronage is vested in trustees, the vicar of Chesterfield being one. The Rev. Alexander Poole is the incumbent. It constitutes an ecclesiastical district, taking the parts of Chesterfield, Newbold, and Tapton, surrounding the church.

The Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, Salter gate, was erected about the year 1795, and was considerably enlarged in 1822. The interior is neat, and well fitted up with galleries.

The Primitive Methodist Chapel, Bectwell street, is a neat brick building, erected in 1848.

The Independent Chapel, Soresby street, a handsome stone building, 60ft. by 42ft., erected in 1822, is surrounded by a burial ground, convenient school rooms, and vestry adjoins, and galleries were added in 1834, at an expense of £310. It will seat about 700 persons; the Rev. Robt. W. Selbie, is the pastor. The Independents have also a chapel in South place, formerly possessed by the Baptists.

The General Baptist Chapel is situated in Soresby street.

The Friends' Meeting House, Salter gate, a plain stone building, erected in 1770, and enlarged in 1800; a small burial ground is attached.

The Unitarian Chapel, Salter gate, was built in 1694, by Cornelius Clarke, Esq., of Norton, at an expense of £229 10s., who vested it in trustees, to be used as a place of worship for Dissenting Protestants. He also bequeathed £80 towards purchasing a house for the minister, some addition to this sum was made by the congregation, and the whole laid out upon a house in St. Mary's gate; the Rev. Alfred Turner Blythe is pastor.

The Wesleyan Free Church, Elder yard, erected in 1855, at a cost of about £700, is a neat Gothic stone building, capable of seating 420 persons, but galleries are about to be added to increase the accommodation to 500.

The Catholic Chapel, Spencer street, built in 1854, is a neat Gothic building, which will afford accommodation to about 1,400 persons. A house for the priest, and schools are to be added as soon as sufficient funds are raised.

Religious Institutions, which have for their object the promotion of Christian Knowledge, are liberally supported, the members of the Church and the Dissenting communities each subscribe to their respective Bible, Missionary, and Tract Societies. The depository of the Bible Society, and that of the Tract Society, is at Mr. Cornelius Gallimore's, Irongate; and the depository of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, at Mr. John Bush's, Market place.

Subscription Library, at Mr. John E. Roberts's, High street, established 1791, is supported by an annual subscription of one guinea; the entrance money is two guineas and a half; the Library contains about 1,500 volumes: and in 1831, Mr. Roberts established a News Room in connection with the same.

The Free Grammar, or St. Helen's School, situated on the Sheffield road, was founded by Queen Elizabeth. It was rebuilt in 1710, and again in 1845, at an estimated cost of £2,037 10s., exclusive of the outbuildings; it is a handsome stone structure, with a residence for the master. (See Charities for the Endowment.) This school formerly stood high as a classical seminary, and in common with the schools of Ashbourn and Wirksworth has the presentation to two Fellowships, and two Scholarships, founded by the Rev. Jas. Beresford, in St. John's College, Cambridge. The Rev. Fredk. Calder, head master; Geo. Kirkland, second master; German Hirst, third master; and Mons. T. Borgognon, French and drawing master.

The National Schools, (Trinity) Soresby street, were erected by subscription, in 1814, at an expense of £811 5s. 6d.; about 85 boys and the same number of girls attend.

Girls School of Industry, situated in Holywell street, was built by subscription in 1819. It is conducted on the British plan, will accommodate 150; average attendance 120.

British School, (Boys)—Hollis lane, is a large neat brick building erected in 1844, will accommodate 200, about 150 attend.

Infant School, Holywell street, was erected 1830, about 80 attend.

Victoria School, Vicar Lane, was erected in commemoration of the visit of her Majesty Queen Victoria, in December, 1844; about 200 children attend. Here are Sunday schools belonging to the Churches, and all the principal places of worship.

Chesterfield and Brampton Mechanics' Institute, Packer's row, (but is about to be removed to the New Market Hall,) was established in 1841. The reading room is open every day, from eight in the morning until ten at night, and the library contains 1500 volumes. A discussion class has been established, and the institution is in a highly flourishing state, having upwards of 200 subscribers. Mr. Griffith Jeffreys, librarian.

Benevolent Institutions.—The Dispensary and Hospital, St. Mary's gate, is supported by subscription, and was established in 1800, but no building has been erected for its use. Mr. Cornelius Black is the surgeon. A Vaccine Institution was opened in 1814, the funds of which were incorporated with the Dispensary; Mrs. Harding left the sum of £100 in aid of the joint institutions, which is secured on the tolls of the Chesterfield canal. The Benevolent Society, established 1826, affords pecuniary relief and religious instruction to the sick and poor. The District Visiting Society is supported wholly by members of the Established Church. The Wesleyan Dorcas Society has existed since 1822, and in connection with the Independent Chapel is a Lying-in-charity.

Alms Houses, in Salter gate and in the Church yard, are noticed with the charities.

Places of Amusement.—The Theatre, a small brick building, situated in a yard at the bottom of the Market place, is the property of the Corporation.

The Alma Concert Hall is situated in Froggatts yard, Low Pavement, and is open every Monday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. Mr. James Clayton Slack, proprietor.

The Races are held on Whittington Common, about a mile from the town. They are well supported by the nobility and gentry in the neighbourhood, and are generally held about the end of September. A New Stand was erected in 1830.

Assemblies are occasionally held at the Angel Inn.

Baths, erected by the Corporation, in 1825-6, are situated ¼ mile from the town, and are conducted by Mr. Charles Kinder.

The North Derbyshire Agricultural Society, established 1819, hold their meetings alternately at Chesterfield and Bakewell. Mr. Paul Bright, Sheffield, secretary and treasurer.

County Court.—The New Small Debt Act, or County Courts. This important Act which superseded the Court of Requests, came into operation on the 15th March, 1847. Chesterfield County Court is held at the Town Hall, Market place, monthly, and comprises the following district, viz.—Barlow (Great,) Bolehill, Moor Hall, Wilday Green, Barlow (Little) Bolsover, Bolsover Woodhouse, Oxcroft, Stanfree, Whaley, Brampton, Ashgate, Brampton Moor, Cutthorpe, Eastmoor, Freebirch, Hen Park, Holymoorside, Loads, Loadshead, New Brampton, Overgreen, Pratt Hall, Riddings, Watshelf, Brimington Common, Wheeldon Mill, Calow, Chesterfield, Clay Lane, Clay Cross, Danesmoor, Holmegate, New Market, Coal Aston, Dronfield, Cowley, Hill Top, Mickley, Stubley, Summerwood, Woodhouse, Eckington, Bolehill, Ford, High Lane, Marsh Lane, Mosborough, Mosborough Moor, Renishaw, Ridgway, Spinkhill, Troway, White Lane, Hasland, Corbriggs, Grassmoor, Heath, Holmesfield, Cartledge, Lydgate, Millthorpe, Unthank, Killamarsh, Church Town, Forge, Gander Lane, Nethergreen, Netherthorpe, Thorpe (Upper,) Thorpe West, Newbold, Dunstan, Littlemoor, Newbold moor, Stonegravels, North Wingfield, Lings, Williamthorpe, Staveley, Devonshire Terrace, Hague Lane, Hollinwood Common, Inkersall, Marsden moor, Middle Handley, Thorpe (Nether,) Norbriggs, Railway Terrace, Speedwell Terrace, Woodthorpe, West Handley, Sutton-cum-Duckmanton, Far Duckmanton, Temple Normanton, Tapton, Tupton, Unstone, Apperknowle, Hundall, Walton, Slatepit Dale, Woodthorpe by Tupton, Wingerworth, Whittington, Sheepbridge, Whittington Moor. The Municipal Hall is situated in South street, and is a large neat stone building, erected 1849, by the Corporation. Petty Sessions for the borough are held every other Saturday.

The Town Hall, under which is the borough gaol, for debtors, is a large stone building in the Market place. It was built about 1790, by the late Duke of Devonshire. The summer Quarter Sessions, and a Petty Session every second and fourth Monday are held in it.

Savings' Bank, Burlington street, was established 1816, and in November, 1855, had deposits amounting to £56,655, with 2093 depositors, of whom the respective balances of 1168 did not exceed £20, 560 not exceeding £50; 240 not exceeding £100; 69 not exceeding £150, and 34 that did not exceed £200; and one that exceeded £200. Of the number of depositors, 11 are Charitable and 10 Friendly Societies. Mr. Peter Redfern, actuary. The bank is open on Saturday, from 2 to 4 o'clock, and on Monday evenings, from 7 to 8 o'clock. The Penny Bank is open from 6 to 8 o'clock on Saturday evening. The Stamp Office is at Mrs. Ann Walton's, Low Pavement.

The Water Works and Gas Light Company, established in 1826, with a capital of £10,000, in £25 shares, which was increased in 1855 to £38,000, by the creation of 720 new shares. The Gas Works, situated in Port House lane, have been recently enlarged, and contain two gasometers, capable of holding 120,000 cubic feet of gas, and 40 retorts. The Water Works consisted originally of only one small reservoir, at the top of Pot House lane; during the past year two additional reservoirs have been made, occupying together about 10½ acres of land. They are situated in the township of Newbold, one on the Holme brook, and the other in Newbold Back lane, on an elevation equal to the highest building in the town. Mr. Wm. Machin, managing clerk.

The Chesterfield Poor Law Union.—A commodious Union House was erected in 1839, in a healthy situation on the Newbold road. It is built of brick, at a cost of £10,000, and will accommodate 300 paupers. The present number in the house is 122. The Guardians meet at the board room every Saturday, at 10.30 a.m. The Union comprises 34 parishes, and embraces an area of 141 square miles, with 94,825 acres of land, and a population of 45,795 souls; the places comprised in the Union are Ashover, Barlow Great, Barlow Little, Bolsover, Brackenfield, Brampton, Brimington, Calow, Chesterfield, Clay Lane, Coal Aston, Dronfield, Eckington, Hasland, Heath, Holmesfield, Killamarsh, Morton, Newbold and Dunstan, North Wingfield, Pilsley, Shirland and Higham, Staveley, Stretton, Sutton, Tapton, Temple Normanton, Tupton, Unstone, Walton, Wessington, Whittington, Wingerworth, and Woodthorpe. The Registrars for Births and Deaths, are Robert Shaw, Chesterfield; John J. Hayes, Eckington; John Bassett, Ashover; William Siddall, Dronfield, and Olinthus Stevenson, Bolsover. Robert Shaw and Charles North, Chesterfield, are Registrars of Marriages.

The Chesterfield Burial Board, formed under the Acts of Parliament of 15th and 16th Vict. cap. 85, and 16th and 17th Vict. cap. 134, have purchased a very suitable site of land for a CEMETERY, at Spital, consisting of 6A. 3R. 30P., of which 3A. 0R. 10P. will be reserved for future requirements. The grounds have been laid out under the superintendence of Mr. Wm. Husband; and the chapels of which there are two, are under one roof, but quite distinct from each other. They are also exactly the same in size, while without marring the harmony of the whole, an individual character is given to each, by adopting the earlier and the later periods of the geometric style,—the former being that in which the Dissenter's chapel has been designed, and the latter that of the Church. The grouping of which with the Lodge has been carefully considered, so that with the prominent position it holds, it will be a pleasing object, either viewed from the grounds themselves or from a distance. The Spire, forming the entrance to the Episcopal chapel, is furnished with a bell, and the Lodge contains board room, with distinct entrance, as well as a door of communication with the registrar's house. The Reception, or Dead house, is a picturesque object, placed in a retired part of the ground, on the line between the consecrated and unconsecrated portions. The grounds are enclosed with a stone wall and iron railing towards the lane and main road, tressed piers flank the main approaches, and the roadways are closed by wrought-iron gates of corresponding design to the buildings. The total outlay is about £6,000, the repayment of which is spread over a term of twenty years. Robt. Waller, Esq., is clerk to the Burial Board, and Messrs. Coates and Burrowes were the contractors for the buildings.

Chesterfield Canal.—An Act of Parliament was obtained in 1770, for making this Canal, which was completed in 1777, the line having been surveyed by the celebrated James Brindley. By this act the committee were empowered to raise £100,000 in £100 shares, and to borrow £50,000 on mortgage of the tolls. The canal is 46 miles in length, and commences in the tideway of the river Trent, at West Stockwith, 4 miles N.N.W. from Gainsborough, and terminates near the N.E. extremity of Chesterfield, in Newbold township, where extensive wharfs and warehouses have been erected. It runs N. by E. from Chesterfield, following the vale of the Rother, crossing the parishes of Staveley, Barlborough and Killamarsh, and a small portion of Yorkshire, enters Nottingshire near Shireoaks. There are fly boats to Gainsborough, Stockwith, and all parts coastwise. Thos. Elliott, wharfinger, Canal wharf, Sheffield road.

At the Norman survey, Chesterfield was only a baliwic, belonging to the manor of Newbold, where it is named Cestrefield, but there seems to have been a castle here previous to this period. It is highly probable that the Roman road from Derby to York passed through this place, and that there was a station or encampment here. Though at the Norman conquest it was a place of small note and consequence, yet it must very soon afterwards have increased in size and importance. There was certainly a church here in the eleventh century, for William Rufus gave the Church of Chesterfield to the Cathedral Church of Lincoln. In the reign of King John, the town was incorporated in favour of William de Briwere or Bruere. He obtained from his sovereign, in the sixth year of his reign, a grant in fee farm of the manor of Chesterfield, with Brimnington and Whittington, and of the soak and wapentake of Scarsdale, paying yearly seventy-nine pounds. By this grant, the same liberties were obtained as were enjoyed by the inhabitants of Nottingham; likewise a fair during eight days, beginning at the Exaltation of the Cross, and two weekly markets, on Tuesday and Saturday. Baldwin Wake, by marrying the daughter of Briwere, obtained possession of the manor of Chesterfield. It afterwards became the property of the Plantagenets, Earls of Kent. In 1386 it was possessed by Sir Thomas Holland, and in 1443 belonged to William Neville. In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, George Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, was lord of the manor. It afterwards, by purchase, came into the possession of William, Earl of Newcastle, and descended, in the same manner as Bolsover, to the Duke of Portland; the manor of Chesterfield and the hundred of Scarsdale were exchanged by him, in 1792, with the late Duke of Devonshire, for some estates in Nottinghamshire. In one of the windows of the Church are the arms of Edward Plantagenet and Margaret Wake, impaled together, this shews that it was built as early as the close of the thirteenth century. In the reign of Henry III. the Church was made use of as a place of refuge by Robert Ferrers, the last Earl of Derby. It is said that as soon as this nobleman arrived at man's estate, he joined the rebellious barons against the King; with a view of quelling this insurrection, Henry, the eldest son of the King of Almaine, marched against them with a powerful army, and at Chesterfield, after a sharp conflict, in which many were slain, routed all his forces. The Earl escaped, and was at first concealed in the church under some bags of wool, but by the treachery of a woman was ere long discovered and carried prisoner to London, where he was confined three years, and being unable to pay a large fine, levied upon him, was deprived of his estate and Earldom. It appears from the register of the church, that the Earl of Newcastle was at Chesterfield with his forces, in May, 1643, and again in December, in the same year. It is not improbable that at one of these times he engaged the forces of the Parliament. But it is certain that during the civil wars he obtained a victory over them at this place.

The Glorious Revolution of 1688 is said to have owed its origin to the meeting of a few friends to liberty and the Protestant religion on Whittington Moor, near Chesterfield, when King James II. was endeavouring to assume arbitary power, and to re-establish Popery in this kingdom. In the early part of 1688, a few noblemen met by appointment on the moor, for the express purpose of devising means for rescuing their country from the double slavery with which it was threatened, amongst whom were the Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Danby, Lord Delamere, and John Darcy, son of the Earl of Holderness. In consequence of a shower of rain they adjourned to the village of Whittington, and finished their consultations at a public house called the "Cock and Magpie," which acquired from this circumstance the name of Revolution House, and the small room in which these distinguished guests held their conference, the plotting parlour. This house is still standing, and the arm chair in which the Duke of Devonshire sat forms a part of its furniture. On November 5th, 1788, the centenary of the revolution was celebrated at Chesterfield and Whittington with great magnificence.

King John granted to William de Briwere that Chesterfield should be a free borough, and enjoy the same liberties as the boroughs of Derby and Nottingham. This Charter was fully confirmed by Henry III. and enlarged by succeeding monarchs; but it does not appear that members of parliament were ever returned for the borough. The town, at an early period, was remarkable for trade, for with the charter granted by Edward I. was a guild of merchants, with all the privileges appertaining thereto. In 1594 Elizabeth granted a new charter to the town, under which the corporate body consisted of a Mayor, 6 Aldermen, 6 Brethren, and 12 common Councilmen or capital Burgesses, with a town clerk and other officers. Since the Municipal Act, which passed 9th September, 1833, the borough has been governed by a Mayor, 4 Aldermen, and 12 Councillors. A town Clerk, two Auditors, and two Assessors are elected as appendages. It is not divided into wards.

Trade.—The canal from Chesterfield to the river Trent, added much to the importance of the town, by opening a cheap transit to the east for the lead, iron, and earthenware produced in the vicinity. The Midland railway has now placed it in a very favourable position, opening communications for its iron, coal, and lead, and it may now be considered as the centre of an extensive and flourishing trade. This district is particularly noted for the manufacture of brown earthenware and stoneware bottles, known all over the kingdom by the name of Chesterfield ware. The trade is principally carried on in Brampton, Newbold, Walton, and Whittington Moor all within 2 miles of Chesterfield, and gives employment to a considerable number of hands. In the town is a silk mill, several hat manufacturers, two extensive lace manufacturers, and one for ginghams and checks; framework-knitting is also carried on to some extent; and Mr. Joseph Johnson, of West Bars, has a large herring curing establishment, the only one in the county.

The Market, held on Saturday, is well supplied with corn, cattle, and provisions of every sort. The market place is spacious, and situate on a declivity nearly in the centre of the town. It has seven annual fairs, viz., January 27, February 28, first Saturday in April, May 4th, July 4th, (for cattle, wool, &c.), September 25th, and November 25th, the last of which is a statute fair for hiring servants and is toll free.

The Chesterfield Market Company was formed in 1853, for the purpose of providing a suitable building for the accommodation of the numerous merchants, factors, and farmers who are in the usual habit of attending this market, and also to supply a deficiency which has long been felt, in the want of a suite of rooms applicable for all the requirements of this large and improving district, and commensurate with the importance and prosperity of this flourishing town. The Company was incorporated by Act of Parliament, 17 and 18 Vict., Sessions 53 and 56, with a capital of £10,000, in £10 shares, and borrowing powers to the extent of one-third their capital, and commenced the present Market Hall, which stands about the centre of the Market-place, (an open area of about three acres,) in July, 1855; it is a noble brick building in the Roman Italian style, with stone cornice, quoins, and window dressings, 55 yards long, and 30 feet wide, including a Corn Exchange at the western end, occupying an area of 290 square feet, covered with glass; a covered Market in the centre, 25 feet high, and occupying 450 square feet, which is surrounded on the north, south, and east sides by shops, above which, on the south side are private offices, and on the north and east is the Public Room and Session Court, which is 70 feet long, 31 feet 9 inches wide, and 27 feet in height. This noble room is lighted by five large windows, each 16 feet by 6 feet, and two smaller ones; the ceiling is coved, and so arranged as specially to adapt it for musical purposes, and in an evening will be lighted by three powerful sun-burner lights, containing each about 20 jets of gas. The other accommodation provided in this splendid building are rooms set apart respectively for a Town Library, Mechanics' Institution, magistrates, and billiards, each 22 feet 6 inches square, and 14 feet high. The east front of the building is ornamented with a tower, 100 feet high, furnished with a clock and bell, and at the south-west angle of the building is a convenient residence for the keeper. The total cost of the building, including the requisite internal fittings, was about £8,000. Messrs. Davies and Tew, of Chesterfield, were the architects, on whom it reflects great credit. Messrs. Shipton and Hallewell, are the solicitors to the Company; and Mr. Geo. Wallis, secretary.

Rivers.—The river Ibber or Hipper is chiefly composed of the Somershall brook, which rises in the mountainous districts of Holy Moor Side, and is increased by various rivulets which flow from the moorlands that enclose its spring through a part of Walton to Brampton, and after receiving the Holme or Linacre water, it assumes the name of Hipper, runs close by the south side of the town, and has its confluence with the Rother on the south-east. The river Rother is said to have had its name from Rud-whr (red water), probably from its being impregnated with iron in some parts of its channel; it rises from Rother spring, in the village of Pilsley, and then runs to Padley Wood, by North Wingfield church, and joins the Hipper at Chesterfield; it then takes a north-easterly direction, and enters Yorkshire between Killamarsh and Beighton, and passing Rotherham, has its confluence with the Don.

CHARITIES.—The Grammar School was established under the authority of a charter of Queen Elizabeth, and vested in the mayor, aldermen, brethren, and capital burgesses. A school-house, garden, and about five acres of land, are supposed to have been appropriated at the time of the foundation to the use of the master. These premises are of the estimated value of £45 per annum, subject to a chief rent of £2 10s. The school is also endowed with an annual sum of £13 6s. 8d., from the bequest of Godfrey Foljambe; Lingard's gift, £8.; Large's gift, £7 7s. 11d.; Clarke's gift, £15 to the head master, and £15 to the under master; and £1 7s. the gift of Leonard Gill, making a total of £100 per annum. There are also five pews on the organ loft of the parish church, appropriated to the use of the master and scholars, all of which are now let. The head master is appointed by the mayor and aldermen, subject to the approval of the Archbishop of York and the lord of the manor of Norton, in the latter of whom is vested the appointment of under master. Instruction is confined to Latin and Greek, and it was formerly a school of some reputation; however, in 1794 the scholars were reduced to nine, and since that period have scarcely even exceeded seven, and for some time there was no boy in the school, which may in a great measure be attributed to the want of sufficient attention on the part of the master, whose attendance seldom exceeded an hour and a half in the day. A suit in chancery was instituted in the year 1829, against the corporation, as trustees of the school; and in July, 1839, a decree of the court was obtained, by which the sum of £719 15s. 7d. was ordered to be paid to the school estate by the corporation into the Court of Chancery, with interest at 4 per cent. per annum, from 1815 to the time when the principal money should be paid into court. On application, the court allowed the principal to be paid by instalments, the last of which was paid in June, 1834, when the interest due from the corporation fund was nearly £700, and till that was paid, with the cost of the suit, no master could be appointed. The government of the school has been vested in certain trustees since the suit in chancery, Godfrey Foljambe, by will, 1594, conveyed to trustees the rectory and tithes of Attenborough, in the county of Nottingham, and all his lands and tenements in Ashover, upon trust, and directed the sum of £40 to be given to a lecturer at Chesterfield Church, £13 6s. 8d. to a schoolmaster for teaching poor children, £20 to the master and fellows of Jesus' College, Cambridge, £13 6s. 8d. to the masters and fellows of Magdalen College, Cambridge, and the residue for the relief of the poor of Chesterfield, Brampton, Wingerworth, or elsewhere within the parish of Chesterfield. The income derived from the above sources, after deducting £24 1s. 2d. for chief rents, land tax and fees, amounts to £401 15s. 10d., from which the fixed payments are made; of the residue it was settled in 1613, that the poor of Chesterfield should have one half, Brampton one-sixth, Wingerworth one-twelfth, and the other townships one quarter.

Theodosia Whinchester, in 1737, left £20 upon trust, for a distribution of bread amongst widows and others. In 1796, it was secured on the Chesterfield and Matlock Bridge road. The principal has increased to £31 15s., upon which interest is paid at the rate of 2½ per cent., and expended in bread for the poor.

Hannah Hooper, in 1755, bequeathed £3000, three per cent. consols, upon trust, and directed the dividends to be given towards the maintenance of six poor widows or maidens of the age of 50 years or upwards. The half yearly dividends, amounting to £30, are given according to the donor's intention.

Elizabeth Bagshaw, in 1802, bequeathed £2,000 three per cent. consols, on trust, the dividends thereof to be paid to poor decayed housekeepers in Chesterfield, at the rate of 20s. each. The sum of £1,880 three per cent. consols, now stands in the names of the trustees, the residue was probably sold to pay the legacy duty. The dividends are distributed in accordance with the testator's will.

Cornelius Clarke, Esq., of Norton, conveyed to the corporation of Chesterfield, a messuage and lands at Staveley Hague, upon trust, out of the yearly profits thereof £15 to be given to the head master of the Grammar School; £15 to an under master, and 20s. yearly to the poor. In 1797, part of the above estate was exchanged for land in Eckington, containing 9A. 1R. 22P.., and in 1804, the remainder was exchanged for 23A. in Hasland township, and 12A. at Brampton. A yearly sum of £3 2s. is received as compensation, from the Chesterfield Canal. Out of the annual income, £89 8s. 7d., the stipends of the head master and usher of the Grammar School are paid, and £1 for providing bread in respect of Allwood's charity, the residue is given with Bright's charity.

John Bright, Esq., by will, left £80, John Bright, Esq., his heir, £20, and the corporation of Chesterfield £100. These sums in 1738, were invested in land at Ashover, containing eight acres, upon trust, to apply one moiety of the yearly rents to a master to instruct 10 children, the other moiety may also be applied for the benefit of such master, with the consent of the mayor and aldermen, who may at any time withdraw the same and apply it to any other use. From 1799, a part of the rents have been given to the schoolmaster, except ten years, when the whole was applied to that purpose. The residue forms a part of the funds of the corporation. The lands are let for £12 10s. per annum. From the accounts of the corporation, there has been a considerable surplus of Clarke's and Bright's charities, which have become blended with the funds of the corporation. The amount of balances from 1799 to 1815, appears to be £719 15s. 7d., but it is submitted by the corporation that they ought not to be called on at this distance of time, and that probably the appropriation was made under the impression that they were entitled to the surplus. £30 per annum is now paid to a schoolmistress, who finds books and instructs 20 poor children.

Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury, by deed, 1591, granted a rent of £12 per annum, issuing out of the manor at Brackenfield, for the relief of the poor of Chesterfield. This rent charge is paid by 18 individuals, of which, only £11 0s. 0½d. appears at the utmost to be collected, the difference is supposed to arise from the deduction of the land tax. The amount is usually given in subscriptions to different institutions.

Francis Heathcote, in 1619, gave 40s. a year out of his lands, to the vicar of Chesterfield, for preaching two sermons in remembrance of him, on Michaelmas-day and Lady-day, he also gave 40s. a year to repair the church, especially the steeple. The land forms part of the property from which Taylor's charity is paid.

William, Earl of Devonshire, by indenture, 1655, reciting that he had given £20 for the benefit of the poor, Anthony Glossop. £20, Mr. Walton, £20, St. Peter Fretchville, £20, Sir Roger Manners, £5, and several other persons £25 for the same purpose, then in the hands of the corporation, to be by them employed to the best advantage, the amount was invested in land at Brampton, out of which £5 per annum was given to the poor. At a meeting of the corporation in 1796, it appeared that part of the land had been sold, but it was ordered that the whole of the rents should be applied to the poor; but from 1824. the amount of the rent has been carried to the account of the corporation, out of the funds of which, £5 is given for a distribution of bread at Michaelmas.

Thomas Large, by will, 1664, gave to the corporation certain houses and lands in Chesterfield, Newbold, and Calow, on condition that the Mayor should purchase or erect in Chesterfield a convenient house for three poor men or women of the said town, and pay a sum of £5 yearly to each inmate, and a gown of blue cloth at Christmas. He also devised his messuage in Chesterfield, and various other property, upon condition that one moiety of the messuage should be given in bread to poor people monthly, and the other towards the repairs of the church. The rents of the close called Porter's Pingle, and 20s. out of Brigg close to be paid to the master of the Free Grammar School, and the residue of the rents of Brigg close to the vicar, to preach a sermon on the feast of St. Peter, and the feast of St. Thomas. The rental of this property amounts to £86 10s., and is considered by the corporation as being held by them, subject only to the payments of £15 to the inmates of the alms-houses, a gown to each of the alms people, and a sum of £5 for such charitable purposes as they may think fit—usually given in bread; of the other premises devised, Brigg closes are let at a rental of £12 per annum, of which the vicar receives £5 for preaching two sermons; 20s. and the rents of Porter's Pingle are given to the master of the Grammar school.

Sarah Rose, by indenture, transferred to the mayor and aldermen two securities given to her of the sum of £100 upon trust, to pay the interest after her decease, half-yearly, amongst the poor women placed in her alms-houses; each inmate receives 1s. 6d. weekly, and a new gown at Christmas, with the letters S. R., on the right sleeve.

John Allwood, in 1665, left a rent-charge of 20s. yearly, out of Dunstan land, which is distributed to poor persons in bread.

George Taylor, by will, 1668, gave £120 to be lent from time to time to 12 young tradesmen on sufficient security, at 5 per cent.; of the interest £6, he gave £2 12s. for a distribution of bread—8s. a year for repairing the road from Durant Hall to the church—20s. to 40 poor housekeepers—20s. towards the repairs of the church—and 20s. to the vicar for preaching a sermon on Good Friday. If any difficulty occurred in young tradesmen finding sufficient security, he directed the amount to be invested in land, and the profits given as above. He further directed his daughter to bestow £120 in building 6 alms-houses, which he endowed with £16 per annum, £2 a year to be given to each inmate—£3 to be expended in blue cloth gowns—and £1 to repair the said houses, situate in Salter gate. Various conveyances have taken place, and the £16 per annum is now secured upon premises in Newbold, each inmate receives 1s. a week, amounting to £15 12s. per annum, (£3 12s. being added from Moore's Charity,) a gown every alternate year, and 1s. each for coals.

Francis Moore, who died 1716, devised two closes in Newbold, containing 4 acres; of the rents thereof he gave 52s. as an additional maintenance to two of the inmates of Salter gate alms houses, the residue to be expended in shoes and stockings and given to the poor. The land is let for £10 15s. per annum, of which £3 12s. is carried to Taylor's charity, and the remainder applied as directed.

Godfrey Wolstenholme, in 1682, gave the rents of a house to buy gowns or coats for poor persons. At the expiration of a lease, in 1819, the buildings consisted of 5 small houses, 4 of which were repaired in 1820, at an expense of £68 16s. 3d. In 1825 the corporation took down the fifth house, and erected 4 new ones, at a cost of £296 7s. 5d. to pay which, £257 19s. 10d. was borrowed from Clarke's charity, and £29 10s. 8d. from Foljambe's; for these sums interest is paid at the rate of 2 per cent. The four old houses are let for £17, and the 4 built in 1825, for £21 5s. The debt of the old houses has been paid off, and the rents are now expended in gowns; the rents of the new houses are reserved for paying off the debt.

John Sleigh, in 1624, left £200, to be invested in land, for the benefit of the poor. A further sum was left by Richard Taylor, and the whole, amounting to £260, was invested in land at Tapton, now producing a rental of £24 10s., which is usually distributed in sums of 5s. each to poor persons.

Richard Youle, in 1699, gave 20s. yearly, to buy shoes for poor widows; 40s. for a distribution of bread; and 20s. yearly to the vicar, for preaching a sermon on the 5th November. He also gave 17s. 4d. yearly, to be expended in bread, pursuant to the will of his uncle, George Youle. The corporation are possessed of a farm at Bolsover, probably surrendered to their use for the above purposes, now let for £14 per annum.

Nicholas Youle, in 1702, gave £68 to be laid out in lands, the rents thereof to be expended in bread and stockings, and distributed to poor widows. Premises were purchased but afterwards sold, and the proceeds with some additions £140 10s. is now secured on the Three Tuns public house, in Chesterfield, at 4 per cent.

Heathcote Family Charities, for the purpose of placing out apprentices, viz.: Ann Heathcote left £100; Josiah Heathcote, £200; John Heathcote, £200; Sir Gilbert Heathcote, £400; William Heathcote, £200; and George Heathcote, £200. These sums have been invested in lands in Baslborough, Snitterton, Darley, Matlock, and Walton, producing an income of £113 9s. which is expended in apprentice fees, with whom premiums varying from £5 to £10 are paid.

George Milward gave £20, which was, with other sums belonging to the corporation, invested in lands, a proportionate share, £1, is given in bread on St. George's day. This charity is also entitled to the sum of £6 13s. 4d. for timber cut on the estate.

Jacob Brailsford left a rent-charge of £2 out of a house at the top of the Market place, £1 to be given to the vicar for a sermon on Easter Tuesday, and £1 to buy 120 twopenny loaves, to be distributed to the poor.

Sir Godfrey Webster, by will, left £1,100 on trust, to be laid out in lands, the rents to be distributed to 40 poor inhabitants, in sums of 20s. each. This legacy appears to have been invested in the purchase of £955 12s. South sea stock. The dividends amount to £28 12s. 4d., of which £27 is usually given to 20 poor persons about Christmas. The balance was never carried forward to the next year until 1824.

Church Lands.—John Williamson, Richard Ashe, Benedicta Cams, John Caweson, and John Swede, bequeathed and enfeoffed lands and tenements for the repairs of All Hallows Church. The income now amounts to £27 16s. 6d., of this sum £26 11s. 6d. is carried to the churchwardens' account, £1 5s. being deducted for keeping the accounts.

James Milnes, by will 1678, gave to the corporation of Chesterfield, £20, the interest to be paid to poor people. He also bequeathed 15s. yearly out of a house, to be paid to poor widows, in sums of 6d. each. The house is stated to be vested in the devisees in trust, of the will of the late Joseph Graham. Nothing is known of the £20.

Leonard Gill, in 1742, gave £30 to the town of Chesterfield. 30s. yearly is received as the interest thereof, and distributed to the poor.

Ralph Naylor gave £20, and his son, Ralph Naylor, £40. These sums were secured on the Chesterfield and Matlock road, in 1760. In 1774 the principal was increased to £72, and by the addition of interest, in 1783, to £95 8s.; upon this sum 2¾ per cent. interest is paid, and given in bread on Good Friday.

Godfrey Heathcote, who died in 1773, gave to the mayor and vicar £60 in trust, to be lent to inferior tradesmen giving security for the same, at 2½ per cent. interest; no tradesman to have the money more than three years. The loans are made by the mayor and vicar as directed.

Anne Dean Uleyate, in 1802, left certain legacies to Chesterfield, and appointed Charles Kinder and Bernard Lucas and their heirs executors. We are informed by the surviving executor that the testatrix left no personal property, but that her real estates had been sold, and the produce invested in £6,000 three per cent. consols. It appears no claim can be substantiated, the devise being void, under the statue of 9 Geo. II.

CHESTERFIELD OUT-TOWNSHIPS.

Calow, is a small village and scattered township, pleasantly situated on the Clown road, at its junction with the Sutton road, 2 miles E. from Chesterfield, contains 1271A. 3R. 35P. of land, and in 1851 had 123 houses, and 571 inhabitants, of whom 279 were males, and 292 females; rateable value £1632 17s. Earl Manvers is lord of the manor and owner of about 900 acres of land. Mr. Wm. Clarke, of Chesterfield, is also an owner, besides which here are several small freeholders. The Independents have a neat brick chapel here, erected in 1837, which will seat about 250, in connection with which is a day school, erected in 1855, and taught on the British system. It is a small neat brick building and will accommodate about 100, average attendance 60; Mrs. Sarah Lofts is the mistress. The Primitive Methodist chapel erected in 1854, is a small neat brick building, which will hold about 100. A new day school was erected here in 1855, but is now discontinued. It is a small neat stone building, capable of holding about 80, it is occasionally used as a place of worship. It is in contemplation to erect a new cemetery for the township. This manor belonged successively to the families of Breton, Londham, and Foljambe.

CHARITY.—Elizabeth Wagstaffe left a rent charge of 30s. per annum, 20s. thereof to be applied in apprentice fees, and 10s. distributed to the poor.

HASLAND is a considerable and scattered village and township, 1 mile S.S.E. from Chesterfield, contains 1980A. 3R. 22P. of land, and in 1851, had 280 houses and 1176 inhabitants of whom 595 were males and 581 females; rateable value £7466 9s. The Duke of Devonshire is now lord of the manor and principal owner, it having been included in an exchange with the Duke of Portland. The Executors of the late B. Lucas, Esq, E. G. Maynard, Esq., Godfrey Heathcote, Esq., Exors. of the late Sir James Hunloke, Abel Smith, Esq., and J. G. Barnes, Esq., are also owners, besides several smaller owners. The Church, dedicated to St. Paul, was erected in 1850, at a cost of £900, raised by voluntary contributions, aided by grants from the Incorporated and Lichfield Church Building societies. It is a neat stone building consisting of nave, and cupola with two bells. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £40, with which the vicarial tithe of Chesterfield is charged. The vicar of Chesterfield is patron, the Ven. and Rev. Thos. Hill, B.D, Archdeacon of Derby, incumbent; and the Rev, H. J. R. Rathbone, curate, who resides at the Parsonage house, a large brick residence, faced with stone, adjoining the Church, and erected at the same time, at a cost of £600, aided by a grant from the Lichfield Diocesan society. A National school for boys and girls is now in course of erection, at Grassmoor; it is a neat stone building, and consists of two rooms, one of which is intended for a class room and also to be licensed for Divine service. The cost of the building, about £300, will be defrayed by voluntary contributions, and the school will be supported by subscriptions. The Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1842, is a neat stone building which will seat 150 persons, in connection with which is a day school where about 30 children attend. Hasland passed in marriage with one of the coheiresses of William Briwere, jun. to Ralph de Midleham. A younger branch of the Leakes were for many generations of Hasland Hall, of which John Linacre died seized in 1488.

Hasland Hall the seat of Archdeacon Hill, is a handsome stone mansion, about 1¼ miles S.E. of Chesterfield, about the middle of the seventeenth century, it belonged to Col. Roger Molineux, from whom it passed by purchase to Captain John Lowe, of the Aldewasley family. It is now the property of the Exors. of the late B. Lucas, Esq., the Lucas family having purchased it of the Lowes in 1727. Hasland House, 1 mile S.E. of Chesterfield, is a commodious and handsome mansion, the seat and property of the Misses Claughton. Bank close is a large handsome mansion, the seat of W. Drabble, Esq., and is situated about half a mile S.E. from Chesterfield. The manor of Boythorpe in the reign of Henry VI. was in severalities, belonging to Longford and others. It is deemed parcel of the manor of Hasland, and Mr. Nathaniel Bacon, who purchased part of it from Vincent Eyre, Esq., is principal owner.

NEWBOLD and DUNSTAN or DUNSTON, form a joint township, which contains 2915A. 2R. 22P. of land, 452 houses and 2035 inhabitants, of whom 1031 were males and 1004 females; rateable value £6112 18s. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner. The trustees of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Milnes Smith, Rev. A. C. Broomhead, B. M. Lucas, and J. H. Barker, Esqrs., are also owners. The manor of Newbold, at Domesday survey, was parcel of the ancient demesne of the crown, and contained six berwicks, Whittington, Brimington, Tapton, Chesterfield, Boythorpe, and Eckington; it afterwards belonged to the abbot and convent of Welbeck. At the dissolution of monasteries, it was parcel of the estate of Beauchief Abbey, and appears to have been granted to Sir William West, whose son, Edmund West, Esq. sold it in the year 1570 to Anthony and Gervase Eyre. Thomas Eyre, of Newbold, a zealous royalist, was governor of Welbeck, under the Earl of Newcastle; it is said that being captain of a troop, he was three times in one action personally engaged with Cromwell, and obliged him to retreat. This manor was included in the exchange before mentioned with the Duke of Portland.

NEWBOLD is a pleasant village 1½ mile N.W. from Chesterfield, on a considerable elevation, commanding extensive views over a well-wooded and highly cultivated country. At Little Moor, a Methodist chapel was erected in 1842; the township has extensive coal and iron mines and several manufactories of brown earthenware and stoneware bottles; and contains many scattered hamlets, with wharfs on the canal adjoining Chesterfield. A school was erected by the freeholders, with a residence for the master, on Newbold Green, in 1805. In a field near the village is an ancient building formerly used as a catholic chapel but now only as a place of interment to the Eyre family, who were for many years lords of this manor, and by whom it was originally built. Highfield, a neat mansion embowered with trees, 1 mile N.W. from Chesterfield, is the seat and property of Bernard Maynard Lucas, Esq. Reservoir House, $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile N.W. from Chesterfield, is a handsome residence the seat and property of Godfrey Heathcote, Esq. Newbold Field, a pleasant mansion, 3 miles N.W. from Chesterfield, is the seat and property of Edward Ward Fox, Esq., and Mrs. Lucy Fox.

DUNSTAN is a scattered hamlet, with Dunstan Hall, a neat stone mansion, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. from Chesterfield, the property of the trustees of the late Mrs. Elizabeth Milnes Smith.

CHARITIES.—George Milnes, Esq, in 1784, devised 2A. 3R. of land, to which the lord of the manor and others added 7A. 2R. of waste, on a portion of which a school and residence for the master was erected. The land produces about £30 per annum, which is paid the schoolmaster, and for which he instructs 20 children; small sums are occasionally laid out in books for the scholars.

Elizabeth Tomlinson, in 1779, devised three dwelling houses and a croft, to be used as habitations for three poor women, and bequeathed a sum of £400, to be laid out at interest, for the reparation of the houses and maintenance of the inmates. The amount is in the hands of the Rev. A. C. Broomhead, at $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., out of which each of the alms women receive 2s. a week for nine months in the year, and 2s. 6d. a week for the remaining three months.

TAPTON, a small but straggling township, $1\frac{1}{2}$ mile N.E. by E. from Chesterfield, contains 652 A. of land, and in 1851 had 37 houses and 214 inhabitants, of whom 99 were males and 115 females; rateable value £2171 17s. The Rev. John William Thomas, is lord of the manor, and he with G. Y. R. Wilkinson, Esq. and the Exors. of the late John Meynell, Esq., are the principal owners. Tapton was held under the Briweres by the family of Brimington, from whom it passed in the reign of Edward III. to the Stuffins, of Sherbrooke; it was afterwards for some generations in the family of Durant, whose heiress married Alsop. In 1673, Durant Alsop and Thomas Alsop sold the manor to Geo. Taylor, Esq. In 1842 John Stephenson, Esq. sunk a colliery here, 600 feet deep, from which good coal for the converting of steel or for locomitive coke is obtained. Tapton Hall, now a farm house, is the residence of Mr. John Wheatcroft, and property of the Rev. John William Thomas. Tapton House is a handsome brick mansion, pleasantly situated in parklike grounds about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.N.E. from Chesterfield, is the property of G. Y. R. Wilkinson, Esq., and occupied by Misses Pocock and Walker, as a boarding school; it was formerly the residence of George Stephenson, Esq., civil engineer, of railway celebrity, who rose by self cultivation to great eminence. When a boy he was employed in a pit, and then as a banksman's boy. He observed the pumping engines were out of order, and offered to repair them; he was first disregarded, but, when tried, he effected the work, and was put in charge of the engines. He afterwards suggested and effected improvements in the tramroads. He was next employed on the Stockton and Darlington railroad, the first that carried passengers as well as minerals. This established his character; and when the Liverpool and Manchester railway was undertaken he was employed; and was the first person who produced a locomotive capable of travelling at anything like the present rate.

CHARITIES.—Tapton township partakes of the charities of George Taylor, noticed with the borough of Chesterfield. as well as some that extend over the whole parish; and of Elizabeth Brailsford and Joshua Jebb, noticed at Brimington.

TEMPLE or NORTH NORMANTON, is a small compact village and township, situate on the Mansfield road, about 2¾ miles S.E. by S. from Chesterfield, and contains 498A. 0R. 27P. of land, and in 1851 had 27 houses and 107 inhabitants, of whom 58 were males and 49 females; rateable value £614 1s. Robt. Arkwright, Esq. is lord of the manor and principal owner; Frederick Packman, Esq., of Tupton, is also an owner. This manor, which belonged to the Knights Templars, and afterwards to the hospital of St. John of Jerusalem, was granted in 1563, to George, Earl of Shrewsbury; it was afterwards in the Leake family. Godfrey Clarke purchased the manor of Normanton, with that of Sutton, of the trustees of the late Earl of Scarsdale. A small chapel of ease was erected here in 1623; it is a low stone building with wooden turret. The living is a perpetual curacy, certfied at £7 12s., now £55, Frederick Packman, Esq., is patron; the Rev. Francis William Sharp, of Tibshelf, is incumbent. The churchyard is beautifully surrounded with trees, adjoining to which is an house formerly used as a day school, but now disused.

CHARITIES.—Temple Normanton School was erected by subscription, and John Clarke left £100 for purchasing a rent charge for teaching poor children; £4 10s. in respect of it is issuing out of Well Close Plot, which is given to a schoolmaster, who teaches four children.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in warm clothing and given to the poor.

WALTON is a long scattered township and district of houses, extending from 1 to about 5 miles from Chesterfield, in a S.W. direction, on the Matlock road, contains 2525A. 3R. 35P. of fertile and well cultivated land, and in 1851 had 227 houses and 1114 inhabitants, of whom 555 were males and 559 females; rateable value £4170 2s. The Exors. of the late Sir James Hunloke, Bart., are lords of the manor and principal owners. Rev. H. Goodwin, E. G. Maynard, Esq., J. Walker, Esq., Exors. of J. Clayton, Esq., Messrs. Hewitt, Bunting, & Co., F. Packman, Esq., Rev. John B. Jebb, Samuel Johnson, Esq., Miss Graham, G. Heathcote, Esq., with several others are also owners. In 1831 a chapel of ease was erected for New Brampton and Walton, Holly Moor Side, with part of Newbold; it is a small neat structure, dedicated to St. Thomas, and consists of a handsome pinnacled square tower with one bell; it contains 700 sittings, half of which are free. The cost, £2930, was raised by subscription. The living is a perpetual curacy and the income is derivable from yearly payments by the occupyers of pews, with an augmentation grant from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, making a total of £150 per annum, exclusive of surplice fees which averages about £10 per annum. The Bishop of Lichfield, patron and the Rev. J. B. Jebb, of Walton Lodge, incumbent. This place was for many generations the seat of the ancient and respectable family of Foljambe, to whom it hereditarily descended by Loudham from the Bretons. Sir Francis Foljambe, who had been created a baronet in 1622, sold it to Sir Arthur Ingram. The Ingrams sold it about 1636 to Mr. Paul Fletcher, who bequeated it to his nephew, Richard Jenkinson, whose son Paul was created a baronet in 1685. On the death of Sir Jonathan, 1741, the title became extinct. Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Paul, inherited this estate, and gave it to her mother, who bestowed it on her second husband, William Woodyeare, of Crookhill, near Conisbrough, who in 1813 sold it. There was an ancient chapel in Walton and Sir Robt. Breton is said to have had a license for a chantry in his chapel at Walton, in the reign of Henry III. Park Hall is a large handsome mansion 2 miles S.W. from Chesterfield. Walton Lodge, a handsome stone mansion, in an extensive and well wooded park, 3 miles S.W. from Chesterfield, is the seat and property of the Rev. John B. Jebb. Here is an extensive candlewick manufactury, and also one for spinning and doubling Persian sewing thread.

CLOWN is a large and well built village and scattered parish, 8 miles E.N.E. from Chesterfield, and 4 miles E. from Staveley station, contains 1919A. 2R. 13P. of land, a strong rich fertile soil, partly on lime and partly on gritstone, principally arable, and had in 1851, 156 houses and 660 inhabitants, of which number the males and females were equal; rateable value, £2344 1s. 8d. The village is pleasantly situated in a fine open situation sheltered from the N. winds by a gentle acclivity. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor, which is partly copyhold, and he with Hy. Bowdon, Esq., the Venerable Archdeacon Hill, and Mr. John Ludlow, are the principal owners. Here are also several smaller owners. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient edifice, partly in the Norman and partly in the later style of architecture; it is situated about ¼ mile E. from the village, and consists of side aisles, a square embattled tower, with four pinnacles and three bells. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £7 0s. 10d., now £311, is in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Chas. Walter Whiter M.A., who resides at the Rectory, a commodious brick residence a short distance from the church, and has 65A. 1R. 8P. of glebe. Tithes have been commuted and the parish lands were enclosed in 1780. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small neat stone chapel here, erected by subscription in 1837, at a cost of £80, which will seat 60 persons. The Wesleyan Association chapel, situated nearly in the centre of the village is a neat brick building, and will hold about 100; and the Primitive Methodists have a small stone chapel, erected in 1834, which will accommodate about 80. Here is an Endowed school, erected in 1726,—(see charities),—a small ancient building, situated at the east end of the village. Harlesthorpe is a small hamlet and village, about ¾ mile, north, from the Church. Whitebrick-moor consists of several scattered farms, of which two are in this parish. Romely House is a neat mansion, pleasantly situated about 3 miles S. from Eckington. In the tastefully laid out pleasure grounds are two avenues of yew trees, remarkable for their curious growth; the shrubberies contain a great variety of beautiful fir trees; it is the property of the Venerable Archdeacon Hill, and residence of Godfrey Croft, Esq. Southgate House, the seat and property of Henry Bowdon Esq., is a handsome modern mansion, fronting the east on the Chesterfield and Worksop road, 1 mile N.N.E. from Clown church, and 9 miles E. by N. from Chesterfield, is delightfully situated in a fine and healthy country, surrounded by thriving woods and plantations; it is within the ancient manor of Harlesthorpe, of which Mr. Bowdon is the proprietor. The family of Bowdon is of great antiquity, in the county of Derby, and was resident for four centuries at Bowdon Hall, near Chapel-en-le-Frith; that estate however, passed from the family, through an heiress, in 1680. From that time the family has been chiefly resident either at Beighton Fields, in the parish of Barlborough, or at Southgate House. Mr. Bowdon is the representative of the family in male descent. The first of this family we have on record is Thomas Bowdon, of Bowdon Hall, living in 1450, although the family had been resident there from 1317, in which year they built the chancel of the church at Chapel-en-le-Frith, and from that time it was commonly called Chapel Bowdon. Thomas was succeeded by his son George, of Bowdon, who married Barbara, daughter of Nicholas Bagshaw, of Abney. He left a son, George, of Bowdon, living in 1550, who married Ellen, daughter of Austin Pole, of Langley, who was succeeded by his son Thomas, of Bowdon, who married Anne, daughter of Henry Bagshaw, of Ridge. He left with other children Nicholas and George. Nicholas, the eldest, married the heiress of Barnby, and had three sons, all of whom died without issue, when the Bowdon Hall estate passed to his brother George, who left two daughters, and who carried the estate out of the family. Thomas Bowdon, (the second surviving son of Thomas, who married Anne Bagshaw,) married Ellen Shrigley, and settled at Whetstone; he left two sons, Henry and John, the former of whom married the sister and heiress of John Alleyne, of Whetstone Hall. John, his brother, married the daughter of Richard Beard, of Beard Hall, and died of the plague in 1665, without issue. Henry left a son (Henry) who however did not take any benefit from his uncle Alleyne's bequest of the Whetstone property, as the protestant heir succeeded in wresting the estate from him by means of the penal laws against Catholics then in force. The above mentioned Henry married the only daughter and heiress of John Hewet, of Beighton Fields, from whom he acquired that estate, and which still remains in the family. He left a son John, who had three wives, leaving issue by all of them, the eldest son (John) by the first wife Mary, daughter of John Barker, of Barlborough House, married Alice, daughter of George Johnson, of Shelfield, in Warwickshire, an elder sister of his father's third wife, and left a son, Henry Bowdon, of Southgate House and Beighton Fields, he married Mary, daughter and heiress of Joseph Erdeswick, of Hartley, representative of the ancient family of that name of Sandon Hall, in Staffordshire; he left an only son, John Bruno Bowdon, of Southgate House and Beighton Fields, who married Mary Martha, eldest daughter of Edward Ferrers, Esq., of Baddesley Clinton, in Warwickshire, representative in the mail line of that ancient and noble family. The above named John B. Bowdon served the office of high sheriff in 1841, he left at his death in 1850, two sons and four daughters, Henry the eldest,, a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for the county of Derby, married in 1853, Henrietta Matilda, daughter of Michael Henry Blount, Esq., of Mapledurham, by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Charles, tenth Lord Petre, and has a daughter Alice; John the second son, inherited the Pleasington Hall estate, Lancashire, by the bequest of his cousin, Mary Anne Butler, and married in 1849, Amelia, daughter of George Whitgreave, Esq., of Moseley Court, Staffordshire, and has a son, Erderswick, and other children. He is a magistrate and deputy lieutenant of Lancashire. Helena, the eldest daughter, married Peter Constable Maxwell, Esq., third son of Marmaduke C. Maxwell, Esq., of Everingham Park. Barbara married Edward Wright, Esq., of Kelvedon Hall. Fanny is a nun in the convent at Oulton, in Staffordshire.

CHARITIES.—Elizabeth Slater, in 1706, left £5, whereof £2 was employed in building the poor's seat in the church—3s. in respect of the remainder is paid out of the estate of Henry Bowdon, Esq.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in warm clothing and given to the poor.

SCHOOL.—John Slater, in 1727, gave 40s. yearly, charged on Hooker Pitts close and Gascoyne Pingles, to poor widows, until there should be a schoolmaster in Clown, and then for the instruction of six children.

Charles Basseldine, in 1730, surrendered certain lands in Bolsover, and directed the rents to be given to a schoolmaster. The property belonging the school consists of a house, orchard, and croft, together about 3 acres, Damsbrook Meadow closes, called Stone Top and the Esps, with an allotment of 5A. 1R. 6P. in lieu of common right, in consideration of the rents, the master instructs 20 children, and 4 for Slater's donation.

Church Lands.—In the parish book there is a statement of various lands left for the repairs of the church, the whole contains about 5A., let for £3 6s. 8d. which is carried to the churchwardens' general account.

William Wilkson, in 1666, left a rent charge of £5 out of the moor close, in the parish of Bolsover, to be given to the poor.

Edward Woodhead, in 1697, gave to the poor 20s. yearly, out of Romely close.

Andrew Clayton, in 1701, left 20s. yearly, out of lands at Romely. The poor have also 5s. per annum, from the bequest of John Watkinson, left in 1704, and 10s. left by Richard Johnson, in 1714.

Frances Tomkin, in 1705, gave to the poor Saffer's close, let for £3 per annum; the land was open to an adjoining field, but stones are fixed to mark the boundary.

Elizabeth Denham, in 1720, left a house at Clown, the rents to be divided amongst poor widows of Clown and Eckington. A house and croft in Clown, occupied by a widow named Lowde, and claimed as her own, are the premises supposed to be given by Mrs. Denham. It appears Mrs. Lowde's mother, a poor woman, was by the parish permitted to occupy them rent free, many years, till the daughter claims them as her own. An allotment of 1A. 3R. 1P. was awarded at the enclosure, now let for £1 18s. per annum, which is divided between the two parishes.

Rev. George Chantrey, in 1722, left 20s. yearly, charged on High Cross closes, in Barlborough, to be given to ten of the poorest families in Clown.

DORE PARISH forms the north west extremity of the Scarsdale Hundred, being bounded on the north by the river Sheaf and the Yorkshire moors, it has the parish of Hathersage on the west, from which the Sheffield and Bakewell road partly separates it. It contains the townships of Dore and Totley, with 5083A. 1R. 11P. of land, and in 1851, had 207 houses, and 977 inhabitants, of whom 545 were males, and 432 females; rateable value, £4,639 12s. 1d. It was enclosed under an act, 49th of Geo. III., and the award signed 10th April, 1823. By an order of Council, 31st January, 1844, agreeable to the plans of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, it was formed into a distinct parish for all civil and ecclesiastical purposes, previous to which they formed a part of the parish of Dronfield, and was subject to one quarter of the rates for the parish church. It is in the Ecclesall Bierlow Union of the parish of Sheffield.

DORE, is a large scattered village and township, on the verge of the Yorkshire moors, 5 miles S.S.W. from Sheffield, contains 3271A. 2R. 7P of land, which since the enclosure has been greatly improved, and in 1851 had 124 houses, and 574 inhabitants, of whom 317 were males, and 257 females; rateable value, £2,828 8s. 9d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Exors. of the late D'Ewes Coke, Esq., Henry Hancock and R. N. Shaw, Esqrs., are also owners. The Church, dedicated to Christ, is a small neat Gothic stone structure, with a low embattled square tower, and was rebuilt on a more convenient site, in the year 1828, for which land was given by the Duke of Devonshire, the cost, £1,000, was partly raised by rate and partly by subscription, aided by a grant of £300 from the Church Building Society; it contains 600 sittings, of which about one half are free. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £90, and in 1720 and 1777, was augmented with Queen Anne's bounty to meet benefactions—in 1810, with £200,—and in 1820, with £600 parliamentary grant. Earl Fitzwilliam is patron, and the Rev. J. T. F. Aldred, M.A., incumbent, who resides at the Parsonage, a large handsome brick mansion, erected in 1841 by Earl Fitzwilliam; it is situated a short distance from the church. At the enclosure, 94 acres of land were awarded to the vicar of Dronfield, for tithe and other land to the impropriator. Here is a Free school,—(see charities), built 1821, on the site of the old chapel, and endowed by the Rev. Robert Turrie, and others. The master receives £40 per annum, for which he instructs as many poor children as that sum will pay for at 3d. per week. Here are a few scythe and saw handle manufacturers, and a copperas manufactory near Ringing Low. Abbeydale Villa is a large handsome mansion, pleasantly situated about 4½ miles from Sheffield, on the Abbeydale road,—is the seat and property of John Roberts, Esq.

Totley is a small pleasant village and scattered township, forming the south side of the parish, on a low eminence, on the Bakewell road, 3½ miles W.N.W. from Dronfield, and 6 miles S.W. from Sheffield; it contains 1811A. 3R. 4P. of land, and in 1851 had 83 houses and 403 inhabitants, of whom 228 were males and 175 females; rateable value, £1,328 2s. 1d. Lord Middleton is lord of the manor and a small owner; G. B. Greaves, Esq., the Exors. of the late D'Ewes Coke, Esq., and Mr. Jph. Ward, are also owners. This was formerly a bleak moory district, which since the enclosure has been greatly improved by cultivation; the population has kept increasing with the improvements in agriculture, by which they are mostly employed. In 1839, the tithe of the old enclosure was commuted for £18 6s. 11d. to the impropriator, and £2 7s. to the vicar of Dronfield, and the new was exonerated by allotments at the enclosure. Near the Sheffield road is an ancient cupola, for smelting lead. Messrs. T. Tinker & Co. have extensive Chemical works here, on the Bakewell road, about 5½ miles from Sheffield. An Infant school—(see charities)—was built in 1827, by D'Ewes Coke, Esq., and is endowed with lands situate at Totley and Coal Aston. Feast, first Sunday after Midsummer day. The Bents, half a mile N.W. from Totley, consists of a few scattered farms and cottages. Totley Vale House is a neat residence, about three-quarters of a mile from Dore church, the property of J. G. Waterfall, Esq., and the seat of John Wheat, Esq.

Charities.—Dore School.—Rev. Robert Turie, gave £40 for the benefit of the chapelry of Dore, two-thirds of this sum was expended in 1747, in enclosing a piece of common on Dore moor side, the remainder was laid out in enclosing land on Totley common, the proceeds are given to a schoolmaster.

John Dewce gave a yearly sum of £1 4s. for the instruction of three poor children, and 12s. to be distributed in bread; 12s. per annum was also given by Eliz. Dewce, for the like purpose. At the enclosure, the commissioners were directed to award so much of the waste as in their judgment should be worth £30 per annum, for the benefit of a schoolmaster, within the manor of Dore. The lands set out at the award consist of 55A. 3R. 15P., let for £35 14s. per annum. The schoolmaster now receives about £40 a year, for which he instructs as many children as it will pay for at 3d. a week; 30s. per annum is laid out in bread, and distributed to the poor, from the bequest of Joseph Wolstenholme, in 1764; and 24s. is paid in satisfaction of the charities of Richard and Elizabeth Dewce.

John Raworth, in 1804, left the produce of £20 for a distribution of bread to four poor widows of Dore.

Isaac Shepherd, in 1811, left £20 for a distribution of bread, and £20 for the education of two poor children of Dore. Mr. Heald Unwin holds the legacies at 5 per cent. which are given as directed.

Totley School.—By indentures, 1753, a piece of waste land, about 4 acres, was conveyed to trustees, in order that a school might be erected upon it, the intention was never carried into effect, and the land is let for £6 10s. per annum, which is paid for the instruction of six poor children. Some time ago, the inhabitants proposed to build a school, by subscription, the plan was however abandoned, and a school was built by the late D'Ewes Coke, Esq., on his own land. A sum of £125, raised towards building the school, was expended in the purchase of land, at Coal Aston, now let for £6 per annum, which is also given to the schoolmaster or schoolmistress, for the instruction of six other poor children.

William Green, 1786, left a rent charge of 12s. yearly, out of his house and croft in Totley, for a distribution of bread, at Dore chapel, every fourth Sunday.

DRONFIELD is an extensive parish, forming the north-west extremity of the Scarsdale Hundred, having Yorkshire on the north, and consists of the five townships of Dronfield, Little Barlow, Coal Aston, Holmesfield, and Unstone. The whole parish contains 10,570A. 2R. 27P. of land, and in 1851, had 1,073 houses and 5,231 inhabitants, of whom 2,841 were males and 2,390 females; rateable value £14,610 5s. 1d. The townships of Dore and Totley were formerly in this parish, but by order of council, 31st January, 1844, they were united in a distinct parish for all ecclesiastical purposes.

DRONFIELD is a considerable and ancient village and township, pleasantly situated in a romantic valley, on the Chesterfield road, 6 miles S. by W. from Sheffield, the same distance N. by W. from Chesterfield, and 156 miles N.N.W. from London. The township contains 2,414 acres of land, and in 1851, had 515 houses and 2,469 inhabitants, of whom 1,336 were males and 1,133 females; rateable value £6,340. The manorial rights are vested in the Cecil family, and the land belongs to various owners. The air is said to be remarkably salubrious, and in the village are some fine springs of water. The place is fast improving, and becoming quite a populous neighbourhood; several old cottages have been taken down and new ones erected, principally at the north end of the village, but other places in proportion. The inhabitants participate largely in the edge-tool, scythe, and sickle manufactures; and here is an iron foundry, chemical works, corn mill, and spindle and flyer manufacturers, &c. The vicinity is noted for its superior coal, greatly in request for converting and refining steel. It formerly had a market, but from its proximity to Sheffield and Chesterfield, has long been disused. In 1854 the old Market Cross was taken down, and a monument of stone, to the memory of Sir Robert Peel, was erected on its site, at a cost of about £30, raised by subscription. A fair is still held on April 25th, and a hiring for servants is also held on the 3rd of November. The Church, dedicated to St. John Baptist, is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £10 2s. 1d., now £224. In 1730 it was endowed with £200 benefactions, and £200 Queen Anne;s bounty, and and in 1811, with a subscription of £200, and a parliamentary grant of £600. The Lord Chancellor is the patron, and the Rev. W. D. B. Bertles, M,A., incumbent. The Church is a large and handsome gothic structure, 132 feet long, situated on an eminence, and has nave, chancel, side aisles and tower, (in which are six bells,) surmounted by a spire of the same height. In 1843, Mr. Saml. Lucas, being then churchwarden, presented a new dial for the church clock, which cost about £50. In the church is a small but powerful organ, which has been removed from the west end to the body of the church. In 1855 the church was thoroughly repaired and re-pewed, at a cost of £1000, when 160 additional sittings, all free, were obtained. It formerly had a chantry, which stood on the site of the Green Dragon Inn, and was appropriated to Beauchief Abbey. In the church, are brasses, representing members of a branch of the Eyre family, and in the chancel, is a gravestone into which are inserted the figures of two priests, engraved on brass plates, they are habited in copes, the borders of which are ornamented with quartre-foils, between them is the figure of a bugle horn, and beneath them are two latin inscriptions. In the south aisle is an altar tomb of alabaster, enriched with figures of angels holding shields, upon it lies the statue of a Knight, clothed in plate armour of the 15th century, without helmet. In the west end of the church, is a stained glass window, representing St. John the Baptist, and our Saviour. The tithes were mostly purchased by the landowners, about eight years ago, for about £10,000; land was awarded in lieu of small tithes in 1842. The township was partly enclosed, under an act passed 1842. The General Baptist Chapel, erected in 1853, at a cost of £130, raised by subscription, is a neat stone building, with seats for 150 hearers, of which 100 are free. The Independent Chapel, erected by subscription, at a cost of £1000, is a good stone building, with galleries, and will accommodate 500; attached to which, is a day school, built in 1826, at a cost of £100, which will hold about 100. The Wesleyans have also a chapel here, erected by the Society of Friends, several years ago; it is a large square handsome building, with galleries, and will hold about 300. The Grammar School is an ancient building, a short distance from the church; it is endowed with lands, &c., left by Henry Fanshawe, in 1567, now worth about £230 per annum. It is open to all the children of the parish, 30 of whom are instructed free. The number of scholars at the present time is 51. The Rev. John Cockerton, M.A., is the head master, and Mr. John Garland, second master. The Mechanics' Institution, established October, 1850, consists of a library and reading rooms for all classes. The library contains 404 volumes of carefully selected books in various branches of literature, besides 191 periodicals, which afford the means for social, intellectual and moral elevation. The news room is constantly supplied with daily and weekly papers. The number of members are at present about 40, each of whom pay 1s. 6d. per quarter subscription. Mr. Samuel Lucas is the secretary, and Mr. John Rowe, librarian. The Gas Works, situated on the turnpike road from Sheffield to Chesterfield, is a small neat brick building, commenced, November, 1855, and completed, May, 1856, at a cost of about £1,700, (and including the apparatus, £2,000,) raised by 400 shareholders of £5 each. The gasometor holds 4,900 cubic feet, which is sold to the inhabitants at 6s. 6d. per 1000 cubic feet. Mr. Geo. Brookes, is the resident manager.

The manor of Dronfield belonged to the crown till the reign of King John, when it was granted to William Briewer; it was afterwards successively held by the Cromwells, Hastings, Seliokes, Morewoods, Burtons, and Rossingtons. Samuel Rotherham died seized of it in 1795; he was sheriff in 1773. His sister and heir bequeathed it to Mr. Joseph Cecil, in whose family it still remains.

Cowley is a small village, 1 mile S.W. Woodhouse is another small village, 1 mile N.W., where the Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, built, 1844. Here are several collieries. Summerwood Top consists of a few scattered farms. ½ mile N.W. Mickley, 2 miles N.W. contains three farms and a few cottages. Hill-Top, consists of a few scattered farms ½ mile S.

Charities.—Henry Fanshawe, in 1567, left four years' profit of his lease of the parsonage, and certain lands, for building a school and maintaining a schoolmaster and usher at Dronfield; a few small exchanges have been made, which appear advantageous to the charity, and the property now consists of a house, school, garden, and croft, occupied by the head master, a house and yard occupied by the usher, 46A. of land in Dronfield,

26A. in Chesterfield, and seven acres in Eckington, producing a rental of £230, of which two-thirds are paid to the head master, and the remaining third to the usher, who instructs thirty children of the parish free. Previous to 1809 a suit was pending in Chancery, having originated in the appointment of the vicar to the office of schoolmaster, and to a refusal on his part to instruct the free scholars in anything except the classics. In consequence of this the school was for a time discontinued; but in 1809 the Rev. William Spencer was appointed to the vicarage, and on his application the suit was dismissed, and the costs of £1,100 were paid out of the estate, for which purpose timber and beds of coal on the charity lands were sold.

Richard Stevenson, in 1577, directed half a hundred of herrings and the bread from a strike of wheat, to be distributed on every Friday in lent; he also left thirty pence, to be given to the same number of poor persons. Edmund Stephenson left 33s. 4d., to be given to the poor yearly. These sums are charged upon a farm in Unston quarter.

James Swift, in 1610, left a rent charge of £3, issuing out of a messuage in Southwark; the amount is given in small sums to the poor.

Godfrey Godley, 1619, bequeathed 30s. yearly, charged on land in Handsworth, to be distributed to the poor of the parish.

Penny Acre Dole. A sum of 17s. is received by the churchwardens from Holmsfield, in respect of some land called the Penny Acres.

Rev. Lawrence Banks, in 1662, gave certain lands in Dronfield, for the benefit of the poor. The property consists of 5A. 0R. 7P., let for £11 11s. a year, besides which the getting of stone is let at the rate of £150 per acre. The proceeds are distributed on Good Friday.

John Revell, 1659, gave the profits of certain lands called the Nether and Over Deck Riddings, to the poor of the parish. There are now three closes, about nine acres, let for £14 per annum, which is distributed at Midsummer and Christmas.

Dorothy Hall, in 1711, bequeathed £100, to be invested in land, and the profits to be given to the vicar, for preaching four sermons on certain days. We have not been able to ascertain whether this was ever so laid out; but the vicar receives £2 as the gifts of Dorothy and Richard Hall, and retains £1 15s. for preaching sermons on Good Friday and Midsummer day, when he distributes 5s. in bread to the poor.

Andrew Morewood, in 1686, left the rents of a certain piece of land on trust; £2 thereof to be given to the vicar, and four nobles each to Dronfield, Coal Aston, and Unstone, for the instruction of poor children. The property consists of 15A. 0R. 11P. of land, let for £10 10s. per annum. £2 is paid to the vicar, £1 6s. 8d. to three schoolmistresses, who instruct six children each, and the residue is distributed amongst the poor of Coal Aston.

George Cooper, in 1763, left a rent charge of £2 12s., issuing out of his estate in Ditch lane, for a distribution of bread amongst twelve poor persons, every Sunday, of Dronfield, Unstone, and Coal Aston quarters, alternately, for ever.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity (see Bradley). The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the vicar, is laid out in warm clothing, and given to the poor about Christmas.

Lost Charities. A sum of £3 per annum, left by Rebecca Wright in 1675, and two other charities mentioned in the returns of 1786, we have not been able to obtain any information of.

Thomas Taylor, in 1681, left his messuages and lands on trust, the profits thereof to put forth poor children of Dronfield quarter apprentices.

Elizabeth Richardson, in 1684, devised certain lands on trust, to pay one half of the yearly profits thereof to the vicar, to preach a sermon on the 5th of August, and the other half for providing two coats for poor women. The property is let for 36s. a year, which is given as directed.

Elizabeth Dale, in 1743, gave the yearly sum of 10s., to be distributed to ten poor widows on St. Andrew's day.

Barlow Little is a small village and township intermixed with the parish of Great Barlow, 3¾ miles N.W. by N. from Chesterfield. The Dronfield part contains 486A. 1R. 3P. of land, and in 1851 had 12 houses and 68 inhabitants, of whom 41 were males and 27 females; rateable value £412 6s. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and principal owner. Notwithstanding the houses are completely intermixed with Great Barlow, and the land without any particular boundary, yet it keeps its own poor.

Coal Aston is a small compact village and township, on the summit of a high hill, 1 mile N.E. from Dronfield, contains 1153A. 0R. 8P. of land, and in 1851 had 85 houses and 421 inhabitants, of whom 231 were males and 190 females; rateable value £2439 1s. 8d. Charles Cammel, Esq. is lord of the manor; and the principal owners are Mrs. Newton, Sir R. Sitwell, Bart., F. W. Bagshawe, Esq., James Addy, Esq., Messrs. Lloyd and Walker, James Rhodes, and the trustees of Mrs. Smith, besides several smaller owners. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, erected in 1833, by subscription, at a cost of £120; it is a neat stone building, and will hold about 100. The Wesleyan Reformers have a neat stone chapel here, erected by the Wesleyans, in 1848, which will hold about 100. Bull close, 2 miles S.; Hallows, 1½ mile S.; Sicklebrook, 1 mile E.; and South Povey, 1½ mile E. from the village, are scattered farms.

Foleswood Colliery, situated in this township, on the Chesterfield road, is celebrated for the making of its excellent hard and soft coke, the hard coke for steel refining and the soft for forging purposes. An excellent house fire coal is also got here; Mr. William Thomas Badger is the proprietor. Here are also several other extensive collieries in the neighbourhood.

Charities.—Thomas Kent, by will, 1695, bequeathed £100, to be invested in land, the rents thereof to be given in apprentice fees for poor children; if no such children in Coal Aston, then to the poor. The property now held on trust consists of 9A. 3R. 1P. at Moor Top, a part of which was an allotment at the enclosure, producing a yearly rent of £16 per annum. Poor boys are occasionally placed out, and what remains is given to the poor.

Holmesfield, a small straggling village, township, and chapelry, 2¼ miles W. from Dronfield, contains 4552A. of land, and in 1851 had 112 houses and 520 inhabitants, of whom 264 were males and 256 females; rateable value £2887 15s. The Duke of Rutland is lord of the manor and principal owner. Messrs. Hy. Penistone, Benjamin Bland, and William Morgan are also owners. The Chapel, dedicated to St. Swithin, a plain stone structure, was re-built in 1826, on the site of the old chapel; it is situated on an eminence and is seen at a great distance. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued in the King's book at £3, now worth £91. It has been endowed with £10 per annum, £200 benefactions, and £400 Queen Anne's bounty. Charles Cawton, Esq., patron, and the Rev. Thomas Hirst, B.A., incumbent, who resides at the Parsonage, a plain brick building, a little E. of the Church, which has been considerably improved during the time of the present incumbent, at his own expense. In 1831, the Duke of Rutland built a Sunday school here, which is also used as a day school; it consists of one room with a partition to divide the boys from the girls; the land was given by Mr. Matthew Webster. In 1845, a house was erected for the master situated on the common. The Wesleyan Methodist chapel is a small neat stone building erected in 1833, will hold about 90. Storth House is an ancient farm residence 1½ miles N.W. in the occupation of Mr. William Hodkin; it is supposed that a castle formerly stood here, on the site now called Castle hill, and a moat which is now still visible probably surrounded it.

Cartledge, is a small village three quarters of a mile S. by E. from Holmesfield. Cartledge Hall is an ancient farm house and is supposed to have been the residence of the Jolley family; it is built in the Elizabethan style, the ceilings of the rooms are handsomely carved, and on the mantle-piece in the front room is a representation of "The Fall of Man." Adam and Eve, are standing on each side of the Tree of Life, the serpent is tempting the latter, and Adam is in the act of plucking the fruit. Horsleygate 1¼ mile S.W.

consists of a few scattered farms. Horsleygate House is a large handsome mansion, pleasantly situated on a gentle acclivity,—the residence and property of Mr. Henry Penistone. Lydgate 1¼ mile W. consists of a few scattered houses. Owler Bar 1¼ mile W., near which is the Peacock, a noted road side Inn, in a bleak situation at the cross of the Sheffield road.

CHARITIES.—Free School.—Robert Moore, in 1719, gave the profits of two closes called Maggeth Lees, for the instruction of ten children. Prudence Moore, in 1725, gave £60; George Moore, £10; and £38 16s. 8d. was raised by voluntary contributions, for erecting a school and augmenting the master's salary, with which a school house was built and a croft purchased, leaving a balance of £90 in favour of the charity; this, with other sums, amounting in the whole to £220, was laid out in the Penny Acres, containing 10A. 3R. 3P., in Dronfield parish. The purchase money was made up of the following sums:—The above £90, £52, left by Mrs. Moore, £10 by John Jolley, £10 by Samuel Jolley, £10 by Mrs. Lee, and £28 given by Robt. Newton and Robert Moore, Esqrs.; the remainder was raised by contributions. The Penny Acres are let for £10 18s. 3d. per annum; and an allotment of 1A. 0R. 27P. let for 20s. per annum. This sum comprises the rent of Maggeth Lees and of the allotment, and £5 8s. 1½d. from the rents of the Penny Acres; of the residue, £4 10s. 1½d. is for distribution of bread, and 19s. 3d. for clothing for two poor widows, both of which we are informed have not been paid.

Chapel Land.—At a court-baron for the manor of Holmesfield, held 1762, certain lands were surrendered upon trust, to pay all the rents to the minister performing divine service in the parochial chapelry of Holmesfield; for every default of such duty, the minister to forfeit 10s., to be distributed to the poor. The property thus appropriated consists of a house and about 60 acres of land, including 16 acres set out at the inclosure.

UNSTONE is a small village and township 4 miles N. by W. from Chesterfield, and 8 miles S.S.W. from Sheffield, contains 1965A. 1R. 16P. of land, and in 1851 had 142 houses and 776 inhabitants, of whom 421 were males and 190 females; rateable value £2531 2s. 5d. Charles Thorold, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Duke of Devonshire, Hy. Rangeley, Esq., Mr. Samuel Parker, and Mr. Robert Sykes Ward are also owners. In 1833, a neat school with a residence for the master was erected by George Moore, Esq., who, during his life paid £15 per annum towards the maintenance of the master, who now lives rent free, but has no salary. The school will hold abont 70, and the average attendance is 50. The Wesleyan Methodist chapel is a neat stone building, erected in 1847, which will seat about 100 persons. The commons were enclosed in 1839.

Thomas Curtys, in 1701, left £100 to be invested in land; out of the proceeds thereof 40s. to be paid to the vicar, 30s. in apprentice fees for poor boys of Unstone, and 30s. to the poor. The yearly sum of £5 is charged on a farm at Norton, and paid to the vicar of Dronfield, who retains £2 for himself, and distributes the remaining £3 to the poor of Unstone.

ECKINGTON is an extensive parish and township, and contains the hamlets of Mosborough, Renishaw, and Troway, which keep their poor conjointly, and have 6,934A. 2R. 8P. of land, and in 1851, had 1,046 houses, and 4,958 inhabitants, of whom 2,639 were males and 2,339 females; rateable value £18,591 4s. 0d. The land is mostly a strong fertile soil, and was inclosed in 1795. It is bounded on the east by the river Rother, which separates it from Killamarsh, having the parish of Norton on the west, and the parish of Handsworth, in Yorkshire, on the north. The rectory was formerly held with that of Killamarsh, which together were worth about £1,600 per annum; but by an Order in Council, dated June 10th, 1843, pursuant to the reforming plans of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, Killamarsh was made a separate rectory; and Ridgway, with the Troway quarter, a perpetual curacy and distinct parish. Troway forms the western side of the parish of Eckington, with which it still keeps its poor, but each quarter keeps its own roads. This parish is the great seat of the sickle and reaping-hook manufactory, and is included in the Sheffield Corporation of Cutlers.

ECKINGTON is a large irregular built village and market town, situated on the southern acclivity of a narrow valley, from which there is a tedious flight of steps up to the church. It is 7 miles N.E. by E. from Chesterfield, and 7 miles S.E. from Sheffield. Sir Sitwell Reresby Sitwell, Bart., is principal owner and lord of the manor, which includes the whole parish, and in the reign of Henry I, was held by J. Langford, "by grand sergeantry to find one horse of the value of 5s., with a sack and spur, for the king's wars in Wales, for forty days." At the Norman survey there was a priest and servant at Eckington, but no church. The manor and advowson of the church, however, in the reign of Edward II., were held by Elizabeth, wife of R. Stuteville. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, is an ancient edifice in the Anglo-Norman style, with a tower and spire, remarkably heavy and void of ornament. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £40 13s. 4d., now £774, in the patronage of the Crown; the Rev. Edmund Bucknall Estcourt, M.A., incumbent, and the Rev. J. Eastwood, M.A., curate. In the church are some ancient monuments, on one of which is a male and female figure kneeling on one knee, in the costume of the time of Charles II. The organist has an endowment of £14 a year, arising from land, and £5 from other sources. The Rectory is a large stone mansion, erected about 1720, with extensive pleasure grounds, commanding a fine view of the surrounding country; it is at present occupied by the curate. The Wesleyans have a chapel, erected in 1807, and the Association Methodists one, built in 1837. The school, rebuilt in 1832, at a cost of upwards of £600, is open to all the poor of the parish: in consequence of the late rector (who seldom visited the parish) having the deeds at his residence in Wales, the Charity Commissioners could not report on it. Here is a girls' school, conducted on the National plan, which is in part supported by Lady Sitwell, the children paying a small fee weekly; about 55 attend. The Mechanics' Institution, established 1854, has a small library and news room in connection with it. Thomas Mc Laurin, jun., librarian. Petty-sessions are held on the second Wednesday in every month. In 1852, a Court-house with a lock-up was erected; it is a large substantial stone building, near the White Hart Hotel. The market is held on Friday; and fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April and October; and a statute fair for hiring servants on the 5th November. The feast is on the first Sunday after Midsummer day. Races are held during the feast week. In the time of William the Conqueror, this manor (Echintone) was in the possession of Ralph, the son of Hubert. At this time there was a priest at Eckington, but we find no mention of any church being here, until the beginning of the 14th century. In the reign of Edward I. this manor belonged to one Langford, from whom it has passed, by various changes, to the present owner.

MOSBOROUGH is a large scattered and irregular built village, situated on a steep acclivity 8 miles N.N.E. from Chesterfield, and 6 miles S.S.E. from Sheffield, lying to the north of Eckington, from which it is divided by a small brook. Sir Sitwell Reresby Sitwell, Bart., is lord of the manor and principal owner, besides which, here are several small freeholders. Mosborough Hall is a large square stone structure, with stone balustrades on the top, situated at the summit of the village, the seat and property of Charles Rotherham, Esq. The Wesleyan Methodists have a neat stone chapel here, erected in 1839, and the Primitive Methodists a small one, erected in 1830. Many sickles and hooks are manufactured, and here are also collieries where coke is burned for steel refiners. In 1835, a corn mill here was destroyed by fire. Here is a Free School for boys and girls, (see Charities) erected in 1821, by subscription, at a cost of £200, and is endowed with lands, &c., amounting to £28 10s. per annum, left by Joseph Stones, in 1680. The master instructs 15 children free, for which he has a house and garden rent free. The school is a neat stone building, and will hold about 100. It is taught on the National plan, and about 55 attend. Mosborough includes Mosborough Moor, (now enclosed on the north), and consists of a colliery and a few cottage houses, with two inns; Plumley, a small hamlet, about ¾ mile W., contains two farms; and Holbrook, a small hamlet, ¾ mile E., where there are a few cottages.

Renishaw is a small village situated in the vale of the Rother, on the east of Eckington, 7½ miles N.E. by N. from Chesterfield. Here are the extensive iron furnaces and foundries of Messrs. Appleby and Co. The Chesterfield canal passes close to the works, which affords every means of transit for their metals and castings, for which they stand pre-eminent. The Midland railway has also a station near Renishaw Iron-works, near which is the Sitwell Arms Inn, conveniently adapted for the accommodation of passengers, and where a cab is always in readiness. Here is a Free School, endowed by Thomas Cannon and others,—(See Charities),—with lands, &c., the rents thereof to be paid to the schoolmaster for instructing poor children of Renishaw and Eckington. The school is a commodious stone building, rebuilt in 1832, at a cost of about £600. Renishaw Hall, about ½ mile S.E, from Eckington, is a large handsome stone mansion with a centre and wings; from the centre, which stands a little backward, projects a semi-octagonal entrance, surmounted by battlements having pinnacles at the corners, with vanes rising from the wings and centre. It is pleasantly situated in an extensive park, well wooded, fronting the north, commanding an extensive prospect, lying on the west side of the Sheffield road and of the vale of the Rother. It is the property of Sir Sitwell Reresby Sitwell, Bart.

Spink Hill is a hamlet and small village, situated on a lofty eminence 1 mile E. of Renishaw, and has long been noted for its Catholic chapel, and where a handsome Catholic church was erected in 1845, with a tower, from which rises a spire 50 feet high. A handsome building, principally of brick, has also been erected, which forms three sides of a square, the projecting ends finished octangular with stone; the enclosed side has a stone piazza, crossing from the other two sides, over which is a singular looking screen, covered to the height of the building, giving free access around the outside of the building, yet sheltered from the weather. It is cemented in imitation of stone. This is a Jesuit college, for the education of youth, and is a branch from Stoneyhurst, in Lancashire, established there by some refugees driven from their establishment at Liege, in 1794, by the horrors of war and the proscriptions of the French revolution. In connexion with which, in 1852, a School was erected, with a house for the master, at a cost of upwards of £600, raised by subscription. It is a handsome stone building in the Gothic style, open to all denominations, and is under general inspection; it will accommodate about 120, and the average attendance is about 90.

Ridgway, is a small village 5 miles S.S.E. from Sheffield, and 8 miles N. by E. from Chesterfield, forming the western side of Eckington parish, with which it still keeps its poor. It was by order in Council, dated 10th June, 1843, made ecclesiastically a distinct parish. The manufacturing of sickle and reaping hooks is carried on here to a considerable extent. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a small neat building, on a declivity, was erected in 1840 at a cost of £2,000, raised by subscription, aided by grants from the Incorporated Society for Building and Enlarging Churches, and from the Diocesan Society of £300. It is a stone building, of unpresuming appearance, having a buttress surmounted with a cross, which holds one bell. The living is a perpetual curacy, valued at £300. The rector of Eckington patron, Rev. Alexander Crawford Bromehead, jun., B.A., incumbent, and the Rev. R. K. Bolton, B.A., curate. It is endowed with £230 per annum, paid from the rectorial tithe or corn rent of Eckington; the rent of 28 pews in the church is also appropriated to the augmentation of the resident curate's stipend, as specified in the deed of endowment. The Methodist chapel, erected 1806, is a neat stone building, with burial ground attached. The National School, erected 1837, by private subscription, is a small neat building. Grants from the National School Society of £30, and from the Lords of Her Majesty's treasury of £80, were obtained towards defraying the expenses of the erection. At the enclosure of Eckington, in 1795, 2A. 3R. 5P. of land was vested in the rector and churchwardens for the use of a schoolmaster, in consideration of his teaching 5 poor children of Ridgway and Troway quarter. The master also had a dwelling house provided. This land is now let for £4 10s. per annum, which is paid to the master of the national school, who teaches 5 poor children free. Carter Lane 1 mile W. from Ridgway, consists of a few scattered farms. Carter Hall an ancient residence now in the occupation of Mr. Edwin Inman. Ford, 1 mile S. by W., situated in a deep glen, is a small hamlet, noted for its ancient sickle manufactory. High Lane, ½ mile N., consists of a few scattered houses. White Lane on the N.W., where is Charnock Hall, an ancient mansion, the property of George Rhodes, Esq. Sload Lane is a scattered district of farms, ½ mile W. Troway, the ancient seat of the sickle manufacture, is a small scattered village, situated on a lofty eminence in a sequestered spot, 1½ miles S.W. from Ridgway, and 6 miles N. by E. from Chesterfield. It forms with Ridgway ecclesiastically a distinct parish, but still keeps its poor with Eckington. Bramley a small village, 1 mile E. by S. from Troway, a little north of which is Bole Hill, another small hamlet. Marsh Lane a scattered district of houses, extending 2½ miles S. from Ridgway, and partly in Eckington quarter.

CHARITIES.—Margaret Foljambe, widow, in 1762, directed a rent charge of £5 per annum, to be paid out of a tenement at Barlborough Wood Lane End, and several closes of land called the Croft, the Little Ox close, the Great Meadow, and the Long Meadow. These premises are now in the possession of Sir S. R. Sitwell, subject to the above payment, which is distributed at the vestry on St. Thomas's day, 40s. thereof equally amongst 20 poor widows, and the residue to 60 other poor persons of the quarters of Eckington and Renishaw, in sums of 1s. each. An annual sum of £4 is received by the overseers, as a charge upon some part of the estate of E. S. Chandos Pole, Esq., which is given in sums varying from 1s. to 2s. 6d.

Jonathan Bromehead, in 1791, left on trust for the benefit of the poor, certain messuages in Eckington, and an allotment of land, containing 1A. 0R. 20P. on Eckington Marsh. The following benefactions may be considered as forming part of this charity, though given by the Rev. Joseph Bromehead and other persons of his family, in consequence of the loss of a legacy intended to have been given by the said Jonathan Bromehead. The sum of £200 in 1819, and the sum of £100 in 1827, were invested in the three per cent. consols. Out of the income of the charities, consisting of rents and dividends, seven 5d. loaves are given weekly to poor families of Eckington and Renshaw quarters.

Henry Inman, in 1711, devised his lands and tenements at Newbold, upon trust, the rents and profits thereof to provide strong warm blue gowns, with the letters H and I to be set upon one of the sleeves. The land is now let for £6 10s. per annum. One moiety thereof is given to Eckington quarter, and one moiety to Mosborough. In 1828, the ironstone and timber growing on this estate were sold for £102, which was laid out in the purchase of land at Bramley Brooks, the proceeds of which is applied as above.

MOSBOROUGH SCHOOL.—Joseph Stones, by will, dated 20th May, 1680, devised certain premises and lands, upon trust, to bestow the rents upon a schoolmaster, for teaching 15 poor children within the Bierlow of Mosborough. Proceedings were instituted by the Rev. Frederick Ricketts, and five others, for the purpose of having new trustees appointed and for the removal of the schoolmaster. Under an order of the Court of Chancery, 6th June, 1822, the property was vested in Luke Staniforth, Thomas Hutton, and five others, and the schoolmaster directed to give up possession of the school premises. The property consists of a dwelling house, homestead, croft and garden, containing 3R. 13P., the school, and a playground of one rood, the great and little Beighton Hill closes, 4 acres, which were divided by making a turnpike road, let for £14 8s.; the allotment in Street field, 3R. 22P., let for £3 15s.; an allotment on Mosborough Green made by the award of the Commissioners, 1804, containing 2A. 1R 23P. let for £10 6s. 7d. When the schoolmaster gave up possession the buildings were in bad condition, and £131 was expended in building a new schoolroom and repairs. The costs of the suit in Chancery was £156 8s. 6d. Early in 1823 a new master was appointed with a salary of £8, the remainder of the rents being reserved for liquidating the above expenses, for which 15 children of Mosborough are instructed in reading and writing.

The Rev. Francis Gisborne, in 1817, left £5 10s. per annum, to be expended in flannel and coarse woollens, and distributed to the poor in winter.

The yearly sum of 19s. from Denham's charity, is carried to the account of the poor-rate. (See Clown.)

Parish Lands.—At a court baron, in 1680, Margaret Freeton surrendered to the churchwardens and overseers for the use of the poor, the land now consisting of the Nether High Bramley, and the Upper High Bramley. An allotment of 1R. 15P. was set out to the overseers in respect thereof, at the enclosure. There is also a field, containing 1A. 1R. 22P. which is let by the parish officers. The rents of all these lands, amounting to £15 14s. per annum, are carried to the general account of the overseers.

RENISHAW SCHOOL.—Thomas Camm, in 1702, surrendered all his copyhold messuages and lands, upon trust, to cause a school house to be built. He also directed the yearly rents thereof, except 40s. a year for the repairs of the school, to be given for the maintenance of a schoolmaster, for instructing poor children of this parish free. In 1715, George Sitwell gave a messuage and croft adjoining, on trust, for the use of the schoolmaster, provided that no person be appointed master without the consent of George Sitwell or his heirs. Lady Fretchevill bequeathed £100 to this school. In 1719, this legacy with £20 given by Sir George Sitwell, Bart., to equalize an exchange of land, was laid out in the purchase of £200 11s. 4d. three per cent. consols.

Peter Cadman, in 1808, directed his executor to place out on government securities, a sufficient sum of money to secure £5 per annum, to be given to the free school at Eckington.

Lost Charities.—There are several benefactions mentioned on a tablet in the church, formerly given to the poor, which have been lost for many years, as well as the charities of Thomas and William Rotherham.

ELMTON parish contains the township of Elmton and part of the hamlet of Cresswell, which is also in Whitwell parish. The entire parish comprises an area of 2772A. 0R. 22P. of land, and in 1851 had 80 houses and 435 inhabitants, of whom 244 were males and 191 females; rateable value £2256 14s. 6d. It forms the eastern boundary of the Scarsdale Hundred, on the Nottinghamshire border. The soil is principally on lime stone, with a portion of strong clay, forming a fine agricultural district, having a bold undulating surface.

ELMTON, is a small village and township pleasantly situated in an open district, 9 miles E. by N. from Chesterfield; at the north extremity of the township is a romantic rocky ravine, designated "Markland's Grip," and much admired by Spencer Hall in his "Rural Rides." The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor and principal owner, besides which here are a few small freeholders. The commons situated at the north end of the village were enclosed in 1849. The Church, dedicated to St. Peter, is a plain modern stone edifice, with a chancel and low square tower, reaching only a few feet above the roof which is partly tiled and carried to form a gable. In the chancel, is a slab with a cross fleury engraved on it and this inscription in text hand, "Orate pro aia Roberti Berbi." The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £5 1s. 3d., now £120, has been augmented with £200 benefactions; £400 Queen Anne's bounty; and £300 parliamentary grant. The Duke of Portland is patron and the Rev. Wm. Senior Salman M.A., of Shireoaks, incumbent. The vicarage, a small ancient building a little north from the church, is occupied as a cottage. The late Rev. Mr. Foxlow, of Staveley, left a sum of money for a new vicarage house to be erected, but on account of the incumbent not residing here it has never taken place. Here is 1A. 1R. 3P. of glebe land, and the tithes are paid by a rent charge amounting to about £75. Here is a small day school. Arrangements are now being made for the erection of a Parochial school, which will shortly take place; and when built, will give accommodation to about 400 children of both sexes. It will be open to the inhabitants of the surrounding villages who chose to send their children to receive instruction. Considering the miserable state of education both at Elmton and the surrounding neighbourhood, the inhabitants will not only be glad of such a change, but also happy to find such good accommodation afforded to their Children. Feast, first Sunday after St. Peter's day. This place was formerly celebrated for its elm trees, which surrounded the churchyard and grounds, and it is most probable that from this the name Elmton arose, some of the finest elm trees which were ever known to exist have grown in this village. The trees which surrounded the churchyard have been cut down by the present incumbent. It is said here formerly was an old Roman encampment on the site now called the Sand-hill. When the commons were enclosed several ancient spear heads, some of which were of flint, were found here, also several old coins, all of which are in the possession of John Brown, Esq. In 1665 the whole parish of Elmton was let at a sum under £150 per annum.

Elmton Park, now in the occupation of John Brown, Esq., is a large and commodious residence, situated 1 mile E. from Elmton, was built by the late Heathcote Rodes, Esq.

The Park formerly belonged to Thurgarton Priory, Nottinghamshire, and consisted of the farm now occupied by Mr. Brown, the boundaries of which are still visible. The present occupier is about making great alterations to the house, he has also greatly improved the farm, which is now in a state of high cultivation, and is considered about the best in the district. Whaley Hall, 1 mile S.E. from Elmton, is a good substantial farm residence, the property of the Duke of Portland and occupied by Mr. Heaton Aldam. This place is noted as the birthplace of the celebrated arithmetical calculator, Jedediah Buxton, the son of the schoolmaster of Elmton and grandson of the vicar. He was born in 1707, and when a child he evinced the most excessive stupidity and unwillingness to learn anything, he was a day labourer totally devoid of ordinary education; how he first became acquainted with the relative proportions of numbers and their progressive denominations he did not know, but to this he applied the whole force of his mind, when he once understood a question he began to work with amazing facility, after his own method without the use of a pen, pencil or chalk, or even understanding the common rules of arithmetic; he would stride over a piece of land and calculate the contents of it as if it had been measured by a chain. In this way he measured the extensive manor of Elmton, and brought Sir John Rodes the contents, not only in acres, roods, and perches, but in square inches; and afterwards, for his own amusement, reduced them into square hair's breadths. On another occasion, a person once proposed to him this question: in a body, the three sides of which are 23,145,789 yards, 5,642,732 yards, and 54,965 yards, how many cubic eighths of an inch. In about 5 hours he actually solved this intricate problem, though in the midst of business, and surrounded by more than one hundred labourers. There is an engraved portrait of him taken from a drawing made by Miss Hartley, in January, 1764, at which period according to his own calculations he had existed 1,792,230,823 seconds; he died in 1777 in his 70th year.

At the Norman survey they were at Helmetune, a church and a priest. In the time of Edward III. the Church was given by Ralph Deincourt, its founder, to Thurgarton priory, Nottinghamshire. The manor at Domesday survey, belonged to Walter Deincourt, in whose family it continued till the death of William, Lord Deincourt, in 1442. Ralph, Lord Cromwell, who married one of his sisters and coheiress, died seized of it in 1454, his sister and heiress brought it to Sir Wm. Lovell. In 1485 on the attainder of William, Lord Lovel it was granted to Sir John Savage, and in the reign of Queen Elizabeth came into the possession of Sir Francis Rodes, in whose family it remained until 1854, when William Hatfield de Rodes, Esq., sold it to the late Duke of Portland.

Cresswell is a hamlet and scattered village, being about 1 mile in length; it is situated 2 miles N.E. from Elmton and 10 miles E.N.E. from Chesterfield, the land is principally on limestone, producing good corn. The Duke of Portland is the principal owner and lord of the manor, which is freehold, besides several smaller owners. It is said that the manor of Whitwell extends into Cresswell, which part was given to Welbeck abbey, by Ralph Cordi. Cresswell is partly in Elmton parish, and partly in Whitwell parish, the river Wallen dividing the two parishes. Cresswell Crags, a singular and beautiful assemblage of rocks, near the N.E. extremity of the township, and on the verge of Nottinghamshire, 3 miles S.W. from Worksop. Lying out of the way of good roads, and almost inaccessible for carriages, they are not often visited by tourists, though remarkably curious—consisting of lofty precipitious rocks, torn by some convulsion of nature into a thousand romantic shapes, and presenting a minature representation of the more majestic scenery of the Derwent or Dove. The house now occupied by Mr. James Aldam, is supposed formerly to have been a Roman Catholic chapel; it is in the Elizabethan style of architecture, several additions and improvements have been made to it during the time Mr. Aldam has occupied it; some time ago, whilst repairing the house, an old constable's bill was found here, dated the time of Cromwell, also a piece of silver coin of a date before the time of Christ, the latter of which was sold during the Exhibition at London, in 1851. Frithwood, 1 mile N.E., is a good substantial farm residence in the occupation of Messrs. Edward and John Wilson.

HEATH is a small compact agricultural village and parish, situate on the Chesterfield and Mansfield road, 4½ miles S.E. from the former, and 7¾ miles N.W. from the latter. It contains 1608A. 34P. of land, and in 1851 had 83 houses and 378 inhabitants, of whom 201 were males and 177 females; of this number 30 averaged above 77 years of age; rateable value, £1850. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and owner of 999A. 0R. 5P. of land. Earl Manvers owns 457A. 0R. 6P.; and the Exors. of the late Sir Jas. Hunloke 144A. 0R. 23P.; besides which here are about 8A. owned by other individuals. The old Church was taken down in 1852, and the present one erected and consecrated in 1853. It is a small, handsome stone building, dedicated to All Saints, and has a tower, surmounted by a fine spire and three bells. It will accommodate about 150, of which 80 sittings are free. The cost of the building was about £1,350, raised by subscription, towards which the Duke of Devonshire gave £400 and the site; and a grant of £50 was obtained from the Church Building Society. In the east end of the church is a handsome stained window, representing Christ's resurrection and ascension. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £4 18s. 9d., now £174, in the presentation of the Duke of Devonshire, and incumbency of the Rev. G. H. Arkwright, who resides at the vicarage—a large handsome mansion, situated about the centre of the village. Here are 5A. of glebe land, and the tithes have been commuted for £230. Here is a school, endowed in 1687, with £15 per annum, by the Countess and Earl of Devonshire. It is a small, neat building, erected in 1821, and is situated a short distance from the parsonage. The children pay 2d., 4d., and 6d. per week, for instruction. About 50 attend. The church of Heath, alias Lowne, or Lund, was given to the Abbey of Croxton, at the time of its foundation, in 1162, and the great tithes appropriated to that monastry. The advowson was given by Queen Mary to the burgesses of Derby, but now belongs to the Duke of Devonshire. It is supposed that it came into the possession of the present proprietor in the sixth year of the reign of Edward VI., when Mr. Cavendish had in exchange for his estates in Hertfordshire several lands and manors belonging to dissolved priories and abbeys in Derbyshire. The manor was given by Robert de Ferrers, Earl of Derby, to the monks of Gerondon, in Leicestershire, and was probably granted to the Earl of Shrewsbury. Owlcotes, or Oldcotes, a farm house one mile N.W. Here formerly was a noble mansion, one of the three built by Elizabeth Countess of Shrewsbury. The mansion and estate passed with one of the Earl of Shrewsbury's grand-daughters to to the Pierrepont family, and was in 1673 the seat of George Pierrepont, Esq., grandson of the Earl of Kingston. The house was taken down many years ago, and the estate belongs to Earl Manvers.

KILLAMARSH is a parish and widely scattered village, 8½ miles N.E. by N. from Chesterfield, and bordering on Yorkshire, from which county it is separated on the north-west by a small stream, which falls into the river Rother. The parish contains several small hamlets, besides Killamarsh, otherwise Church-town, the whole of which comprise an area of 1,601A. 2R. 5P. of land, and in 1851, had 210 houses, and a population of 1,070 souls, of whom 543 were males and 527 females; rateable value £3,838 4s. 10d. E. S. C. Pole, Esq., is the principal owner, and lord of the manor, which is freehold, Sir S. R. Sitwell, Bart., Messrs. Joseph and George Wells, Mr. Wm. Lowe, Mrs. Charlotte Storey, with several others, are also owners. The soil is various, mostly strong, with a full proportion of arable. The Church, dedicated to St. Giles, a venerable stone edifice, was formerly in the Norman style, of which the archway inside the porch is all that now remains. The chancel was rebuilt in 1846, by the present rector, at a cost of £600.; it is in the late decorated style. The body of the church is now in the Tudor style of architecture; it contains nave, chancel, porch, and tower, in which are 6 bells, placed there by the inhabitants. The eastern window is a beautiful specimen of painted glass, by the celebrated Warrington. The living is a rectory, which was annexed to the rectory of Eckington, from which it was separated by an Order of Council, June 10th, 1843, pursuant to the plans of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and was declared to be an independent rectory, and is of the value of £320, of which £120 is paid by Eckington. It is in the patronage of the Crown, and incumbency of the Rev. Edward Herbert Smith, B.A. Here are 100 acres of glebe land, and the tithes were commuted in 1844, for £200. An inscription on a tablet outside the church, states that John Wright, a pauper of the parish, died May 4th, 1797, in the 103rd year of his age, and that he was temperate and cheerful, and in the trying situation of darkness, poverty, and old age, bore his infirmities with such christian meekness as excited the benevoleuce of good men, and is here recorded as an instructive lesson to others. The Independent Chapel, is a small neat stone building, erected in 1852. Here is free school, endowed by Robt. Turie, and others, about 46 attend, 25 of which are instructed free. The Chesterfield canal passes the parish on the west and north side, and crosses a deep narrow ravine and foot road by an aqueduct. The Midland railway also crosses the western boundary. Feast, first Sunday after St. Giles. Bridgefoot, 1½ miles W. is a small hamlet, consisting of a few farms and cottages: here is a bridge over the Chesterfield canal. Gannow Lane, a road extending to the N., where at one mile distance, is Gannow House, the seat of Thomas Need, Esq., J.P., and property of the Rev. Geo. Alderson. High Moor Top, situated on an eminence ½ mile E., consists of a few farms. Nethergreen with Littlemoor, and Nethermoor, a district of scattered houses, extending 1 mile N.W. Netherthorpe, ¾ mile W.S.W., is a small scattered village, situated at the foot of a lofty range of hills; the Forge, about 1 mile distant, is a small village, where is Killamarsh Old Hall, a neat residence occupied by Mr. Wm. Lowe. Messrs. Webster and Horsfall of Birmingham, have an establishment here, for the manufacture of their patented music wire, and also for the refining of steel. Upper Thorpe is a small village, situated on a lofty eminence ½ mile S. West Thorpe is a small village, ¾ mile S. from the church. This place, Chinewoldemaresc, at the Domesday survey, is described as being in two manors, one of them belonging to Ascot Musard, the other to the King's Thanes. In the reign of King John, Hugh de Dovecote had a manor, and in the following reign, Cecily Meynell; and in that of Edward II., Hugh son of William de Kinwaldmarsh. At a later period there is no record of any other manor than that held by the family of Hathersage, which passed in moieties to the Longfords and Goushills. Sir Ralph Longford died seized of a moiety in 1513, and Sir William Holles died seized of the other moiety in 1542. Sir Thomas Holles sold his moiety to Sir Richard Pype and George Basford. Sir Richard died seized of it in 1587; in 1817 it was the property of Sir George Sitwell Bart. The Hewitts had considerable property in this parish, which passed to the Osbornes. This manor was held by the tennre of providing for the King's army in Wales, a horse of the value of 5s., with a sack and spur for four days.

CHARITIES.—William Hewitt, in 1599, gave £100 to be invested in land the proceeds thereof to be expended in bread, and distributed to the poor. The amount was laid out in land, at Cawthorne, Yorkshire. About the year 1807, the churchwarden and overseer agreed to exchange this property with Mr. Stanhope, but, at a meeting of the freeholders and inhabitants, it was resolved this exchange should not be ratified; and by a decree, 8th May, 1811, the exchange was set aside. The premises consist of 15A. 2R., let at the rent of £45 per annum. In 1813, timber on the estate was cut and sold for £365, and £69 18s. 7d. was also due from Mr. Thomas Ward, as the receiver of the charity. A distribution of sixpenny loaves is made every week, so as to keep the expenditure nearly equal with the income.

William Hewitt, in 1480, left a rent-charge of 15s. yearly, out of the town close, which is distributed with Ward's charity.

John Ward, in 1669, left £3 12s. per annum, out of land called Hautcliff, which is paid by Sir Sitwell Reresby Sitwell, and given to the poor in half-crowns.

John Kay, in 1741, directed ten penny loaves, three coats and three gowns, to be paid out of his lands called Broad close, the Delves, and the Boiley close.

Henry Murfin, in 1744, left a rent-charge of £5, out of the Broomhills, for a distribution of coats and gowns, to five poor men and five poor women..

Sarah Pole, in 1747, left £30 for a distribution of bread every Sunday.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annnal sum of £7 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in flannel and given to the poor.

KILLAMARSH SCHOOL.—Robert Turie, by will, 1720, gave his house and close, called Six lands, in Killamarsh, on trust, to apply the profits thereof to instruct six poor children, the premises are let for £7 10s. per annum. John Kaye, 1531, gave a messuage for a school-house, which is now used as a school, and kept in repair by the parish. Sarah Pole, in 1747, gave £30 to buy books and teach three poor children to read, at the Free-school. Phillis Butcher, 1746, gave £30, the interest to pay for four poor children learning to read and write. Margaret and Mary Pole, 1753 granted a messuage and several pieces of land, on trust, for the benefit of the school; one piece was sold to the Chesterfield Canal Company for £60, which with £30 from Sarah Pole's gift was placed in the hands of John Billham, who became insolvent about 1796, afterwards the sum of £68 4s. 3d. was received as dividends, and £56 was placed in the hands of Sir George Sitwell, at 5 per cent. The income of the school amounts to £29, part of which is paid to a schoolmaster, who instructs 25 poor children, and the remainder goes for the reparation of four cottages.

LANGWITH, commonly called Upper Langwith, is a parish and scattered village on the border of Nottinghamshire, 6 miles S. by W. from Mansfield, and 3 miles S.E. from Bolsover, contains 1,444 acres of land, including 261 acres of wood, and in 1851 had 40 houses, and 198 inhabitants, of whom 100 were males, and 98 females; estimated rental £1328. Duke of Devonshire is principal owner and lord of the manor. Earl Bathurst and Mr. Joseph Nicholson are also small owners. The Church, St. Helen's, is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £4 0s. 2½d., now £204; Duke of Devonshire, patron. Rev. Immanuel Halton, incumbent. The church is a small ancient stone structure with a low tower, which contains 2 bells. The advowson of the rectory belonged to Thurgarton priory, having been given to it by Ralph Deincourt, the founder. The rectory is a small house east of the church, with 40 acres of glebe; the tithe has been commuted for £202. In 1825 His Grace erected a school, to which he gives £15 per annum for the education of the poor children of the parish. The manor acquired the name of Langwith Bassett from the family of Bassett, to whom it belonged as early as the reign of Edward III., and who had two parks here in 1330. This manor, together with Houghton Filley and Houghton Bassett, partly in this parish and partly in the parish of Pleasley, were conveyed by Lord Grey to the Vavasours in 1493; from the Vavasours they passed to the Hardwicks, before the reign of Queen Elizabeth; the heiress of Hardwick brought them to Sir William Cavendish. Here is a lodge of Odd Fellows. Vickers House, a farm, ½ mile N. and Roseland, a farm, ¾ mile S.W. from the village.

CHARITIES.—Countess and Earl of Devonshire's Charities.—(See Edensor.)

MORTON a parish and pleasant village, on the Matlock and Mansfield road, 3¼ miles N. from Alfreton, 7 miles S. by E. from Chesterfield, 17 miles N.N.E. from Derby, and 1¼ mile S.E. from Stretton railway station, contains 1233A. 0R. 31P. of land, of which 115A. 23P. are detached within the township of North Wingfield, and 15A. 2R. 25P. in that of Woodthorpe, and in 1851 had 52 houses, and 257 inhabitants, of whom 129 were males, and 128 females; rateable value £1486 17s. 6d. Edward Degge Sitwell, Esq., is lord of the manor and principal owner; Mrs. Elizabeth Radford Oldham, and the executors of the late Thomas Oldham have also estates here. The Church, dedicated to the Holy Cross, was, with the exception of the tower, thoroughly restored in 1850, at a cost of £700 raised by subscriptions. It is a neat stone edifice in the decorated style, containing nave, chancel, aisles, and embattled tower, with three bells. In the chancel is a beautiful memorial window to Mrs. Anne Turbutt, filled with stained glass, the subjects are "Christ bearing the Cross," "The Crucifixion," and "The Resurrection." In the church are handsome monuments to the memory of William Turbutt, Esq., of Ogston hall, who died December 25th, 1836; to Miss E. Turbutt, who died March 29th, 1834; to the Rev. Richard Burrow Turbutt, M.A., late rector, who died January 30th, 1841; and a neat marble tablet to Anne, wife of the late Wm. Turbutt, Esq., who died September 7th, 1855, aged 76 years. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £11 10s., now £460; in the alternate patronage of St. John's College, Cambridge, and Gladwin Turbutt, Esq. The Rev. Thos. Lund, B.D., incumbent. The tithes have been commuted for £203 12s. 6d. for Morton, those in North Wingfield, £20 13s., and in Woodthorpe for £2 2s. 6d. Camomile is extensively grown in this parish. The chapelry of Brackenfield has been made a distinct parish. The manors of Morton and Ogston, which had been given by Wulfric Spott to Burton Abbey, at the Domesday survey, belonged to Walter Deincourt; and Roger Deincourt, in 1330, claimed a park, and the right of having a gallows for the execution of criminals; this manor (Morton) passed with other estates to the Leakes, and on the death of Nicholas Leake, Earl of Scarsdale, in 1736, the Earl's trustees sold it to Henry Thornhill, of Chesterfield, gent., and others, of whom it was purchased, in 1749, by Francis Sitwell, Esq., of Renishaw; under the will of his sister and heir, Mrs. Elizabeth Sitwell, it passed to Richard Staunton Wilmot, who took the name of Sitwell, and after his death to his next brother, Edward Sacheverel Wilmot, who took the name of Sitwell in addition to that of Wilmot.

CHARITIES.—William Bacon is stated in the Parliamentary Returns of 1786, to have given an annual sum of £2. That sum, designated Easter money, is now received by the overseer from two estates at Alfreton. 20s. is distributed at Morton, and 20s. by the overseer of Brackenfield.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. is received by the incumbent, and laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, which is given amongst the poor.

Elenora Turbutt, who died in 1826, by will, directed her executors to distribute yearly, out of her personal property, the sum of £20 to the poor of Shirland and Morton.

CHURCH REPAIRS.—An annual sum of 6s. 8d., supposed to have been given for this purpose, is charged upon a farm in Morton, and is carried to the Churchwardens' general account.

NORMANTON, SOUTH, a parish, and considerable village, near the eastern verge of the county, 2½ miles E.N.E. from Alfreton, and 18 miles N. by E. from Derby, contains 1879A. 2R. 31P. of land, exclusive of 36A. 37P. of roads; and in 1851, had 266 houses, and 1340 inhabitants, of whom 664 were males, and 676 females; rateable value, £3,722. The principal owners are, Thos. Radford, Esq., Rev. C. Evans, John Wilkinson, Esq., and Mrs. Langhorn; the former is lord of the manor. The Church, dedicated to St. Michael, is a plain ancient structure of the 13th or 14th century, with a square embattled tower, containing a good peal of five bells. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £9 15s. 6d., now £333. Thos. Radford, Esq. is the patron, and the Rev. Fredk. Doveton, M.A., the incumbent; the Rev. Rich. Howard Frizell, B.A., is the resident officiating curate. The Rectory is a good house, with spacious grounds, and has 37 acres of glebe; the tithe was commuted under the new act for £345. A National School for boys and girls was erected in 1849; it is a plain brick building, where about 70 children are instructed. The Wesleyans, Wesleyan Reformers, and Primitive Methodists, have each places of worship here. The late Jedediah Strutt, Esq., the ingenious inventor of the frame for manufacturing ribbed stockings, was a native of this village. The soil is mostly clay, in some parts a fertile loam, and abounds in coal and minerals.

Carnfield Hall, 1 mile E. from Alfreton, a beautiful mansion, is the seat and property of Thomas Radford, Esq. Carter Lane, half mile S.E. of Normanton, a few scattered farms. Normanton Woodhouse, ¾ mile S.W. of Normanton, a small village. The coal trade has for some time been declining in this parish, and there are now upwards of 50 cottages unoccupied, though there are seven beds of coal of which only the top bed has been got. Feast, nearest Sunday to Michaelmas day. A foot-post to Alfreton, daily.

CHARITIES.—Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., is received by the incumbent, and laid out in woollen cloth and flannel, which is distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Saml. Bingham, from Birchwood lane, To Chesterfield, Sat.; Nottingham, Wed.; and Mansfield, Th.

NORTON is an extensive and widely-scattered parish, containing the six hamlets of Norton, Norton Lees, Norton Woodseats, Hemsworth, Greenhill, and Bradway, the whole of which keep their poor conjointly, and are in the Ecclesall Bierlow Union, parish of Sheffield, which, together, comprise 4,630A. of land; and in 1851 had 384 houses, and 1,856 inhabitants, of whom 957 were males, and 899 females; rateable value, £7,500. The parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Sheffield, in Yorkshire, from which it is separated by the river Sheaf, which rises on the western side of the parish. On the east it is bounded by Ridgway and Troway; on the north east by a small stream, the Mearsbrook, which unites with the river Sheaf at Heeley; and on the south by the parish of Dronfield. It occupies an undulating and well-wooded surface; and the land, which is very fertile, is mostly a strong cold clay, with small intermixtures of gravel. It is well drained, and here are many large dairies of milch cows, the produce of which finds a ready market at Sheffield. The manufacture of scythes, sickles, files, and cutlery is extensively carried on, in connection with, and forming a part, of the corporation of the cutlers of Hallamshire, of which Sheffield is the centre. Edward Bury, Esq., is lord of the manor, and the principal owners are, F. W. Bagshawe, Esq., Charles Cammell, Esq., E. V. P. Burnell, Esq., Miss Shore, Mrs. Newton Shore, and Mr. William Lister, besides several smaller owners.

NORTON is a small, well-built village, pleasantly situated on an eminence, 7½ miles N. by W. from Chesterfield, and 4 miles south from Sheffield. In the centre of its extensive, picturesque, and fertile parish, is the Church, dedicated to St. James, a spacious and handsome structure, with a square tower, in which are six bells. In the latter part of the twelfth century, Robert, son of Ralph, Lord of Alfreton, Norton, and Marnham, and founder of Beauchief Abbey, gave it to that religious house. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £6 13s. 4d., now £228, has been augmented with £200 Queen Anne's bounty, and £200 benefactions. The Rev. Henry Pearson, LL.D., patron; the Rev. H. H. Pearson, M.A., incumbent; and the Rev. T. T. Sale, M.A., curate. The presentation of the living was bought by the present patron of Cavendish Neville, Esq., about 60 years ago, who at the same time sold the rectoral tithes to S. Shore, Esq., and other landowners. Jeffery Blythe, Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, and a native of this parish, who died in 1534, built a chapel at Norton, and erected an alabaster tomb over the remains of his parents, and appointed a chantry for them. John Blythe, Bishop of Salisbury, was also a native of this parish. The tomb, now considerably defaced, has been richly sculptured, having a recumbent male figure, in full canonicals, with a female in the dress of the time of Queen Anne. On the north side of the communion table is a marble slab with a medallion likeness of Sir Francis Leggitt Chantrey, with the following inscription:—"Sir Francis Chantrey, R.A., H.D.C.L., F.R.S., M.A. Born 7th April, 1781. Died 25th November, 1841." He lies in the churchyard, interred in an oblong vault, having a neat flat stone, with inscriptions to his grandfather, his father and mother, with one to himself. It is a plain stone, surrounded by iron pallisades. His father died in 1793, aged 45; his mother in 1826, aged 81 years. His father was a carpenter, and cultivated a few acres of land. The farm cottage in which this "British Phidias" was born was rebuilt some years ago; the village school, in which he received his education, still exists.

It appears Chantrey was engaged, at a very early period of his life, in carrying milk from Norton to Sheffield, in barrels, on an ass; when it was his frequent practice to linger on the road to form grotesque figures of the yellow clay—his genius found its sufficient materials and instruments in the very commonest of articles, affording a striking exemplification of the adage, that "necessity is the parent of invention." He was, for a short time, placed with Mr. Birks, of Sheffield, with the intention of his becoming a grocer, but was afterwards put to a carver and gilder, named Ramsay; here he improved himself in drawing, and made his first experiments in that branch of the fine arts, in the cultivation of which he afterwards stood pre-eminent amongst his countrymen. In April, 1802, the individual destined to become so eminent as a sculptor, and then only 20 years of age, advertised, in Sheffield, to take portraits in crayons. In October, 1804, he announced he had commenced taking models from life. In reference to painting, he modestly expressed himself, saying that he "trusts in being happy to produce good and satisfactory likenesses, and no exertions on his part shall be wanting, to render his humble efforts deserving some small share of public patronage." Several of his productions, in chalk and oil, are still to be seen, which are more prized for the celebrity of the artist, than as striking likenesses. Chantrey after this went to London, and improved himself by attendance at the Royal Academy; when he returned to Sheffield, and modelled four busts of well-known characters, as large as life, viz., Rev. J. Wilkinson, Dr. Younge, Mr. Wheat, and Mr. Hunt. These were such masterly performances that, when it was resolved to erect a monument to the Rev. James Wilkinson, Chantrey had the courage to become a candidate for the commission (though he had not yet lifted a chisel to marble), when it was readily entrusted to him. Having employed a marble mason to rough-hew, he commenced the task with a hand trembling yet determined, and an eye keenly looking after the effect of every stroke, till the form slowly developed; at length the countenance came out of the stone, and stared its parent in the face. The throes and anguish of that first birth of his genius in marble, enabled him ever after, with comparative ease, to give being and body to the mightiest conceptions. This plain but admirable monument adorns the parish church of Sheffield, and transcends every other that has come from the same hand; since the experienced and renowned proficient can never again be placed on a trial so severe, with an issue so momentous, as the youthful aspirant, unknown and unpractised, had to endure in this first essay of his skill. In 1807, Chantrey went to London, and soon after commenced his career as a sculptor; he visited Dublin and Edinburgh, but in the former of which he received little patronage, and the latter was blind to his genius. In the years 1808-9, accordingly he still found himself comparatively a friendless artist in London. About this time he sent a bust to the exhibition of the Royal Academy, which attracted the attention of Nollekins, who instantly said, "remove one of my busts and put that in its place, for it well deserves it;" the bust was universally admired, and Nollekins immediately took the young artist under his protection, and to the last declared, "if you want a bust, Chantrey's the man," whenever he was applied to on this subject. The opportunity once secured, Chantrey's genius did the rest. The busts of Walter Scott, Sir John Banks, Lord St. Vincent, the Duke of Sussex, George III., George IV., William IV., and a host of others, evince his excellence. One of the most celebrated works, though perhaps less known than many others, owing to its remote situation, is the group at Ilam, representing Mr. Watts giving his dying benediction to his daughter, the late Mrs. Russell, and her two children. Another of his productions is the inimitable group in Lichfield cathedral. It is said Chantrey was requested to see the monument in Ashbourn church, to Penelope, only daughter of Sir Brooke Boothby (an exquisite monument, by Banks), before he executed the Lichfield monument. He accordingly visited Ashbourn for that purpose, and after inspecting it visited Dove Dale, and returned to Ashbourn in the evening; having to wait several hours of the coach, he took out his sketch-book and made the drawing before the coach arrived, the design thus made for the Lichfield monument was, with scarcely any variation, executed in marble, in a very short period, and submitted to public inspection in the Royal Academy. The sensation which this produced has had no parallel in the annals of modern art. Sir F. L. Chantrey, Knt., R.A., D.C.L., Oxon, M.A., Cantab, F.R.S., was elected Associate to the Royal Academy in 1816, and chosen a Royal Academacian in 1818; he was also a member of the academies of Rome and Florence. He received the title of baronet from George III.

About the year 1666 the manor of Norton was purchased by Cornelius Clarke, Esq., of Ashgate, who dying in 1696 bequeathed it to his nephew, Mr. Robert Offley, of Norwich. In the year 1751 Stephen Offley, Esq., of Norton, died, and left issue, a son and two daughters. The son dying without issue, the manor of Norton became the property of Samuel Shore, Esq., who married one of his sisters; by her he had two sons. Samuel, the elder son, married Miss Harriet Foye, of Castle Hill, in the county of Dorset, whose son, Offley Shore, Esq., succeeded to the manor, but whose misfortunes, from the family having been bankers at Sheffield, placed the manor in the hands of assignees for the term of his life. Near the east end of the village a small Unitarian chapel was erected by the late S. Shore, Esq., previous to which a room in Norton Hall was used for that purpose; but the building is now closed. The Wesleyan Reformers have a neat stone chapel here, erected by T. B. Holy, Esq., in 1854. It will hold about 100. In 1855, Miss Lydia Shore erected a school at Bole Hill, for boys and girls, with a residence for the teacher. It is neatly fitted up with every convenience, and will hold about 70, the average attendance being about thirty. Norton Hall is a large handsome stone mansion, in the village of Norton, the seat of Charles Cammell, Esq. Norton House is a large and ancient mansion, the seat of Thomas Beard Holy, Esq. At Maugerhay is a free school, situated a little to the S.E. of Norton, where about 60 children are now educated. Here is a bowling green, much frequented by pleasure parties from Sheffield. Near this to the S.E. is The Oaks, a handsome mansion situated in a fine park, the seat and property of F. W. Bagshawe, Esq. Norton Lees and Woodseats division forms the north side of the parish, and includes Bole Hill, Heeley Mill, Little London, Norton Hammer, and Smithy Wood. Meersbrook, 1½ mile S. of Sheffield, a handsome modern brick mansion, delightfully situated on a bold eminence above the Meersbrook, commanding a fine view of the Sheaf vale, is the seat and property of the Misses Shore.

NORTON LEES is a scattered though pleasant village, two miles S. by E. from Sheffield, having several neat villa residences, which command a fine view of the town of Sheffield. It was formerly the property of the De Gotham family, whose heiress, Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas de Gotham, carried the estate to the Parkers, a good family, of Bulwell, in Nottinghamshire, who built Lees Hall, in the reign of Richard II., and continued to reside there till the reign of Henry VIII. From this family the present Earl of Macclesfield is descended. There is an ancient, half-timbered house, in which are several rare oak carvings, on one of which is a date, "W. B. 1627," in good preservation.

NORTON WOODSEATS, a small village, three miles S. by W. from Sheffield, situated on the Chesterfield road, which from Heeley takes a circuitous course on a terrace above the vale of the Sheaf, crossing a wood on a rapid declivity, where is Woody Vale, Norton Hammer, and Smithy Wood Bottom, having Woodside on the road, from which a most extensive view over the Sheaf to Ecclesall, extending to the distant moors, is obtained.

HEMSWORTH is a small pleasant village, 1 mile E. from Norton, where the magistrates hold a petty session for the north-western part of the hundred, at the Bagshawe Arms, on the second Wednesday in every month.

GREENHILL is an ancient village, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. of Norton. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here; where, also, is a National school. It is built on land set out under the Norton enclosure act, which passed in 1803, for the use of the village. It was originally built as an infant school, and was enlarged in 1843, aided by a grant from the National School Society, and £40 from the Educational Society.

Bradway is a small hamlet and village, forming the S.W. boundary of the parish, on the Calver turnpike road, $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles S. by W. from Sheffield.

CHARITIES.—NORTON SCHOOL.—Edward Gill, in observance of the will of his father, Leonard Gill, granted a messuage, garden, and piece of ground, in Norton, to the use of a schoolmaster. The said Edward Gill granted a dwelling-house with gardens, two scythe wheels, and three acres of land, in Ecclesall, upon trust, for the maintenance of the schoolmaster; and he also granted a yearly rent-charge of five marks, issuing out of a piece of ground called the Birks, in Brimington, to pay for the education of five poor children, to be nominated by his heirs. John Gill, the heir, by deed, 1748, sold the premises and the right of appointment of master and scholars, to Richard Bagshawe, and his heirs. The property now consists of the school room (rebuilt by subsciption about 1788,); a house and land at Moss Car, and two grinding wheels, let for £48 per annum; an allotment of five perches on Sheffield moor, set out in 1792 to Norton school, let for £1 1s.; and a rent charge of £3 6s. 8d.; making a total of £52 7s. 8d. In addition to the above, are—Stone's rent-charge of £5. Scriven's legacy of £60 (producing £2 8s.,) Wingfield's rent-charge of £5, Bagshaw's interest £1, Newton's interest £5 5s., and Shepperd's interest £4.—amounting together to £22 13s. In consideration of these sums the master instructs 59 children.

Nicholas Stone, by will, 1676, devised certain lands to trustees, out of the rents thereof to pay the vicar of Norton £5 yearly, to the schoolmaster £5, and the residue to be applied in apprenticing a poor boy to some manual trade. The property is situated at Bretton, in Eyam parish, and consists of a house and 36A. 37P. of land, including an allotment of 5A. 2R. producing a rental of £25 per annum. It is intended to increase the sum of £2, usually given for apprentice fees, a considerable balance being in hand.

William Scriven, in 1724, left £60, the interest to be paid to the schoolmaster to teach six children. He also gave £80, the produce thereof to be given in apprentice fees; and, by a codocil to his will, he directed his executors to clothe one poor man and one poor woman out of a further sum of £60 left for that purpose. Some dispute arose at the death of John Bagshawe, Esq., in 1801, respecting this charity, but by a subsequent arrangement the late W. J. Bagshawe, Esq., took the whole responsibility upon himself.

John Storie, in 1674, bequeathed £100 to be invested in land for the poor. This legacy, it is supposed, was laid out in purchase of Chausett Wood Fields at Beauchief, containing nine or ten acres, let for £15 per annum. A sum of £8 a year is received from a farm at Woodend in Beauchief, purchased with £440, £400 thereof having been a legacy left by the said John Storie, to be laid out in land, to be settled on the vicarage of Norton, the sum of £40 having been money belonging to the poor. In 1804, timber was sold, and the sum of £150 three per cent. consols, purchased. The income, £27 10s., is distributed amongst poor persons of the parish.

John Wingfield, in 1731, gave £200 to be laid out in land, the produce to be given one year in clothing, and the next in money, on Michaelmas day. The amount was invested in land at Litton, which now consists of 18A. 0R. 23P. including an allotment of 9A. 2R. 3P. The rent, amounting to £20 per annum, is distributed according to the donor's intention.

Richard Rose, in 1744, gave £100, and directed the interest to be given to six poor widows. In 1806, the money was put into the hands of Mr. Shore, at five per cent. interest.

Robert Newton, Esq., 1784, in addition to £105 given towards the support of the school, also bequeathed £200 for the benefit of the poor of Norton. In 1806, the amount was paid into the hands of Mr. Shore at five per cent. interest.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the vicar, is laid out in woollen and flannel and given to the poor.

Bocking Fields.—In 1658, a sum of £45, belonging to the poor of the parish, was laid out in the Johnset Wood Field, containing six acres, in Beauchief. The rent, £9 per annum, appears always to have been carried to the account of the poors' rate.

Poors' Land.—About half an acre of land, at Hemsworth, was received in exchange, in 1803, for a cottage and croft, devised in 1691. The land is let in small gardens, and the rent, £3, is applied in aid of the poors' rate.

Isaac Shepherd, by will, 1811, left £100 to be invested in land, the profits thereof to be laid out in bread, and distributed to the poor of Greenhill and Bradway. This legacy was not laid out in land, but placed in the hands of William Law, one of the executors, upon whose death a suit in Chancery was instituted. Interest, however, appears to have been paid by Mr. Charles Brookfield, solicitor, of Sheffield, who was concerned in the cause. By a codicil to his will, £80 was left to Norton school, which was also in the hands of Mr. Law.

PINXTON, a township, parish, and scattered village, near the western verge of the county, 3½ miles E. by S. from Alfreton and 6 miles S.W. from Mansfield, extends partly into Nottinghamshire, which is rateable to the poor, but not titheable to the rector. It contains 1223A. of strong land, and in 1851 had 175 houses and 943 inhabitants, of whom 504 were males, and 439 females; rateable value £2179 5s. 9d. The principal owners are Wm. S. Coke, Esq., Mr. John Coupe, Mr. John Coupe, jun., and Mr. Wm. Cutler, the former is lord of the manor, and patron of the living. The Church, dedicated to St. Helen, is a small edifice on an eminence in the centre of the parish. It was rebuilt about a century ago, and has a nave, chancel, and tower, with two bells. The tower, supposed to be 500 years old, is a distinct building on the south side the chancel, in which are monuments to the Coke and Lillyman families. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £6 0s. 10d., now £280. The Rev. Ellis Williams is the rector, who resides at the rectory, a good mansion near the east end of the village. A school with residence for the master was erected here by the late D'Ewes Coke, Esq. The tithe is commuted under the new act. The parish was enclosed about 43 years ago. Here is a branch of the Erewash canal, with a wharf, about half a mile S.W. of Pinxton, and a coal wharf for the collieries of Messrs. Coke & Co. G. Wheatcroft & Son, carriers have also a warehouse. This is now generally called New Town. The Methodists have a chapel here, and one at Pinxton. The Erewash Valley branch of the Midland railway runs through the parish and has a station here, which, together with the canal, opens an extensive market for the coals of this neighbourhood to all parts of the kingdom. Brook Hill Hall, in a richly wooded district, is the picturesque seat of Wm. S. Coke, Esq., 1 mile N.E. of Pinxton Church; it is situated within the Nottinghamshire boundary, at the foot of a gentle declivity, with a verdant lawn, and the pleasant valley of the Erewash in front. Sleights House, 1 mile W. from Pinxton. Upper Birch Wood, 1 mile S.W., is a district of scattered farms. Feast, nearest Sunday to Old Michaelmas day.

CHARITIES.—Rev. D'Ewes Coke, who died in 1811, directed his trustees and their heirs, out of the profits of his collieries, to pay a yearly sum of £5, to be employed in the purchase of books, to be distributed amongst poor children. The books are usually given to children attending an unendowed school.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, and laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, which is distributed to the poor.

PLEASLEY, is a considerable parish, consisting of the townships of Pleasley, Shirebrook and Stoney Houghton, which together contain 3193A. 2R. of land, principally of limestone, and in 1851 had 126 houses and 654 inhabitants, of whom 314 were males, and 340 females; rateable value, £2,877 9s. 0d. It is situated on the Nottinghamshire border, from which it is separated on the south and east by the river Meden or Mayden, which rises near Skegby, 3 miles W. from Mansfield, running north to Hardwick, it turns to the east, through a deep romantic valley, passes Pleasley, where it again turns north, forming a very irregular boundary.

PLEASLEY, a small village, on a pleasant eminence, having a rapid declivity to the south, on the Mansfield and Chesterfield road, at its junction with the Rotherham and Clown road, $3\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.W. by W. from Mansfield, $8\frac{3}{4}$ miles S.E. from Chesterfield. This is a romantic district, a deep narrow ravine, through which the Meden runs, where, in many places, the limestone rock, broken into a thousand shapes, may be seen, separates it from Pleasley Hill, a hamlet, in Mansfield parish. The township contains 1,224 acres of land, including 224 acres of woods; rateable value, £1,138 1s. 0d. William E. Nightingale, Esq., is lord of the manor, and principal owner. The church, St. Michael, is a rectory, valued, in the King's books, £11 4s. 7., now £493, in the patronage of William Pole Thornhill, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Courtenay Smith. The Church is an ancient structure, of great length, and very narrow, with a tower (in which are three bells) in which a chasm was made by the shock of an earthquake, which happened on Sunday, March 17th, 1816, and was felt over a great part of Derbyshire, Nottinghamshire, Lincolnshire, &c. The rectory is a handsome stone mansion, in the village, and has 55 acres of glebe; the tithes of the whole parish have been commuted for £640. At $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles N.E. from the village, are the handsome cotton mills of Messrs. William Hollins and Co., for spinning and doubling yarn for hosiery. The original mills were built for the cotton hosiery trade, about 70 to 80 years ago, but were destroyed by fire nearly 20 years ago; since which two large and extensive new ones have been erected, which are worked by water and steam power of 120 horses, and give employment to upwards of 600 hands. Connected with the works is a day school for the children, to which others have access, and in which the Methodists hold religious services. Here is a day and Sunday school, the former of which is conducted on the National System, and was endowed by Wm. Pearsce, for which seven children are taught free, the remainder of the children pay threepence per week. At Pleasley Vale is a Mechanics' Institution, with a library of 500 volumes; and at Pleasley Hill is a reading room, established November, 1852, and principally supported by William Hollins, Esq. Formerly a market was held here, now long disused. The ancient stone cross, with a flight of five steps, still remains. Fairs are held, May 6th and October 29th, for cattle, horses, and sheep. The manor of Pleasley belonged to Thomas Bec, bishop of St. Davids, lord treasurer to King Edward I., who, in 1284, had a grant of a market, on Mondays, and a fair for three days, at the festival of St. Luke. Anthony Bec, Bishop of Durham, and patriarch of Jerusalem, died in 1310, or 1311, seized of this manor; it was inherited by his nieces, married into the families of Harcourt and Willoughby, who possessed the manor in moieties for several generations. The manor was afterwards in the Leakes, who appear to have been posssessed of it in the reign of Henry VI. After the death of Nicholas Leake, the last Earl of Scarsdale, it was purchased by Henry Thornhill, Esq. Pleasley Vale, near Pleasley works, a handsome mansion, the residence of William Hollins, Esq. In Pleasley park, adjoining the cotton mills, is a large enclosure with a double vallum and entrenchment, two sides of which are secured by natural precipices; it is 250 feet in length, by 190 in breadth, and is evidently of Roman origin, but from its retired situation has not attracted the notice of the antiquary.

Shirebrook, a small scattered village, township, and chapelry, situated on the verge of the county, 3 miles N.N.E. from Pleasley, and 3 miles N. from Mansfield, by the foot road; contains 1,429a. 0r. 30p. of freehold land; rateable value, £1,258 5s. 0d. The Duke of Devonshire, Capt. Drawater, Mrs. Elizabeth Nicholson, Joseph Nicholson, Francis Hall, William Fletcher, Charles Newbold, Joseph Paget, Alfred Strutt, Charles Bowmar, Edward Fowler, and — Greaves, Esqs., with Ashbourne School, are the owners. The Church is a neat stone building, with a turret and one bell, erected in 1843 (in place of a venerable structure), at a cost of £500, the late rector taking the pecuniary management, which has been defrayed by private subscription: it was consecrated on the Wednesday in the feast week (the Sunday before Old Michaelmas day in the same year). It will seat about 350 hearers. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £30, in the patronage of the rector of Pleasley, and incumbency of the Rev. J. Cargill, who resides at the Parsonage, a neat stone residence, about $\frac{1}{4}$ mile W. from the church, erected by subscriptions, aided by grants, in 1855, at a cost of £700. The Primitive Methodists have a small chapel here, erected in 1849, at a cost of £105, which will seat about 100. In 1852, a handsome National school was erected for boys and girls, at a cost of £300, raised by subscription. It is a good substantial stone building, with a house attached for the teacher. About 40 attend. A Sunday school is held in the village. Littlewood, a farm, $1\frac{1}{4}$ miles E., is the property of Francis Hall, Esq. Stuffyng Wood, in the same direction, belongs to Joseph Paget, Esq., Warsop Park, formerly a park, held for several generations by the family of Roos, under Pleasley, now a farm house, the property of — Greaves, Esq.

Stoney Houghton, a small retired village and township, situate near the junction of the Bolsover road, with the Clown and Mansfield road, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles N.W. from Pleasley. It contains 540a. 1r. 10p. of land, principally limestone; rateable value, £481 3s. 0d. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and owner of 415 acres. In 1827, a Sunday school was erected by Mr. William Crookes, at a cost of £60. It is a plain stone building, and is also used as a place of worship by the Primitive Methodists. The north-east part of the Township is in Upper Langwith parish.

Charities.—William Pearsce, by will, in 1818, bequeathed £200, upon trust; one moiety thereof towards educating poor children of Pleasley, and the other moiety to the support of a Sunday school. The sum of £180, which remained after the legacy duty was paid, was laid out on mortgage, at five per cent., of which £4 10s. is paid to a schoolmistress, for instructing seven children; who also has £4 10s. for attending a Sunday school. This legacy is now (1845), incorporated with a National school, which has been established in the village.

John Boler, by will, 1733, gave all the rents that should arise out of the New Close Pingle, in Shirebrook, containing 3 roods, to the use of six poor people in Shirebrook. The land is let for £1 1s. per annum, and distributed as directed.

SCARCLIFFE parish is of considerable extent and contains the three hamlets of Scarcliffe, Palterton, and the Lanes, which keep their poor conjointly, and their roads separate and comprise 3772A. of land including (the park,) a wood of 392A. and in 1851 had 121 houses and 572 inhabitants, of whom 310 were males, and 262 females; rateable value £3348 2s. Earl Bathurst is lord of the manor and principal owner; Thomas Hallowes, Esq., Mr. Thos. Lowndes, Mr. William Scorer, and Mrs. Elizabeth Scorer, are also owners.

SCARCLIFFE is a small straggling village, dependent on agriculture, situated 8 miles S.E. of Chesterfield, 6 N.W. from Mansfield, and 2 S.E. from Bolsover. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is a large ancient edifice, and has nave, chancel, and side aisles, with a handsome tower erected in 1842, in which are four bells; it formerly had a spire, which was taken down when the tower was re-built. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £5, now £68, has been augmented with £1000 Queen Anne's bounty and £200 parliamentary grant, is in the presentation of Earl Bathurst, and incumbency of the Rev. J. H. Gray, M.A., of Bolsover. In the Church is a monument representing the figure of a lady in a long gown, and manted with plaited hair, and a rich coronet on her head, which is pillowed upon a lion, while some other animal is placed at her feet; she holds a child on her left arm, whose feet rest upon a foliated crocket; on a long scroll held by the child is an inscription in Leonine verse, engraved in Lombardic capitals. It is most probable that this lady was one of the baronial family of Frecheville, which possessed the manor of Scarcliffe for several generations, till it was forfeited to the crown, in 1275. Concerning this lady, says Lyson, there are some idle traditions, one of which is that the lady and child whose effigies here repose, were wandering in the neighbouring woods on a winter's evening, and were saved from perishing there by the sound of the curfew bell which guided them to Scarcliffe. The vicarage, a small house east of the church, was rebuilt in 1841, and has 15A. of glebe. The church was given to Darley Abbey, by Herbert Fitz-Ralph, and appropriated to that monastery. The rectory, manor, and advowson were granted in 1544, to Sir Francis Leake; they are now the property of the Earl of Bathurst. The parish was enclosed under an act passed in 1726, when 4 acres of land which have since been increased to 5 acres, were charged with buying bell ropes for the use of the church. The large tithes have been sold to the land owners, and the tithe of lamb and wool belongs to Earl Bathurst, commuted for £12 2s. 6d., and vicarial for £50. The Feast is on the 5th of November. At Domesday survey the manors of Scarcliffe and Palterton, which had belonged to Lovenot, were held by Raynourd, under Ralph Fitz-hubert, ancestor of the Frechevilles. Lands in Scarcliff were given to the priory of Thurgarton, by Robert Fitz-Ralph. In the year 1275, the prior of Newstead, in Nottinghamshire, and Robert de Grey, (who had been appointed keeper of the estates forfeited by Anker de Frecheville, in consequence of his having joined the rebellious barons) appear to have had each a manor in Scarcliffe. The prior of Newstead had a park here in 1330. The manor and park were granted to George Pierrepont, in 1544. This estate was purchased in 1690 by Sir Peter Apsley, from whom it has descended to the present possessor. The manor of Palterton was given by Wulfric Spott, to Burton Abbey, in the reign of King Ethelred. At Domesday survey it was held with Scarcliffe, by the ancester of the Frechevilles, and after the alienation of that manor, continued to be held by a younger branch, who had a seat at Palterton. John Ulkerthorpe, who married one of the co-heiresses of this branch, died seized of it 1445. John Columbell died seized of it in 1556. It was afterwards in the Leakes, and has since passed with Scarcliffe. Near Scarcliffe is a spring called Owlsditch, which is remarkable for flowing the most rapidly during the summer months. The river Poulter rises from the south side of this parish, and passes by Upper Langwith, after which it is joined by a branch from the north, and enters Nottinghamshire at Nether Langwith, where there is a large cotton mill, and a mill for sawing stone, in a very romantic district, with finely wooded acclivities; and joins the Wallen (which rises on the Derbyshire border, near Cresswell) below Welbeck, after which they join the river Idle, near Elksley, from whence it runs northward by Houghton Park, through Retford, after which it turns north-west to Bawtry, where it takes an easterly course across Misson Carr to the Trent, near Stockwith. The five streams which form this river all rise from the Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire border. The Lanes is a constablewick of scattered dwellings, 1½ miles E. from Scarcliffe.

PALTERTON is a small well built village, pleasantly situated on an eminence, 1 mile S.W. from Scarcliffe; formerly there was a chapel at Palterton. The feast is on the 20th October.

CHARITIES.—John Ludlam.—(See Alfreton.)—The yearly sum of £2 10s. received by the churchwardens, from a farm at Newton, is laid out in the purchase of flannel and linen, which is distributed to the poor.

Samuel Lawrence, by will, 1697, gave to the poor of Scarcliffe 20s. a year, to be paid out of certain lands yearly.

Richard Johnson, (See Bolsover.)—The annual sum of 10s. is now received by the churchwardens, from Uffin's croft, in Bolsover, and distributed to the poor.

Elizabeth Saxton, by will, 1815, gave to the overseers of Scarcliffe £10 on trust; the interest to be paid to a schoolmaster, for instructing one poor boy and one poor girl.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Kithe Vaughan, in 1813, gave out of her freehold estate, £20 a year, to the parish of Scarcliffe; £14, part thereof, to be laid out in clothing for the poor, and £6 towards the education of poor children. The annual sum of £20 is received by the churchwardens, from the tenant of a farm at Pleasley Hill; £6 is paid for teaching 9 poor children to read, and £14 is distributed in clothing.

Dame Frances Pierrepont, in 1620, left a small annual payment to the poor, of which the prebendaries of the collegiate church of Southwell are the trustees, and as such is precluded from our inquiry.

Bell Rope Land, called Bagshaw piece, Henry Croft, Stand Hills, and Cocksty close amounting to 5 acres let for £4 10s. per annum. The amount is paid to the churchwardens and carried to their general account, from which £1 is paid for cleaning the church, and all expenses relating to the bells are defrayed.

SHIRLAND, a township and extensive parish, contains, with the hamlets of Higham and Hallfield Gate, 2,942A. 3R. 22P. of land; and in 1851 had 272 houses and 1,268 inhabitants, of whom 654 were males, and 614 females. Rateable value, £5,342 14s. 0d.

SHIRLAND, a pleasant village, on the Chesterfield road, 2 miles N. by W. from Alfreton, 2 miles S.E. from Stretton station, and 15 miles N.E. from Derby, had, in 1851, 188 houses, and 851 inhabitants, of whom 437 were males, and 414 females. The principal land owners are Gladwin Turbutt, Esq. (who also owns a third and a sixth of the manor), Henry Hardstaff, Esq., Mrs. Charlotte Page, Robert Millward, Esq., Mr. William Hardy, Mr. Richard Hopkinson, Mr. John Clay, Mr. William Clay, and William Palmer Morewood, Esq. The land is partly freehold and partly copyhold; and the freeholders claim their own manorial rights. The soil is various, and coal is found in great plenty; camomile is cultivated to a considerable extent, and many of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting. The Church, dedicated to St. Leonard, is an ancient structure, erected about the 14th century, has nave, chancel, side aisles, and handsome pinnacled tower, with a peal of five bells. In 1848 it underwent a thorough restoration, being new roofed and repewed, &c., at a cost of about £1,000, raised by subscriptions and rate; at the same time a beautiful font was placed near the south entrance; and in 1854 an organ was placed in the west gallery, at a cost of £80, by subscription. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book, £7 15s. 5d., now £256, is in the alternate patronage of Sir R. Tufton, Bart., Rev. William E. Nightingale, and John Charge, Esq. The Rev. Thomas Grinfield, M.A., is the rector, and the Rev. Charles Henry Ramsden, M.A., the officiating curate. The tithe has been commuted for £175, and here are 60 acres of glebe. In the chancel of the church, under a richly-ornamented crocketed arch, with a pinnacle at each side, lies the mutilated figure of a knight in plate armour, ornamented with scrolls of foliage; the front of the tomb is covered with shields of arms, amongst which are several of the family of Grey, of Shirland, ancestors of the Lords Grey-de-Wilton, who possessed this manor for several generations. There is also a memorial of John Revil, Esq., who died in 1537. National schools, with a residence for the master, were erected in 1851, at a cost of £870, raised by subscriptions, aided by a Parliamentary grant of £133 10s. 0d. It is a handsome stone building, near the Rectory, with accommodation for about 150 children. Here is a Wesleyan Methodist Chapel, erected by William Oakes, Esq. In the first year of Edward II., Reginald de Grey was possessed of the manor and advowson of the church, which afterwards came to the Talbots, and, in 1628, the co-heiresses of Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury, carried them to different families. The rectory is a good residence, a little north of the church. Shirland Park, 1 mile S.E. from the village, is a district of scattered farms. Mrs. Elizabeth Marshall, a resident here, is in the 94th year of her age.

Higham is a hamlet and pleasant village, ¾ mile N.W. of Shirland, and 2¾ N. by W. from Alfreton, situated at the Alfreton turn on the Chesterfield road, on a fine eminence, above the Derwent vale, commanding a fine view of the Midland railway, and in 1851, it had 84 houses, and 417 inhabitants, of whom 217 were males and 200 females. Gladwin Turbutt, Esq. is the principal owner. This is an ancient place, and formerly had a market, which was discontinued about the year 1785. The ancient Market Cross, approached by a flight of seven steps, which stands about the centre of the village, was restored during the year 1856. A fair for cattle, which is numerously attended, is held on the Wednesday after New Year's day, and a show fair in February, the day before Chesterfield fair. Feast, nearest Sunday to St. James'. In 1852, John Smedley, Esq. erected a chapel here, for the Wesleyan Reformers; it is a neat stone building, and will seat about 200 hearers, adjoining which is an infant school, built about the same time, and by the same gentleman, who likewise supports it; about 70 children attend.

Hallfield Gate, a small hamlet, ½ mile W. from Shirland, pleasantly situated commands a fine prospect over the open country; here is an endowed school, which was rebuilt by subscription about 1830; the master has a house and garden, and receives £24 15s. a year, for which 24 children are educated.

Stretton Hill Side, a small village, partly in Stretton and Shirland parishes, on the Chesterfield road, ½ mile N. from Higham.

Toad Hole, 1 mile S. of Higham, near the Midland railway, consists of three farms and Amber Mills, the extensive mustard manufactory of Mr. Francis Thompson. Here is a small ancient stone building used as a meeting-house by the Society of Friends.

Charities.—Thomas Fidler, in 1724, left 40s. per annum, to instruct four poor children, and 2s. 6d. each to six poor old couples, out of the rents of Thwaite's Park, the overplus to be given in bread. The close contains about 5 acres, let for £7 10s. per annum, besides an allotment let for 15s. a year, which is given according to the donor's intention.

James Laverack, in 1744, left £2 yearly to the poor, £2 to a schoolmaster, for teaching three poor children, and 20s. a year to be laid out in books for them; by a codicil to his will, he also gave £10 towards building a house at the Hallfield Gate school. The charges are paid from Stone Broom farm.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity (see Bradley). The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in flannel, and given to the poor about Christmas.

Eleanora Turbutt, who died in 1826, left £20 for the poor of Shirland and Morton. (See Morton.)

Hallfield Gate School consists of a school-room which was rebuilt about 1830, at the expense of the parishioners, on the site of an old school granted by Edward Revell. A sum of £10 was given by James Laverack, and £20 by Mrs. Fidler, about 1822, towards building a house for the master. William Stockes, in 1696, gave a tenement and two crofts near Ripley, for the instruction of six of the poorest children. Lydia Boot, 1726, gave £6 yearly out of lands in Greenhill lane, Alfreton, 40s. thereof given to the schoolmaster, £3 to the said children for their encouragement, and 20s. the residue, to be laid out in pious books and also given to the children. £3 is paid to a schoolmaster, but we found no trace of the residue of the £6 having ever been paid, and we are not aware of any mode by which the land can have been discharged from full payment. Joseph Oldham, in 1787, gave a sum of money to purchase £100 stock in the four per cent. consolidated annuities, and directed the interest to be paid to the schoolmaster at Hallfield Gate. The income of the schoolmaster is £24 15s., exclusive of £1 for books, and the number of free scholars 24. In 1853, the school underwent considerable repairs and was well ventilated; the number of children attending the school is about 70.

STAVELEY, an extensive parish, including the hamlets of Middle, Nether, and West Handley, Netherthorpe, and Woodthorpe, with various scattered farms, and the hamlet of Staveley Works. It contains 6546 acres of rich agricultural soil, forming a pleasant district of bold undulating country, abounding in superior coal and ironstone. The coal has thirteen distinct beds, the lowest being 1,125 feet below the surface, the ironstone lying between the beds of coal. In 1851 the parish had 759 houses, and 3998 inhabitants, of whom 2193 were males, and 1805 females; rateable value £18,231 6s. Formerly Great Barlow, now a distinct parish, was considered a parochial chapelry in Staveley parish. The Duke of Devonshire is the principal owner, and lord of the manor, but Richard Barrow, Esq., is also an owner.

STAVELEY is a township and large village, pleasantly situated on an eminence overlooking the river Rother, 4½ miles N. from Chesterfield, and 10 miles S.E. from Sheffield. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is an ancient structure, with a nave and chancel of considerable length and square embattled tower, with 8 bells, situated on a bold eminence north of the village. A window in the chancel was ornamented with stained glass, in 1676, by Lord Frecheville. It contains many antique monuments, particularly a fine brass figure, in plate armour, over which is worn a surcoat emblazoned with heraldric bearings; the offensive arms are a sword and dagger, and the figure stands upon a greyhound. From the mutilated inscription which encircles the slab, it appears to be to the memory of Petri Frecheville, who died in the year 1400. Another monument is enriched with brass figures of Piers Frecheville and Maude Wortley his wife, who are kneeling on cushions, facing each other. The male figure is cased in plate armour, has long hair, and wears his spurs; behind him are seven sons also kneeling. The lady is clothed in a long gown, confined at the waist by an embroidered sash; she wears the pointed head dress, and is provided with a lectern, upon which lies an open book. She is followed by seven daughters all kneeling. Also one to John Frechville, son of Piers, who died in 1509. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book £12 7s. 6d., now £706. The Duke of Devonshire, patron. Rev. James D. McFarlane, M.A., incumbent, and resides at the rectory, an old mansion, erected in 1725, near the church, and has 92A. 2R. 31P. of glebe land. The tithes have been commuted for £619 9s. 7d. A moiety of the church was given by Ascoit Musard to the Hospitallers. There was formerly a chantry chapel of St. John in this parish, founded by the Frecheville family for the use of the manor; the revenues in the reign of Edward VI. were estimated at £2 13s. 4d. per annum. The site is now occupied by the library of the Mechanic's Institution. The Rev. Francis Gisborne, whose name so often occurs in this work for his munificent charities, was many years rector of Staveley. The Methodists have a neat brick chapel, erected in 1826. In 1844, a school was established principally through the munificence of the lord of the manor. It is a handsome stone building situated near the church, and forms two sides of a square, with an octagonal residence for the master and mistress at the angle. The Hall, an ancient mansion near the church, embosomed with lofty trees, after suffering many modifications and alterations under the hands of its proprietors, is now a genteel residence, but unoccupied. It was formerly the seat of the Frecheviles, afterwards of Lord James Cavendish. It then became the residence of Mr. Foxlow, afterwards of Dr. Dixon, and lastly of the Rev. F. Foxlowe. The Feast is the Sunday before Midsummer day.

The manor of Staveley, at Domesday survey, belonged to Ascoit Musard, ancestor of the baronial family who gave name to Musarden in Gloucestershire. Two sisters of Baron Musard, brought their shares of Staveley to Cromwell and Frecheville, in the reign of Edward II. Cromwell's share passed to the Clifford family, by whom it was forfeited to the crown. King Edward IV. granted it to Sir John Pilkington, who died seized of it in 1479. Henry VIII., in 1544, granted it to Francis Leake, who the year following conveyed to to Sir Peter Frecheville, already possessed of two-thirds of it. Staveley was for many generations the chief seat of the Frecheville family. Sir Peter Frecheville was knighted for his services at the battle of Musselborough. Colonel Frecheville, a most active royalist, garrisoned his house at Staveley in the civil wars, and distinguished himself on various occasions. In a skirmish with Captain Revel's and two other troops, he drove them for shelter into Mr. Eyre's house at Hassop, where he took them all prisoners. In August, 1644, Staveley house was taken by Major-General Crawford and a party of the Earl of Manchester's army, by capitulation. It is said to have been strongly garrisoned; 12 pieces of ordnance, 230 muskets, and 150 pikes were taken in the house. After the Restoration, Colonel Frecheville was created a peer, in 1644, by the title of Lord Frecheville of Staveley. In 1681 he sold the manor and estate of Staveley to the first Duke of Devonshire, from whom it has descended to its present noble possessor. There was formerly a park at Staveley. The barony was held by the service of finding two soldiers for the King's army in Wales.

Staveley Works, 1 mile E. from Staveley, is an ancient iron smelting establishment; there are documents in existence proving it to have been a place of considerable importance two centuries ago, but its early history will not bear any comparison with the vastness of its operations in the present day. Here are the collieries and extensive ironworks of Richard Barrow, Esq., with blast furnaces, producing 200 tons of metal weekly. Castings and foundry work of all kinds are executed at this extensive establishment. Neat residences for the clerks and overlookers have been built in the vicinity, besides a great number of cottages. The Hollingwood, Springwell, and Victoria collieries produce superior coals, which are sent by railway to all parts of England, besides supplying the iron works. The Chesterfield canal passes the furnaces, and the Midland railway passes on the east side of the works, where there is a station, with lines of rail running to the works. The Hagg, a handsome Elizabethan stone mansion, 1 mile N.N.W. from Staveley, erected about 1630, for a Hunting seat, is the property of the Duke of Devonshire, and residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Crawshaw. Inkersal, 1 mile S., Mastin Moor, 1½ mile; and Norbriggs, a small well-built village, 1 mile S.E. from Staveley. Here is the spade and shovel manufactory of Messrs. Dudley & Son. Ringwood Hall, a beautiful modern mansion, situated on an eminence, with tasteful pleasure grounds, ornamented with shrubs and evergreens, is the seat and property of Richard Barrow, Esq. The Three Handleys form the north west side of the parish, and contains the villages of Middle, Nether, and West Handley.

Handley, (including perhaps what is now known as Middle Handley, and West Handley,) for the most part belonged anciently to Beauchief Abbey, as such they were seized on by Henry VIII., and granted to Wm. West, Esq. In 1577 they were sold by Edmund West, Esq., to Francis Rodes, Esq., whose name is more familiar hereabouts, (for he was a native of this parish,) as Judge Rodes. Nearly the whole of the sites of the Three Handleys is now the property of His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, and the manor which was formerly separate from, is now merged in that of Staveley.

New Schools were erected here in 1856, by Richard Barrow, Esq., at a cost of £3,000, It is a handsome stone building, in the Elizabethan style of architecture, situated on a good elevation, near the Works, and comprises a large lecture room 40 feet by 30 feet in length, and 45 feet high, a boys and a girls school room, each 56 feet by 20 feet 6 inches in length, and 25 feet high, with a porch attached to each 3 feet by 3 feet square. The Lecture room contains an excellent organ, and from the roof rises a square tower, containing a bell. The whole of the building is heated with hot water. No master has yet been appointed.

A Library was established here in 1852, which now contains 1600 volumes of books; Mr. Wm. Hibbert, librarian.

Savings' Bank was established in 1853, which is open every Monday afternoon, from 4 to 5 o'clock. The Rev. Blain Mandale, actuary, Gas Works are in course of erection on the banks of the canal, a little S.W. of the village, at a cost of £1800, by a company of £10 shareholders.

MIDDLE HANDLEY is a pleasant village on a bold elevation, 2½ miles NW. from Staveley. A Chapel of ease was erected here in 1838, principally by the Duke of Devonshire. It is a neat substantial edifice, in which Divine service is regularly performed by the rector or his curate. His Grace also erected, about the same time, a commodious School of stone, to which he allows £20 per annum towards the support of a master, for which 16 children are educated free. Nether Handley is a very small hamlet, two miles N.W. from Staveley. West Handley is an agricultural village, three miles N.W. from Staveley. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here, erected of stone in 1796. Netherthorpe, a hamlet and small village ½ mile E. from Staveley. A Grammar School was founded here in 1537,—(see charity report). This school has fallen into disuse. Woodthorpe is a considerable village, 1½ mile E.S.E. from Staveley. The Hall was the ancient seat of the Rodes family before they removed to Barlborough: they acquired it in marriage with the heiress of Cachehors, before the years 1290. It was purchased of Sir John Rodes, about the year 1599, by the Countess of Shrewsbury, and passed afterwards to the Earl of Newcastle, from whom it descended to the Duke of Portland. It appears formerly to have formed a manor or barony with Bolsover; but it is now the property of the Duke of Devonshire. The ancient seat of the Rodes family was in part pulled down, and most of the materials used for the building at Bolsover. Judge Rodes, who commenced Barlborough Hall, died at Woodthorpe; his son John removed to Barlborough. Sir Peter Frechville, in 1632, founded a chapel and hospital here. The chapel was pulled down in 1849, and a new Chapel of ease, erected on its site at a cost of £1700, by the Duke of Devonshire, in which Divine service is performed once every Sunday, by the Rev. Blain Mandale, curate of Stavely. It is a neat Gothic building, with nave, chancel, turret, and one bell, and has sittings for 200 hearers, all of which are free.

CHARITIES.—Sir Peter Frechville, Knt., and John Goostrey gave £40, afterwards certain sums were collected, which made the whole £132. This amount was invested in land, the proceeds thereof to be applied in apprenticing two poor children, and the residue to be given to the poor. In addition, 2A. 2R. 11P., were set out at the inclosure in 1798. The whole produces a rental of £10 10s. per annum, out of which a sum of £2 is allowed for two boys or girls being placed out-apprentices; the residue is distributed to the poor.

Rev. Ralph Heathcote gave £57 15s. 6d., Peter Brown £57 15s. 6d., Francis Glossop £44, and John Smith £20, and old stock to the amount of £20 9s., making a total of £200. The amount was laid out on a rent charge of £9 per annum, on land in Brimington. Of this sum £5 4s. is expended in bread for the poor; £1 4s. is given to a schoolmaster, and the remainder is distributed amongst poor persons.

Anne Jackson, in 1749, gave the interest of £100 to instruct poor children, and directed a Bible, Common Prayer Book, and Whole Duty of Man, to be given to each scholar out of the interest. The Rev. Francis Gisborne augmented it to £130, which was, with other sums, in the whole £400, laid out in £658 16s. stock three per cent. consols. In 1804, like stock to the amount of £102 11s. 3d. was purchased with £30, left by Dorothy Foxlow, and an accumulation of interest. A further sum of £5 was left by Mr. Gisborne. £8 of the dividend is applied in educating poor children of Staveley, Handley, and Woodthorpe.

Rev. Francis Gisborne, in 1759, gave the interest of £30 to one poor man or woman. Anne Gisborne, in 1762, gave the interest of £50 to 2 poor parishioners. John Alcroft, in 1768, gave £10 to the poor. Thomas Brailsford, 1770, gave the interest of £50 to two poor families. Paul Rodgers, 1784, left £10. Henry Smith, 1787, gave the interest of £50 to two poor persons. James Hodkin left £20 for a distribution of bread. Elizabeth Brailsford, 1794, left £30 for the benefit of two poor inhabitants. Catherine Dixon, 1796, left the interest of £30 to one poor person. In the whole, £285 was laid out in 1796, as stated, with Anne Jackson's charity. Lieutenant-General Wm. Murray, in 1820, bequeathed £100, with which stock was purchased, making the whole £889 3s. 3d., three per cent. consols; the dividends amounting to £26 13s. 4d., of which £1 17s. 4d., is distributed to the poor, and the remainder as directed.

Rev. Robt. Hitch, Rev. Anthony Marshall, Rev. John Heathcote John Froggatt, and others, gave sums of money amounting to £90, which, in 1676, was invested in land at Unstone, which consists of two closes, and about an acre of wood, in the whole 13A. In 1802, these lands, for a sum of £17 13s. 6d. were exonerated from tithe. In 1815, wood to the amount of £90, was sold, of which sum £86 11s. was expended in draining and otherwise improving the land, now let for £10 per annum, which is distributed to the poor.

Netherthorpe School.—Francis Rodes, by will, 29th of Elizabeth, left a yearly rent charge of £20 per annum, to be taken forth of his manor of Elmton; £8 thereof to the Grammar school, at Staveley Netherthorpe, £8 for two scholarships in St. John's, Cambridge, and £4 for the relief of soldiers who should be sent to the wars out of Staveley, Barlborough, and Elmton. Robert Sitwell, by will, 41st Elizabeth, gave a messuage in Killmarsh, on trust, to pay £6 yearly to the schoolmaster. Lord James Cavendish, 1742, left a rent charge of £6, issuing out of closes at Hollingwood, for the maintenance of the schoolmaster. In addition to these, the Rev. Francis Gisborne gave £10, to be invested in stock. The income of the various benefactions amounts to £29 per annum. All the sons of parishioners are considered as entitled to classical instruction; but the master makes his own charge for other branches.

Woodthorpe Hospital.—Peter Frecheville, in 1632, erected a certain dwelling house, to be for ever used as an hospital, for four poor women and four poor men, all to be unmarried, and chosen from the parishes of Barlbrough and Staveley; and he directed his heir to pay £4 a-piece towards their maintenance, and a like sum of £4 to a Deacon for reading Morning and Evening Prayers, and to have his lodgings in a chamber at the west end of the Almshouse. Richard Robinson, 1777, gave a sum sufficient to purchase land of the yearly value of £18, to advance the pay from £4 to £6 of the inmates. Another rent charge of £18 a year has been appropriated to the inmates, supposed to have been left by some of the Gisborne family. The yearly income, £72 a year, is all paid out of different estates belonging to the Duke of Devonshire. The hospital consists of four tenements, with chambers above, and small gardens adjoining.

Judge Rodes, 1584, gave the interest of £40, in aid of the assessment of Woodthorpe and Hage Quarters. Thomas Brailsford, 1711, gave £10 to the poor. The Rev. Mr. Heathcote, 1715, gave £50 for buying six coats for poor people. Thomas Wade, 1715, gave £6 for the benefit of the poor. Mrs. Yates, 1721, left £50 for teaching poor children to read. The poor have also the benefit of £10 left by Thomas Hollingworth, 1728; £10 by John Shipstone, 1722; £5 by Widow Hollingworth, 1728; £10 by Anne Croft, 1729; £10 by Roger Hewitt, 1731; £5 Robert Milnes, 1731; £15 by Mrs. Brailsford, 1733; £5 by Jph. Rodgers, 1735, £5 5s. found in the poor's box, 1733; and £8 15s. raised by subscription, 1736; Lady Cavendish, 1734, gave £100, to be applied in teaching poor children to read. These sums, amounting to £360, were laid out in 1737, in a rent charge of £12 10s. issuing out of lands in Scarcliffe, which are given agreeable to the donors' intentions.

SUTTON-CUM-DUCKMANTON parish contains the rectory of Sutton and vicarage of Duckmanton, which were consolidated about the year 1558, and has 4,302A. 2R. 38P. of land, and in 1851, had 110 houses, and 587 inhabitants, of whom 311 were males and 276 females; rateable value £5,435.

SUTTON-IN-THE-DALE, a small and scattered district of farms, 4½ miles S.E. by E. from Chesterfield, and 2½ miles S. from Duckmanton, contains 1,938A. 3R. 30P. of fertile land; rateable value £2,246. Robert Arkwright, Esq., is lord of the manor and sole owner. The Church, dedicated to St. Mary, is an ancient structure with nave, chancel, north aisle, and tower with four bells, it is situated close to the Hall, a door from which communicates with the sacred edifice. In the chancel is a handsome marble tablet to Saml. Pierrepont, second son of the Hon. Geo. Pierrepont, sixth son of the Right Hon. Robert, Earl of Kingston, who died Sept. 1st, 1707, aged 56 years. The living is a rectory, with the vicarage of Duckmanton annexed, valued in the King's book at £12 16s. ½d., now £309, in the patronage of Robert Arkwright, Esq., and incumbency of the Rev. Michael M. Humble, B.A. The Hall, a large handsome mansion, which was rebuilt by the late Earl of Scarsdale, stands on an eminence in a fine park of about 280 acres of land, and is the property and seat of Robert Arkwright, Esq., who has greatly beautified the house and improved the estate, having rebuilt nearly the whole of the farm buildings. This manor was given by Wulfric Spott, in the reign of Ethelred, to Burton Abbey. At Domesday survey it belonged to Roger de Poictou. In the year 1255, it was granted to Peter de Harestan. The heiress of Robert de Harestan brought it to Richard de Grey, of Sandiacre. A co-heiress of Grey, alias Hilary, brought it to the Leakes, in the reign of Henry IV., and it became the chief seat of that family. Francis Leake, of Sutton, was created a baronet in 1611, and Lord Deincourt of Sutton, in 1624. In 1643, (the beginning of April,) Lord Deincourt began to fortify his house at Sutton. Sir John Gell sent his brother, Colonel Thomas Gell, with 500 men and three pieces of ordnance to besiege it. Lord Deincourt was summoned, but refused to surrender, and for some time obstinately defended himself. The house was taken, and Lord Deincourt and his men made prisoners: the works were demolished, and Lord Deincourt set at liberty, on giving his word that he would repair to Derby within eight days, and submit himself to the parliament. Sir John Gell observes that the forfeiture of his word on this occasion, was revenged by the garrison at Bolsover, who some time afterwards, when the castle was in the hands of the parliament, plundered Lord Deincourt's house at Sutton. In 1645, Lord Deincourt was created Earl of Scarsdale. Having rendered himself very obnoxious to the parliament, by his exertions in the royal cause, during the civil wars, his estates were sequestered; and as he refused to compound, they were sold. His son procured some friends to be purchasers, paying the sum of £18,000, fixed by the parliamentary commissioners as the composition. The title became extinct by the death of Nicholas, the fourth earl, in 1736. After this event, the large estates belonging to the family were sold for the payment of debts. Sutton was purchased by Godfrey Clarke, Esq., who was in possession in 1740. The sister and heiress of Godfrey Bagnall Clarke, who died in 1786, married Job Hart Price, Esq., who took the name of Clarke, and left a daughter and heiress married to the Marquis of Ormond, who occasionally resided at the Hall; of whose trustees it was purchased in 1824, by the late Richard Arkwright, Esq., and is now the property of Robert Arkwright, Esq. Sutton is sometimes called Sutton Scarsdale. The feast is on Whit Sunday.

Duckmanton, a long scattered village, running N. and S., usually designated Long, Middle, and Far Duckmanton, of which Middle Duckmanton is 4 miles E. from Chesterfield, and 2½ miles W. from Bolsover, contains 2,313A. 3R. 8P. of fertile land. Robt. Arkwright, Esq., the sole owner. Here formerly was a church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, at Long Duckmanton, which it is supposed was taken down about the year 1558, when this vicarage was consolidated with the rectory of Sutton. The Rectory House is a handsome brick mansion, erected in 1842, situated at a turn of the road betwixt Long and Middle Duckmanton, with 59 acres of glebe. Many of the inhabitants are employed at the collieries and iron-works in the immediate neighbourhood. Long Course, a handsome well-arranged farm house, pleasantly situated on an eminence, 1 mile S. from Duckmanton, commanding a fine view of Sutton Hall and Park, is occupied by Mr. John Norton, farm steward to Robert Arkwright, Esq. In 1856, Robert Arkwright, Esq., built on the site of the ancient church here, a large and commodious room for the use of the parish generally, and in digging for the foundation, sixteen skeletons were found, one of which measured six feet from the crown of the skull to the ancle joint, the feet not being found; in most of the skulls the teeth were quite perfect. Here are some rich beds of coal and ironstone. The manor of Duckmanton was given by Wulfric Spott to Burton Abbey. At the Domesday survey it belonged to Ralph Fitz-Hubert. Geoffrey Fitz-Peter purchased the manor of Sir Richard de Wyverton, for Welbeck Abbey. Sir Richard Bassett gave the vill of Duckmanton to the Abbey: afterwards Henry de Stuteville confirmed Duckmanton to the Abbey. King Henry VIII. granted the manor, about 1538, to Francis Leake, Esq., since which it has passed with Sutton. The endowed school is at Duckmanton; and the feast Sunday after Midsummer day.

CHARITIES.—Sutton and Duckmanton School, in 1791, being in a ruinous state, was pulled down by the rector and trustees, and a new one built on the site, by subscription; the school is endowed with sixteen acres of land, which is supposed to have been appropriated by the lord and freeholders of the manor, to the use of a schoolmaster, for the instruction of poor children. The school lands were let for £18 per annum, paid half-yearly to the schoolmaster, for which he taught 20 children. The 16 acres of land having been purchased by Robert Arkwright, Esq., the trustees bought 45 acres of land in the parish of Brampton, now let for £40 per year, and are now (1856) erecting a new school on the site of the old one for the education of the children in the parish; it will be a neat brick building, capable of accommodating about 80 children. Formerly 20 children were educated free for the £18, arising from the 16 acres of land, but a charter having been obtained from the Lord Chancellor, the trustees are now authorized to charge 2d. per week for each child who attends school, for instruction in reading, writing, and arithmetic; and in order that the said charity may not be lost sight of in the said parish, the trustees for the time being, shall cause to be put up in the most public part of the parish church, a board or slab, containing a short account of the charity, the amount of its funds, and an explanation of its object, and that such board or slab should always kept clean and legible.

Rev. John Curry, formerly rector of the parish, left by will, 1693, £20, for the use of the poor. Margaret Ronzier, gave in her lifetime £34. William Widdowson, 1735, directed that his executor should yearly lay out 12s, in the purchase of 15 loaves, to be distributed to six poor widows. Samuel Dowker, 1738, gave to the poor of Sutton and Duckmanton 10s. a year to buy bread; and 10s. to the parson, to preach a sermon on New Year's day. The sum of £120, arising from these charities, was lent on the turnpike road from Matlock to Chesterfield. The interest having been in arrears four years, was added to the principal, in 1774, and again, in 1782, whereby it was increased to £190 16s.; the interest amounts to £2 17s. 3d., out of which the rector receives 10s. for preaching a sermon on New Year's Day; the remainder is distributed to the poor..

Francis Leach, left for the use of the poor, 3s. yearly, issuing out of a farm in Bolsover Woodhouse, which is usually paid once in four years. The payment made of 12s., in 1823, was improperly carried to the parish account, but is now distributed in accordance with the will of the donor.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity (see Bradley). The annual sum of £7 5s., received by the rector, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

(1856.) For the last thirty years, Robert Arkwright, Esq., has given annually at Christmas an ox, to be divided amongst the poor of the parish; and to which the farmers have added £5 for the purchase of bread.

TIBSHELF, a parish and considerable village, consisting of one long street, 4 miles N.N.E. from Alfreton, 8 miles S.S.E. from Chesterfield, and 18 miles N.E. from Derby; contains 2,400 acres of land, principally a loamy soil, on the Nottinghamshire border; and in 1851 had 166 houses, and 806 inhabitants, of whom 406 were males, and 400 females; rateable value, £2,415 12s. 6d. St. Thomas's Hospital, Southwark, London, are lords of the manor, and owners of 1,750 acres of land. The Duke of Devonshire, Robert Millward, Esq., and John Chambers, Esq., are also owners. The parish abounds in coal, and besides the employment at the collieries, some of the inhabitants are employed in frame-work knitting of cotton hose. The Church, dedicated to St. John the Baptist, is a handsome structure, rebuilt in 1729, situated at the eastern extremity of the village, and has nave, chancel, side aisles, embattled tower, and five bells. In 1850, a beautiful painted window was put up in the chancel; the work of Miss Sharpe, of London; the subjects being St. John the Baptist, and the Four Evangelists. In the church is an ancient monument, for Ann Clarke, who died in 1699, aged 80 years. She bequeathed, by will, £20 to the poor of this parish for ever. The living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book, £4 5s. 3d., now £172; Mrs. Packman, of Tupton Hall, the patron, and the Rev. Francis William Sharpe, B.A., the incumbent, who resides at the vicarage, a commodious house, a little west of the church. This church formerly was appropriated to the Nuns of Brewode, in Staffordshire, after which the impropriation was given to St. Thomas's Hospital, and the large tithes have been sold by them to the landowners; the vicarial have been commuted for £185 18s. 4d. Here are 42 acres of glebe. The Parochial school is a small brick building, with one room. It is supported by voluntary contributions and the children's pence; about 30 boys and 12 girls attend. A lodge of Odd Fellows is held at the Wheat Sheaf Inn. The manor of Tibecel, at the Domesday survey, was held by one Robert, under the King. In the reign of King John, it was in the baronial family of Heriz, from whom it passed, by successive female heirs, to Belers and Swillington. R. de Swillington was seized of it in 1429; Sir William Pierrepont was possessed of it in 1513; it was given, in 1552, to St. Thomas's Hospital, by its founder, King Edward VI., being described as parcel of the endowment of the dissolved hospital of the Savoy. Feast, first Sunday after the 29th of June. Biggin, two farms, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N. from Tibshelf. Doe Hill, a pleasant house, 1 mile W., was formerly noted for a medicinal spring, of which there was also a similar one at the foot of the village, both much celebrated; here the parish have an acre of ground for a stone quarry, for building purposes. At Hirst, $\frac{3}{4}$ mile N.E., is the neat mansion and seat of John Chambers, Esq. Marlpits, a farm, on high ground $\frac{1}{2}$ mile E.; this place is approached by a gradual ascent, but commands a most extensive prospect; 11 parish churches can be seen with the naked eye, including Lincoln Minster, the town of Derby, Axe Edge, and the mountains of the High peak. This parish partakes of the charity of the Rev. Francis Gisborne. (See Bradley.) The sum of £7 5s. is received and distributed in coarse woollens to the poor about Christmas.

Post Office at Samuel Hill's. Letters arrive from Alfreton at 10 a.m., and are despatched at 5 p.m. in winter, and 5.30 p.m. in summer.

WHITTINGTON is a large flourishing village and parish, 2½ miles N. from Chesterfield, contains 1491A. 0R. 3P. of land, and in 1851, had 196 houses and 874 inhabitants, of whom 456 were males, and 418 females; rateable value, £4,185 5s. It was enclosed by an act passed 1821, the award signed March, 1825, when all the tithes and moduses were commuted. The principal owners are, John and Wm. Fowler, Esqs., the Rev. W. M. Pierce, Mr. Geo. Jenkinson, Mr. Samuel Jenkinson, Chas. Steade, Esq., J. B. Jebb, Esq., John Crusoe, Esq., and Richard Barrow, Esq.; the two former are lords of the manor. Here are also many other small freeholders. The Church, dedicated to St. Barthlomew, is a neat stone edifice; with chancel, side aisles, and low tower. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book £7 10s. 10d., now £302. The Bishop of Lichfield patron. Rev. Geo. Gordon, rector; and the Rev. Robt. Robinson, M.A., resident officiating curate. In the church is the monument of the late Samuel Pegge, L.L.D., the antiquary, author of the "Life of Bishop Grossetete," "History of Beauchief Abbey," "Bolsover and Peak Castles," "Dissertations on Coins and other Antiquarian Subjects." He also collected considerable materials for a history of Derbyshire, now deposited in the Herald's college. Dr. Pegge was 45 years rector of Whittington, where he died, Feb. 14, 1796, in the 92d year of his age: he was born at Chesterfield, 1704. In the churchyard is the monument of Chpr. Smith, Esq., of London, who left £550 to the corporation, for the relief of disabled and wounded seamen. In the parish register is the following remarkable entry:—

"Thomas Ashton, son of Mr. Arthur and Mrs. Jane Bulkeley, was baptized July 1st, 1664. Godfathers—Edward Downes, great, great, uncle; Dr. Charles Ashton, great, great, great uncle; Joseph Ashton, gent., great, great, great uncle. Goodmothers—Mrs. Wood, great, great, great aunt; Mrs. Wainwright, great, great grandmother; Mrs. Green, great grandmother."

At the Domesday survey, Whittington is described as a hamlet of Newbold. The paramount manor, which had been in the Peverels, was granted by King John, to Wm.

Briewere, from whose family it passed to the Wakes. The Boythorps, Bretons, and Foljambes held it successively as mesne lords; but the immediate possession was from an early period in the family of Whittington, whose heiress married Dethick. A co-heiress of Dethick brought it, about the year 1488, to the Poles, who held it under Foljambe. Geo. Pole had two daughters, co-heiresses, who brought this manor, towards the latter part of the 17th century, in moieties to Frith and Chaworth. Frith's moiety passed by marriage to Sir Chas. Sedley, who sold it to Mr. Richd. Gillett, who about 1813, sold his moiety to Mr. John Dixon. Three-fourths of the other moiety passed to the Launder family, also sold to Mr. Dixon. The remaining eighth belonged to the children of the late Samuel Hinde, who in 1856, sold it to Messrs. John and Wm. Fowler.

There are few places in England equally distinguished in the annals of history with the village of Whittington. When King James II. was endeavouring to assume arbitrary power, and to re-establish Popery in this kingdom, several noblemen and gentlemen of distinguished rank and fortune, met at Whittington, with a view of defeating his purpose; amongst whom were the Earls of Devonshire, and Danby, Lord Delamere, and Mr. John D'Arcy, son and heir of Conyers, Earl of Holderness; Sir Scroop How. also embarked in the execution of this great design, but it is not certain that he met them on the present occasion. Whittington Moor was the place appointed for holding their deliberations, but a shower of rain falling at the time, they repaired to the village for shelter, and finished their consultation at a public house, the Cock and Magpie, which from this remarkable event has acquired the celebrated name of the "Revolution House." On the 5th of Nov., 1788, the hundredth anniversary of the revolution was, on account of the above event celebrated with great splendour and magnificence at Whittington and Chesterfield. The commemoration commenced at Whittington with Divine service at the Church. The Rev. Saml. Pegge, rector of the parish, delivered a sermon, and the descendants of the illustrious houses of Cavendish, Osborne, Boothe, and D'Arcy, a numerous and powerful gentry, a a wealthy and respectable yeomanry, and an attentive peasantry, formed an audience which has seldom been equalled on any occasion. After service, the company went in succession to view the Old Revolution House, with the arm chair in which the Earl of Devonshire is said to have sat, and then partook of a cold collation, which was prepared in the new rooms annexed to the cottage. The procession to Chesterfield then began. It consisted of the members of eight Friendly societies, amounting to about two thousand persons, walking four and four, and carrying flags with mottos and devices. The band of music belonging to the Derbyshire militia. The corporation of Chesterfield, in their robes of office, joined the procession on entering the town. The following noblemen in their coaches, with attendants on horseback, joined the procession:—The Duke of Devonshire, Earl of Stamford, Earl of Danby, Lord Francis Osborne, Lord Geo. Cavendish, Lord John Cavendish, Sir Francis Molyneux, and Sir Henry Hunloke, Bart., in Sir Henry's coach; and upwards of 40 other carriages of the neighbouring gentry, with their attendants, genty on horseback, three and three; and servants on horseback in the same manner. The whole was conducted with order and regularity; notwithstanding there were so large a number of carriages, four hundred gentlemen on horseback, and an astonishing throng of spectators, not an accident happened. All was joy and gladness, without a single burst of unruly tumult and uproar. Persons of all ranks wore orange and blue, in memory of our glorious deliverer, King William III. And the most respectable Roman Catholic families vied in their endeavour to shew how just a sense they had of the value of civil liberty. On the day previous to the jubilee, the committee appointed to conduct the proceedings dined together in the Revolution House; and his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, the Earl of Stamford, Lord George and Lord John Cavendish, with several neighbouring gentlemen were present. A subscription was entered into for erecting a monumental column on that spot where the first meeting was held, which was so highly instrumental in rescuing the liberties of the country from perdition; however, the idea of erecting a column on Whittington Moor was afterwards given up, and the sum (£230) subscribed was given to the Derby infirmary. Chesterfield races are still held on Whittington Moor. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel in Whittington, erected 1828, and the Primitive Methodists have one, erected in 1849. The Endowed School,—(see charities,)—was formerly held in an old building in the churchyard, which was taken down, and in 1850, a handsome stone building was erected in its stead in the centre of the village. Brown House, is a neat mansion, half mile W. of the Church, the seat and property of Chas. Steade, Esq. Messrs. Thos. Firth & Sons, of Sheffield, are erecting extensive iron works here, close to the railway at the east end of the parish, near which a great number of cottage houses are now in course of erection.

CHARITIES.—Peter Webster, in 1674, left £200 on trust, to be invested in land for the maintenance of a schoolmaster. He also devised a messuage in the parish, and directed a sum of 36s. yearly to be given to 6 poor scholars, to buy them books, and the residue of the rents to be distributed to the poor. The property consists of a farm in Unstone, let for £23 2s., a piece of land set out at the inclosure in 1825, let for £2 2s., and two allotments on Whittington common, let for £3 per annum; the whole amounts to £30 6s., out of which £25 4s. is paid to a schoolmaster, 36s. to 6 poor scholars, and the remainder is distributed to the poor.

Joshua Webster, in 1696, devised his messuage and lands for the education of 10 poor children, in case his son, Peter Webster, should die without issue. By indenture, 1785, the said Peter Webster conveyed to trustees, for the purposes mentioned in the will, the Plumtree farm, let on lease for 99 years at a rental of £10 10s. The farm contains 21A. 2R. 33P., and the present value is stated to be £35 or £40 per annum. There is also a house let to the schoolmaster, and some allotments, belonging this estate. The schoolmaster receives £10 10s. for teaching 10 poor children.

Poor's Lands.—Before the inclosure there were three small parcels of land let for £1 14s. a year, which was given to the poor. Another piece of land, let for 10s. a year, was applied to put out an apprentice, in lieu of which 11A. 1R. 4P., were awarded at the inclosure, now let for £12 19s. The rents are partly reserved to pay £51 3s. 2d., the expenses of the inclosure.

Nicholas Sprentall, in 1636, gave 20s., issuing out of Hudgrave meadow, to be distributed every Christmas to the poor.

Godfrey Wolstenholme, in 1682, left £25 to buy gowns, for two poor widows in Whittington. The amount was invested in land, and by the award of the commissioners, 2A. 2R. 3P. were allotted in exchange, which is let for 25s. per annum, and expended in two gowns for poor widows. The land is worth about 30s. an acre, but the tenant has laid out £50 in fencing and levelling, and consequently before the rent is advanced he ought to be repaid.

John Hind, in 1724, gave 50s., the interest to be given to the poor.

George Gilberthorpe, in 1729, left £6 for a distribution of bread, the clerk to have a share, on the six Sundays in Lent.

Elizabeth Bulkley, in 1740, gave money producing 6s. a year, this appears to be lost, as nothing has for many years been received.

Peter Webster, in 1750, gave to the minister, churchwardens, and overseers, the sum of £600 on trust, to be invested in government securities, and the dividends paid to 6 poor persons, 3 men and 3 women, one half year in money and the other in clothes. In 1755, the amount was invested in the south sea annuities. The dividends amounting to £18 a year, are usually given in money to 6 poor persons.

Samuel Holmes, in 1753, left £10 for the benefit of the poor. In 1810, this money was paid by Joseph Brown to John Naylor, one of the overseers, for which he never accounted.

Elizabeth Burton, in 1757, left 6s. per annum, for a distribution of bread; the amount is charged on three cottages and gardens, the owner of which furnishes the bread every Sunday in Lent.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in flannel and given to the poor at Christmas.

WHITWELL is an extensive parish and large agricultural village, on the Chesterfield and Worksop road, $11\frac{3}{4}$ miles E.N.E. from the former and $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles W. by S. from the latter. The village, which is irregularly built, is picturesquely situated on declivities to the west and south, the houses are principally stone and roofed with slate. This parish forms the north-east extremity of the county, where, by an angular point, it stretches to the Shire oak, formerly celebrated for overshadowing into the counties of Derby, Nottingham, and York; on the site of the ancient tree a flourishing young oak is now growing, in Shireoaks, parish of Worksop. It is a deeply undulating district, principally on limestone, the eastern verge mostly sand, altogether good corn land in a high state of cultivation, and contains 5079A. 1R. 28P. of land, including 400A. of woods, besides various other plantations, &c. In 1851 here were 280 houses and 1355 inhabitants, of whom 700 were males, and 655 females; rateable value £3327 17s. 7d. The Duke of Portland is lord of the manor and principal owner. The Duke of Newcastle, Henry Bowdon, Esq., with several others are also owners. The Church, situated on an eminence at the west end of the village, is dedicated to Saint Lawrence; it is a commodious structure in the form of a cross, and has nave, chancel, transcepts, and large porches, with a square tower, in which are three bells. The interior is neatly fitted up and contains several monuments of great antiquity. In the chancel is a gravestone to the memory of Radulph Rye, Esq., of magnesian limestone, with an inscription round the margin, inlaid with pitch, which has penetrated the stone so much as to form one solid body. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £12 3s. 4d., now £625, in the patronage of the Duke of Portland, and incumbency of the Rev. Evelyn Boothby, B.A., who resides at the Rectory, a good residence on an elevation opposite the church. The Wesleyan Association Methodists have a neat brick chapel here with a gallery at the east end, erected in 1846, at a cost of £273, including land, &c. it has seats for about 200 of which 150 are free. Adjoining the church is a school for boys and girls, with a house for the master and mistress, which is chiefly supported by the Duke of Portland and Lady Bentinck. The commons were enclosed under an act passed in 1813. Tithes have been commuted for £642 per annum. Framework knitting was carried on here formerly to a great extent, but is now altogether discontinued. A hiring for servants was also held on the 1st of November, which has long been obselete. The Feast is held nearest Sunday to St. Lawrence.

Baxton Moor situate on a bold elevation, half a mile S. is a small scattered hamlet, Belph, another small hamlet extending from 1 to 1½ miles S.E. The manor of Whitwell was given by Wulfric Spott, in the reign of King Ethelred, to Burton Abbey. At Domesday survey it belonged to Ralph Fitz-Hubert. Ralph de Rye was lord of the manor in 1330, and stated in answer to a quo warranto, that his ancestors had a park at Whitwell from time immemorial. Edward Rye, Esq. sold Whitwell, in the year 1563, to Richard Whalley, whose grandson of the same name, conveyed it, in 1592, to John Manners, Esq. (afterwards Sir John Manners) ancestor of the Duke of Rutland. In 1813, a treaty was commenced for the exchange of this manor for that of Barlow. Robert de Meynell, Lord of Whitwell, was one of the early benefactors to Welbeck abbey. The heiress of Meynell married Hathersage, and the co-heiress of Hathersage, Goushill, and Longford, who held it in moieties, and it passed to the Pipes or Pypes, and was sold by Humphrey Pipe, Esq., in 1593, to John Manners, abovementioned, and exchanged with the Duke of Portland. The old manor house, now the old hall, was the seat of Sir Roger Manners, in the reign of Charles I.

Steetley, or Stetley, 2½ miles N.E., at the extremity of the county, adjoining to Nottinghamshire, was formerly a place of some note, though now only a farm house, yet it appears anciently to have been a parish and a rectory. The Vavasour family, and the Frecheville, who succeeded them in the manor, presented to the rectory, in 1348, 1355, and 1370. The manor was conveyed by the Frecheville family to that of Wentworth, in or about the year 1571. It afterwards became parcel of the Worksop estate, and belonged to the Duke of Norfolk, but was sold to the Duke of Newcastle in 1842. The church, near the present farm house, exhibits a very complete specimen of the later and more enriched style of Saxon architecture, on a small scale, it has a nave and chancel, each 26 feet in length, the east end being circular and vaulted. The ribs of the arches, and the capitals of the half pillars from which they spring, are much enriched with mouldings, grotesque heads, foliage, and other ornaments. A cornice runs round the upper part of the building, on the outside. The arch of the south doorway is ornamented with zig-zag mouldings and heads; the shafts of the pillars are covered with sculptured foliage and other ornaments, in the style of the south doorway of Ely cathedral. It is covered with ivy and has long been desecrated. In 1828 several bodies were discovered in the burial ground. There are many scattered farms extending from 1 to 2 miles from the village. The hamlet of Cresswell is given with Elmton.

Charities.—Mrs. Drewe, who died 1708, gave £5 to the use of the poor.

Peter Fox, who died 1732, gave by will, £3 to the poor. The amount, £8, is in the hands of George Porter, of Whitwell, at 4 per cent. interest.

Edward England, gave 5s. yearly to the poor, which is paid out of a homestead and some land in Whitwell.

Thomas Pilkington, who died 1756, gave the interest of £7 to the poor. The yearly sum of 18s. derived from the above benefactions is distributed at the church, on St. Thomas's day amongst poor widows.

Joseph Bright, gave £5 to the poor, but this sum was lost by the insolvency of the person in whose hands it was placed at interest.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity.—See Bradley.—The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, and given to the poor.

WINGERWORTH parish, formerly considered a chapelry in Chesterfield parish, consists of the Hall, and several small hamlets, and contains 2,907A. 2R. 13P. of land, mostly a clay soil, abounding in coal, of which 1,460A. are meadow and pasture, 700A. woods, 666A. arable, and 81A. 2R. 13P. roads, water, and waste, and in 1851 had 95 houses, and 463 inhabitants, of whom 244 were males, and 219 females; rateable value £4310 3s. 1d. The late Sir Henry John Joseph Hunloke, Bart., was the principal owner and lord of the manor. The Family seat is Wingerworth Hall, a large elegant stone mansion, in a well wooded park, $2\frac{1}{4}$ miles S.S.W. from Chesterfield; it was rebuilt between the years 1726 and 1729, by Sir Thomas Windsor Hunloke, the third baronet. The principal front is to the east, having the entrance from a broad flight of steps; the top is surrounded by balustrades, ornamented with globes and urns. It is now occupied by Wilmer Wilmer, Esq. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, situated near the Hall, is a very ancient structure, with an embattled tower and three bells, which having become considerably dilapidated, has been restored, new paved, pewed, and provided with 2 good stoves for warming it. It contains some relics of stained glass, and several monuments to the Hunloke family, amongst which are two to the memories of, respectively, Sir Henry John Joseph Hunloke, Bart., who died unmarried on the 8th February, 1856, and to Sir James Hunloke, Bart., who died 22nd June, 1856. The living is a perpetual curacy, certified value in the King's book £16, now £74, has been augmented with £200 benefactions, and £400 Queen Anne's bounty. The Bishop of Lichfield is patron, and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners are impropriators, and have 30A. 1R. 21P. of glebe, and the incumbent 15A. 1R. 23P. of glebe. The tithes are commuted for £248 10s. for the large, and £34 10s. for the small. The Rev. Samuel Revel, M.A., is the incumbent. The manor was in the family of Brailsford as early as the reign of Henry II. At a later period it belonged to the Curzons, of whom it was purchased, in the reign of Henry VIII., by Nicholas Hunloke. His grandson, Henry Hunloke, Esq., being at a very advanced age, died suddenly at Ilkeston, in this county, in the presence of King James I., to whom, as sheriff of the county, he went to pay his respects, and attended him thus far on his progress, in the year 1624. His son Henry, who is said to have been only four years of age at the time of his father's death, distinguished himself as a zealous royalist, raised a troop of horse at his own expense for Colonel Frecheville's regiment, of which he was lieutenant-colonel, and distinguished himself at the battle of Edge Hill, in 1642, where he was knighted on the field, and in the same year created a baronet. Sir Thomas Windsor Hunloke, the fifth baronet, died in 1816, and was succeeded by his son, the late Sir Henry John Joseph, born in 1812, and who died in February, 1856. On his death the title reverted to his uncle, the late Sir James Hunloke, who, however, only enjoyed it for a few months, dying in June, 1856, when the baronetcy and male issue became extinct. However, under the will of the last Sir Henry, the name and arms of Hunloke only, are to be borne by each successive owner (among his collateral relations), or to whom he may entail the estate; at present, and until certain events arrive among his immediate next heirs, he has put the management of his entire property into the hands of trustees, who are the Duke of Devonshire, and Wilmer Wilmer, Esq., of London, and they are in possession of the mansion and domain, and the rest of the property. In this parish are extensive iron mines, and a foundry, held under the Hunloke estate, by Messrs. Yates, and Co., of Rotherham; also large collieries, worked by the Wingerworth Coal Company, and by the Clay Cross Company, so that there is a great demand for labour, and an extensive and valuable mineral field in full operation.

Wingerworth Hall was taken possession of for the Parliament, and garrisoned in the year 1643. It is said that the estate, though sequestered, was preserved from injury by Colonel Michel, a Parliamentary officer, who married the widow of the loyal Sir Henry Hunloke, who died in 1648.

Among Dr. Pegge's notes, mention is made that Ann Ash died at Wingerworth, in 1789, aged 104, and her tombstone records the fact. Feast, last Sunday in October. Here are some extensive stone and slate quarries, and various scattered farms. Birdholme Cottage, 1¼ mile N.E. Bole Hill, 1 mile S.W.

Derby Lane, a scattered district of houses, on the Chesterfield and Derby road. Harper Hill, 1¾ miles W.N.W. Hill Houses, a small hamlet, ¾ mile W.S.W. from the church. Lidgate, ½ mile W. Stonedge, 2¾ miles S.W., adjoins the Moors; here several basins and two seats are excavated in Stonedge Cliff.

Stubbing Court, a handsome mansion, 1 mile W., in a secluded situation, with park-like grounds, is the seat of Thomas Humphrey Pedley, Esq., and the property of Mrs. Gladwin.

Swathwick, a small village on the Walton and Chesterfield road, 1½ miles N.N.W. from the church.

CHARITIES.—John Stanford, who died in 1736, made in his lifetime some charitable provision, supposed to be verbal, as no record remains; but it appears from a paper, in the hand-writing of Sir Henry Hunloke, who died in 1804, that, as trustee of charity money under the name of that gentleman, he was possessed of £800 stock, New South Sea annuities. Since that period, £27 annually has been paid by the Hunloke family. Of the £27 received, £19 is paid to a schoolmaster at Hill Houses, where a school was built by Sir Henry Hunloke, about 1758. There is also a dwelling-house and garden, which the master occupies rent-free, in consequence of which 20 poor children are instructed. In 1856, W. Wilmer, Esq., one of the trustees under the will of the late Sir Henry Hunloke, gave the master notice to strike off the books, on the 1st of December, the 20 free scholars, and to charge them in future a trifle per week, according to what they require. Out of the residue the school premises are repaired, and the surplus is distributed amongst the poor.

Ellen Lowe, in 1669, left £20 to be laid out in land, the rent to be distributed yearly amongst poor widows. The sum of 20s. was secured on a field called the White Banks, in Hasland, and is distributed on Shrove Tuesday.

Godfrey Foljambe's charity (see Chesterfield).—One-twelfth share was originally apportioned to this parish, which, in 1827, amounted to £26 19s. 10d., for distribution to the poor; but we have recommended, as a more certain scale, that the division should be made according to the population of 1821, of which this parish will receive £4 17s., taking the income at £220.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity (see Bradley). The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the incumbent, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, which is distributed to the poor.

WINGFIELD NORTH, an extensive parish, includes the townships of North Wingfield, Clay Cross or Clay Lane, Pilsley, Stretton, Tupton, and Woodthorpe, 10,687A. 3R. 32P. of land, and in 1851 had 912 houses, and 4351 inhabitants, of whom 2355 were males, and 1996 females; rateable value £14,649 7s. The Midland railway crosses the parish, which is noted for its extensive collieries and ironstone beds.

WINGFIELD, (NORTH) a township and well-built improving village, situated on an eminence, 4½ miles S.S.E. from Chesterfield, contains with the hamlet of William-Thorpe, 1451A. 2R. 21P. of land, and in 1851 had 139 houses, and 668 inhabitants, of whom 371 were males, and 297 females; rateable value £2952. The principal owners are the Exors. of the late Sir Henry Hunloke, Bart., Wm. Drabble, Esq., J. W. Clay, Esq., and the Exors. of the late Mr. Pearson. The Church, dedicated to St. Lawrence, is an ancient stone edifice, with nave, chancel, side aisles, and square tower, with six bells. The chancel was restored in 1850, by the rector. In the vestry is the mutilated figure of a knight templar, and a similar one in the church yard. On the north side of the church is an ancient stone font, and over the south porch is the mutilated figure of the Virgin Mary. In the church are several ancient monuments, of which two are to the Holland family, of Ford Hall. The living is a rectory, valued in the King's book at £21 6s. 3d., now £1200. Richard Barrow, Esq., patron; the Rev. Edward Walter Lowe, incumbent, who has about 80 acres of glebe, and resides at the rectory, a handsome mansion, east of the church. The tithes are commuted for £117 8s. 0¼d. A school is kept in the vestry, endowed with £2 10s. per annum, for which five poor children are taught free. (See Charities.) The manor, Winnefelt, at the Domesday survey, was held by Walter Deincourt, previous to which it had been described as an appendage to Morton, and had been given by Wulfric Spott to Burton abbey. The Deincourts gave the whole or a moiety of the manor to Welbeck abbey. Sir Ralph Longford is said to have possessed a moiety in 1513, by descent from the Deincourts. After the reformation the Leakes were possessed of the whole. After the death of Nicholas Leake, Earl of Scarsdale, it was sold to the Greens. The church was given by Ralph Deincourt to the priory of Thurgarton, and had from the reformation till sold by the Earl of Scarsdale been attached to the manor. A detached portion of the parish of Morton, amounting to 115A. 0R. 23P. of land, is situated in this township. A New National School, with a house for the master, was built in 1854, by the Wingerworth Coal Company, at a cost of £800. It consists of one large room, 48 feet by 16 feet, which may, if necessary, be made into two rooms by a sliding partition. It is a good brick building capable of accommodating 80 children; the average attendance is about 70. The school is partly self-supporting, as every man and boy who are employed at the Works, pay one penny per week towards its support, and whatever deficiency may arise is paid by the Company. At the cross roads, near the centre of the village is an ancient stone, or guide post, having on the east side engraved "Chesterfield Rode," on the north side "Darby Rode," and on the west side, "By Captain Firebrass, Mansfield." About one mile W. from the village is the Clay Cross Station, on the Midland Railway, from whence there are trains to the north and south, several times daily. Mr. Robert Jeffrey, station master. Feast, second Sunday in August. Lings, are two farm houses, 1 mile N.E. from the village.

WILLIAM-THORPE, a small hamlet and manor, 1½ mile E. from Wingfield, with which it keeps its poor, but maintains its own roads. The Wingerworth Coal Company have a colliery here. The manor Wilelmesthorpe, at Domesday survey, belonged to Walter Deincourt. Oliverde Barton married the heiress and was possessed of it in 1278, from whom it passed to Babington Chaworth, Lord Sheffield, and in 1638 to Sir William Cope. The trustees of Sir Anthony Cope, Bart., sold it in, 1676 to Sir William Hunloke, Bart., and it is now the property of the Executors of the late Sir Henry Hunloke, Bart.

CLAY CROSS, or CLAY LANE, a township and large improving village, advantageously situated in the centre of the extensive coal fields with which this neighbourhood abounds, 5 miles S. from Chesterfield, and 1 mile S.W. from North Wingfield, contains 4380A. 3R. of land, and in 1851 had 487 houses, and 2278 inhabitants, of whom 1234 were males, and 1044 females; rateable value £3352 10s. The principal owners are the Clay Cross Co., Gladwin Turbut, Esq., J. G. Barnes, Esq., Exors. of the late Mr. Jeremiah Booth, Messrs. James Taylor, James Bamford, John Hodgkinson, John Froggatt, and Holt Dixon, besides whom are a number of small freeholders. The Church, dedicated to St. Bartholomew, was erected in 1851, at a cost of £2500 raised by subscriptions and grants, towards which the Clay Cross Company gave £600 and the site. The first stone of the building was laid by Gladwin Turbutt, Esq., August 14th, 1849. It is a handsome stone edifice in the early English style, and consists of a nave, side aisles, chancel, and tower with one bell, to which was added in 1856, a spire of beautiful proportions, 70 feet high, at a cost of £340. It has sittings for 450 persons, all of which are free. On the completion of the church, the Building Committee presented to the Rev. Robert Chas. Willy, B.A., a handsome silver salver, in testimony of his valuable services as honorary secretary. The living is a perpetual curacy, value £60, to which the Clay Cross Company make an annual grant of £50. It is in the patronage of the Vicar of North Wingfield, and the incumbency of the Rev. Joseph Oldham, B.D., who resides at the parsonage, a neat stone building, at the southern extremity of the village. It was erected in 1853, at the cost of £1200, raised by subscriptions and grants from the Diocesan Society, and from Queen Anne's bounty. The tithes were commuted in 1843 for £198 10s. 6d. Adjoining the parsonage are the National Schools, erected in 1853 at a cost of £400, raised by subscriptions, aided by a grant of £40. It is a handsome stone building, and consists of one large room capable of accommodating 150 children; contiguous to which is the master's residence, built at a cost of £300, the proceeds of the sale of the Deer Leap School property. (See Charities.) The average attendance is 60. Mr. William A. Snaith, master. The Wesleyans, the New Connexion, and the Primitive Methodists have each places of worship here, the two former erected in 1848, and the latter in 1849. This place a few years ago was only a very small village, and its history in a commercial point of view is brief but interesting, as showing how rapidly capital and enterprize, judiciously applied, have developed the mineral riches of this place, which would otherwise have been still buried in the earth. A little over twenty years ago, there was hardly a house to be seen on the ground now honeycombed, through the instrumentality of steam, but it was not until the Midland railway was projected and carried out by the late George Stephenson, Esq., that the immense mineral resources of Clay Cross were fully developed, it having previously had no outlet, except by land or canal carriage. It may not be generally known that the strata or vein, of which the mines at Clay Cross form a part, is perhaps one of the most extensive in the world, occupying an area from N. to S. a distance of 65 miles, and its greatest width is 23 miles. The strata of the coal formation are very numerous, and the seams are about 30 in number, varying from 6 to 11 feet in thickness. About 1,200 men and boys are now employed at the "Clay Cross works," and the average quantity of coals got annually is about 200,000 tons. The Company, in 1854, formed the resolution of building Schools for the education of the younger branches of the community, and which was carried into effect at a cost of from £3,000 to £4,000. The first stone of the schools was laid by Samuel Morton Peto, Esq., on the 15th August, 1854, and they were opened in August, 1855. They stand on rising ground and are a noble building highly ornamental to the place, and consist of a Public Room, in the centre of the same, 54 feet long by 25 feet wide, and 25 feet high on the wall, and lighted by three large semi-circular headed windows at the east end, and two double lights at the centre; at the farthest extremity of the room is a gallery, and under it are approaches, on one side to the Infant School, and on the other to The Library, 19ft. by 16ft. which contains 1818 volumes. On either side of this are the Boys' and Girls' schools, each respectively 50 feet by 30 feet. In immediate connexion with which are Class-rooms, each 20 feet 6 inches by 17 feet, also lobby-entrances for hats, bonnets, &c., with lavatories opening into the same. In the centre of the building, over the gallery rises a tower 11 feet square, and 60 feet high, in which it is intended to place a clock and bell. The large area of ground in front of the building will be divided into two parts, the one will be formed into a pleasure ground, enclosed by a fence wall, and planted with shrubs, and the other will be for a Recreation ground, to which the Company's servants will have free access. The schools are self-supporting, as every man and boy employed on the works contribute 1d. per week each towards them. The average attendance of children is, 75 boys, 100 girls, and 160 infants. The Midland railway passes under the village by a tunnel of 2000 yards in length, and has a station about one mile North.

Deerleap, half mile S.W. from Clay Lane. Here was a Free School—(see charities). Holm Gate, half mile S.W., and New Market, a small village, one mile S.W. from Clay Lane.

PILSLEY is a long scattered village and township, in a retired situation, 6 miles S. by E. from Chesterfield, and 1½ mile S.E. from North Wingfield, contains 1,554 acres of land, exclusive of roads, and in 1851 had 77 houses, and 403 inhabitants, of whom 216 were males, and 187 females; rateable value, £1,474. Tithes have been commuted for £267 6s. J. Sampson, Esq. is lord of the manor and owner; Luke Sampson, Wm. Drabble, and Edw.D. Sitwell, Esqs. with several others, are also owners. The Wesleyan Methodists have a small neat stone chapel here, erected in 1843, at a cost of about £110, which will accommodate about 100. This manor, Prinneslie, at the Domesday survey, belonged to Walter Deincourt, it was afterwards in the Foljambes, from whom it passed, by marriage, to the Plumptons, and was afterwards possessed by the Leakes. It was sold by the trustees of the Earl of Scarsdale, in 1743, to the Caltons, of Chesterfield. In 1799, it was sold to Mr. Thomas Wilson, from whom it passed by purchase to the present owner.

STRETTON township and small well built village, on the Chesterfield and Derby road, 6 miles S. from Chesterfield, and 2 miles S.S.W. from North Wingfield. The south extremity of the village extends into the parish of Shirland. It contains 1652A. 2R. 11P. of land, principally a cold clay soil, and in 1851, had 98 houses, and 456 inhabitants, of whom 239 were males, and 226 females; rateable value, £2450 13s. 1d. The principal owners are, Gladwin Turbutt, Esq., John Gratton, Esq., and Mr. Wm. Milnes; the former gentleman, with the Clay Cross Company, and the freeholders are joint lords of the manor. The Midland railway passes a little west of the village, and has a station here. Tithes were commuted in 1843, for £278 4s.; and here are 3A. 2R. 25P of glebe land.

Flax Piece, two farms, 1 mile N.N.E. from the village. Ford House, a neat mansion, is the property of Gladwin Turbutt, Esq., by purchase, from the heir of the late John Holland, Esq., and the residence of Thos. Langhorne, Esq. Handley, a hamlet of farm houses, 1 mile N.N.W. South Hill, a hamlet, 1 mile W. Timber Field House, half mile W. from the village, is the property and residence of Mr. John Grattan, gent. Woodhead, two farms, 1¼ mile N.N.W. Woolley Moor, a small hamlet, 1¼ mile S.W. by W. from Stretton.

TUPTON, a township and small agricultural village 4 miles S. from Chesterfield, and 1 mile W. from North Wingfield, contains 718A. 3R. 17P. of land, a strong soil, and in 1851 had 58 houses and 270 inhabitants, of whom 155 were males, and 115 females; rateable value £2209 6s. 8d. The principal owners are the Exors. of the late Sir Henry Hunloke, Bart., Frederick Packman, Esq., and Frederick Lord Clay, the former are lords of the manor. The tithes are commuted for £156 16s. 6d. The Hall, a large mansion S. of the village, is the seat and property of Frederick Packman, Esq. Ankerbold, a large farm in the occupation of the Wingerworth Coal Co. The Midland railway occupies 20A. 3R. 35P, of land in this township, and has a station about 1 mile east from the village, known as Clay Cross station; near which is the brick, tile, and drain pipe manufactory of Mr. Richd. Metcalfe, of Woodthorp. Feast, Sunday before 28th Sept.

WOODTHORPE township and small village, on the east side of the Derby and Chesterfield road, with scattered farms, 4 miles south from Chesterfield and 1½ miles W. from North Wingfield, contains 1020A. 0R. 23P. of land, and in 1851 had 53 houses and 267 inhabitants, of whom 140 were males, and 127 females; rateable value £2210 17s. The Exors. of the late Sir Henry Hunloke, Bart., are the principal owners and lords of the manor. The tithes were commuted for £118 8s. A detached portion of the parish of Morton, amounting to 15A. 2R. 25P. is situated within this township. Feast, Sunday before 28th Sept.

CHARITIES.—Deer Leap School.—By indenture, 1790, John Mottershaw conveyed to Anthony Lax Maynard and five others, a clear yearly rent charge of £15 15s. issuing out of one-third part of an estate situated at Clay Lane, containing in the whole 93 acres, upon trust, to appoint a schoolmaster to reside at Deer Leap, and should pay 10s. 6d. yearly for each scholar out of the said rent charge, so that there should not be less than 25, nor more than 30 scholars. The yearly rent charge is paid by the owner of the farm. The master instructs 25 children, and also provides them books. The £450 purchase money was raised by the following donations:—Thomas Milward, £150; John Brocksop, £150; William Webster, £45; Jeremiah Higginbotham, £30; John Mottershaw, £30; James Milward, £15; and Edward Towndrow, £30. The above rent charge was sold in 1853, and the proceeds applied towards erecting the National schools at Clay Cross.

Rev. Thomas Luddington, by will, 1616, left the yearly sum of 50s. to pious uses, viz., 10s. to the poor, and 40s. to a schoolmaster to teach poor children. It appears £50 was laid out in 1698, in the purchase of a rent charge of 50s., issuing from an estate in Hasland, about 3A., called the White Banks; 40s. is paid for teaching 4 poor children, and the residue distributed to the poor.

Thomas Dobb, in 1617, left £10, the interest to be paid to the poor.

John Brailsford, by will, 1665, left £5 for the use of the poor. The sum of 15s. is paid out of the churchwarden's account, and distributed on St. Thomas's day.

John Stephenson, in 1675, left £8 per annum in lands at Ashover Hill Top, to be given to the poor; £4 every fortieth day after Whitsuntide, and £4 every Christmas day. The premises, about 22A., now belonging to this charity, have for many years been under the management of the churchwardens, and include an allotment set out upon the Ashover inclosure, and are let for £20 per annum, which is apportioned to the different parts of the parish.

Church Lands.—About 37A. of land lying in Pilsley, North Wingfield, and Handley, and Clay Lane, let for £46 per annum, is applied by the churchwardens agreeable to a decree by a Master in Chancery, made 1797, whereby it was declared that all necessary repairs for the parish church should in the first place be paid, and the surplus applied as the trustees and inhabitants should at a vestry meeting determine.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's Charity.—(See Bradley.)—The annual sum of £5 10s. received by the rector, is laid out in flannel and distributed to the poor about Christmas.

William Stocks, by will, 1696, gave a rent charge of 10s. per annum, out of a close at Higham Hill, called South Field, for teaching two poor children of Smith Moor, or Clay Lane. The annual sum of 10s. is paid by Mr. John Rooth, in respect of a house and land, in the parish of Shirland. It is received by the parish clerk, who in consideration, instructs two poor children in reading.

There was in the hands of Mr. Richd. Clay, of the Hill, in Tupton, a sum of £20, given by some person unknown, for which he payed 16s. a year, as interest. There is also in the hands of the Exors. of the late Thomas Holmsfield, £20, for which he gave a promissory note, supposed to have been left by Job Brailsford, and for which 18s. a year interest is paid. These sums are paid to the overseers of Tupton, and distributed to the poor of the township.

WINGFIELD (SOUTH), a parish and village, pleasantly situated on an eminence 2¼ miles W. from Alfreton, and 14 miles N. from Derby, and with Oakerthorpe, contains 3268A. 3R. 19P. of good arable and pasture land, inclusive of 934A. 0R. 34P. of land in the Great Park, and 199A. 0R. 16P. of land in the Little Park, both of which are tithe free; a small farm of 44A. 3R. 19P., being set apart for that purpose, and in 1851 it had 245 houses and 1092 inhabitants, of whom 530 were males and 562 females; rateable value, £6646 2s. The principal owners are R. C. Shelley, Esq., W. S. Leacroft, Esq.,

R. B. Leacroft, Esq., Rev. Imanuel Halton, Rev. H. Pearson, the Duke of Devonshire, W. P. Morewood, Esq., and W. E. Nightingale, Esq. The landowners are lords of the manor. The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is situated at Oakerthorpe, ¼ mile E. of Wingfield, and the living is a vicarage, valued in the King's book at £6 13s. 4d., now £324. The Duke of Devonshire, patron, and the Rev. Imanuel Halton, M.A., incumbent. The Church is a neat structure, with nave, chancel, aisles, and square embattled tower, with 6 bells. The vicarage house is a little east of the church. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel, built in 1811. In 1839 the Free School was rebuilt by the Rev. I. Halton; the master receives £15 per annum, for teaching 26 poor children, and £10 is given to the poor.—(See Charities). Here are three extensive collieries, viz.: the High Field Oakerthorpe, and Wingfield collieries, the two former are worked by W. Worswick, Esq., and the latter by Mr. John Hopkinson. There are six different beds of coal in the parish, the principal of which are situated on the east side of the river Amber. The Midland railway passes through the parish and has a neat station at Oakerthorpe. Here is an Infant school, supported by John Smedley, Esq., and is used on the Sabbath day by the Wesleyan Reformers. The Ikneild street, a Roman road, passes through the parish. Prior to the Norman survey, Roger of Poictou, resided here; but at that period South Wingfield came into the possession of William Peverel, the natural son of William the Conqueror, who is said to have had a mansion house here. About the eighth year of Henry VI. it came into the possession of Ralph, Lord Cromwell, whose right was disputed by Henry Pierpoint, Knight, but on a compromise was allotted to the former, who sold the reversion to John Talbot, second Earl of Shrewsbury, in whose family it continued until the death of the seventh Earl, in 1616, when the manor became divided between the Earls of Pembroke, Kent, and Arundel and Surrey, who had married the three daughters and co-heiresses of the Earl Gilbert. In the year 1666, Mr. Imanuel Halton, who was the first resident of that name, at Wingfield manor, was a celebrated Mathematician. In the year 1676, he observed an eclipse of the sun, at Wingfield; his account of this phenomenon was published in the Philosophical Transactions for that year.

The Manor House, which even in its ruins, exhibits many specimens of its original magnificence, was built about the year 1440, by Ralph, Lord Cromwell, lord treasurer in the reign of Henry VI. It afterwards came into the possession of the Earls of Shrewsbury; for George, Earl of Shrewsbury, died here 26th of July, in the 33rd year of Henry VIII. Another person of the same family and name, died here, in the 33rd year of Queen Elizabeth. This was most probably the Earl of Shrewsbury, who had the custody of Mary, Queen of Scotland. It is said that this unfortunate princess was confined here several years, and tradition informs us her suite of apartments were on the west side of the north court, said to be the most beautiful part of the building. This noble mansion was built round a large quadrangular court; it was castellated and embattled. At each corner stands a tower, but that at the south-west rises higher than the rest, and commands a very extensive prospect; it is now a ruin, and has not been occupied for more than eighty years. The Rev. Imanuel Halton is the owner, and resides in a house at a small distance from it, erected about the year 1780, by one of his ancestors. During the Civil Wars, in the reign of Charles I., the Manor House was attacked and taken by storm in 1643, by a party of Royalists, under the command of the Marquis of Newcastle. But shortly afterwards, Sir John Gell, of Hopton, an officer in the service of Parliament, sent Major Sanders, one of his officers, with a regiment of horse to attack them. The assault was begun on the east side, with cannon planted on Pentrich Common; but a breach here being found impracticable, the ordnance was removed to a wood on the opposite side; from whence it played with such terrible effect that a breach was soon made, and the besieged were compelled to an immediate surrender. Colonel Dalby, the governor, was killed during the siege; he had disguised himself as a common soldier, but being seen and known by a deserter, he was shot by him in the face as he was walking in the stables. The manor house was well situated as a place of defence; it stands on an eminence, which is steep on every side excepting the north, where it was strengthened by a deep ditch, made nearly across the hill. A part of the bedstead, in which the Queen of Scots slept, when a prisoner here, is now in the possession of Mr. Joseph Cupit, at the Horse and Groom Inn.

Wingfield Park House, the residence of David Wheatcroft, Esq., is a neat mansion at the entrance into the park from the Chesterfield road. A beautiful lodge, in the decorated English style, has been erected. Wingfield Park Mill, 2 miles S.S.W. from Wingfield, and 2½ from Ambergate, is a lace thread manufactory. Wire Mill, 1 mile S. of Wingfield, is now a corn mill, in the occupation of Mr. G. Fletcher. The feast is on the 1st of November.

OAKERTHORPE, a hamlet and small village, ½ mile E. from South Wingfield. The Duke of Devonshire is lord of the manor, and the principal landowner. W. Worswick, Esq., has a colliery here; and ironstone is got to some extent here by Messrs. Henry Marshall, and Co. The South Wingfield railway station stands in this manor, and is distant 1¾ miles W. from Alfreton

The Oakerthorpe charity estate, now produces £55 a year, of which £20 is given to two deserving young men, after having served their apprenticeship, to assist them to commence in business, and £20 for exhibitions to two poor scholars at Cambridge university, and the remainder is given to the poor. (See Charities.)

CHARITIES.—Samuel Newton, of the island of Barbadoes, by will, 1683, directed that his executors should purchase a piece of land, of the value of £10 yearly, for the use of the poor of South Wingfield and Oakerthorpe. By indenture, 1692, Samuel Guy and Thomas Gell, in consideration of £210 conveyed a close called the Barn close, containing nine acres, with a barn thereon, situate in Wirksworth. The vicar, churchwardens, and overseers of the poor, were authorised to let the premises, and divide the rents according to the said will. The property consists of two closes of pasture land, let for £25 8s. per annum, and an allotment set out on Wirksworth Moor, of 1A. 1R., let for £2 5s. per annum; and the rents are disposed of as follows: An annual sum of £10, subject to 5s. deduction for expenses, is given to the poor of this parish, including Okerthorpe, and £17 is paid to a schoolmaster. Previously to 1820, there was an ancient school room, supposed to have been built on the waste, to which, about 1797, a dwelling-house for the master was added by the parish: from 1820 to 1825, the sum of £100 11s. had accumulated from reserved rents, for re-building the school, but objections were raised as to this application of the money, and in June, 1825, a new schoolmaster was appointed, who receives £17, and has instructed 26 children in a house rented by himself. By a decree of commissioners of charitable uses, held at Derby, 8th of February, 1729, it was ordered that two-thirds of the rents should be distributed amongst the poor of South Wingfield, and one-third amongst the poor of Oakerthorpe. The dwelling-house which adjoined the old school is let for £4 10s. per annum, and carried to the surplus fund.

Rev. Francis Gisborne's charity. (See Bradley.) The annual sum of £5 10s., received by the vicar, is laid out in coarse woollen cloth and flannel, which is distributed to the poor about Christmas.

Phillip Strelley's charity, of which certain members of the Goldsmith's Company are trustees. The estate, from which an annual rent of £55, received by the trustees, is situated in the manor of Oakerthorpe, in this parish; and he directed £20 per annum to be paid for placing out two poor men's sons as apprentices; and £10 per annum given in exhibitions for two poor scholars in the universities of Cambridge or Oxford; a preference to be given to the sons of his tenants, born within the manor of Oakerthorpe.

Post Office, at Samuel Taylor's; letters arrive from Alfreton, at 8 a.m., and are despatched at 7 p.m.

WESLEY COLLEGE, Glossop road.—This large and beautiful building was erected in the years 1836-7-8, at a cost of upwards of £30,000, by the Wesleyan Methodists, and was opened in 1838, as the Wesleyan Proprietary Grammar School. In the year 1844, it became a college of the University of London, under the title of "Wesley College." It furnishes accommodation for about 200 students and pupils, and is conducted by a governor, head-master, and nineteen other masters and professors. It was established to give a first-class education to the sons of the wealthier classes among the Wesleyan Methodists, in connexion with instruction in the doctrines and principles of Christianity, as held by that church. The sons of other persons are admitted, but all conform to the same religious training. Rev. S. D. Waddy, governor and chaplain, H. M. Shera, Esq., M.A, head-master, Rev. J. M. Raby, G. R. St. Michael's Church, Queen street, Derby, is about to be rebuilt, and enlarged from the designs of Mr. H. J. Stevens, architect, at a cost of £2,650, towards which the Local Board of Health have given £340, the Lichfield Diocesean Society, £150, The Vicar, Family, and Friends, £200, the Church of England Society, £130, and the parish and congregation above £400. The number of sittings in the new building will be 350, of which number 130 are free. The increased accommodation will be 150 sittings.

The Speedwell Mine, about one mile west from Castleton on the Buxton road, one of the most interesting in the county, (see page 529) is now the property of Mr. Peter Kirk, Castle Hotel, Castleton.

RAILWAYS.

Owing to an unforeseen accident we were unable to give the subjoined valuable and interesting information under its proper head, (see page 23) but its authenticity and value, will, we trust, be a sufficient apology for its insertion here.

The Erewash Valley Branch of the Midland Railway.—This line commences from a junction with the Midland Counties or South Branch, between the Trent Junction and Long Eaton Station, and proceeds in a nearly northerly direction up the Valley of the River Erewash, on the borders of the county of Nottinghamshire; passing by Long Eaton, Sandiacre, Stanton-by-Dale, Ilkeston, Heanor, Codnor Park, &c., &c. in Derbyshire, and Toton, Stapleford, Cossall, Eastwood, &c. in Nottinghamshire, and terminating by two separate branches, respectively at Birchwood and Pinxton, near Alfreton. The line divides for these two places near the Pye-bridge Station, at a point distant 14 miles from its commencement, and exactly 1 mile 25 chains from each of its termini. At the Pinxton end, that branch of the line meets and runs into the Mansfield and Pinxton branch of the Midland Railway, thus forming a continuous line from Pye-bridge to Mansfield. At the Southern extremity of the line, at Long Eaton, a short loop of about a quarter of a mile in length is constructed, running into the south branch in the direction of Nottingham, to enable traffic to be worked direct between the Erewash Valley and that place. At Codnor Park is the junction with the Butterley Railway, the property of the Butterley Company, communicating with the immense coal and iron works of that company. This Railway opens up an important mineral district, cutting through the centre of the southern portion of the great Derbyshire and Yorkshire Coal Field, and the whole district abounding also in iron. Numerous branches are constructed at various points of the line, in order to form a better communication with the colleries and ironworks bordering upon it, constructed at the expense of of the various colliery owners, &c., and communicate with the line at different points. The Railway was originally commenced by an independent company, with a capital of £190,000 and powers to borrow an additional sum of £63,000, and who obtained the Act of Parliament in 1845; the act also enabling them to sell the undertaking to the Midland Company, who had previously (February, 1845) agreed with them to buy it, and who accordingly immediately after purchased it at the price of a minimum guarantee of 6 per cent upon £145,000. Subsequently (June 26, 1846) the Midland Company obtained a further Act, enabling them to extend the line from Pye-bridge, its proposed original termination, to Clay Cross on the north branch. This extension was begun but only carried out to Birchwood, although only about 6½ miles remain to be done. The extension, if completed, would reduce by nearly seven miles the distance between all stations south of the Trent Junction and north of Clay Cross. The Act for the construction of the several coal branches and also the branch to Pinxton, was obtained July 16, 1846. The whole length of the line and branches is 23 miles, and the cost was about £340,000

The Ripley and St. Mary's Bridge Branches of the Midland Railway. The Ripley Branch commences from the termination of a small branch of the North Midland at Little Eaton, about 4 miles north of Derby, and called the Little Eaton Branch, and proceeding in a north-easterly direction, through a very important coal district, terminates in the township of Ripley, parish of Pentrich, at a point distant only about 3 miles from the Codnor Park Station of the Erewash Valley Line. It is 6½ miles in length, altogether a single line, and follows the course of the Old Tramway made in connection with the Little Eaton Canal. The coal district through which it passes forms part of the same as that through which the Erewash Valley passes, being in the southern portion of the great Derbyshire and Yorkshire Field. The St. Mary's Bridge Branch (Derby) commences from a junction with the north branch at Little Chester, one mile north of Derby station, and terminates, as its name implies, near the St Mary's Bridge in the north-eastern suburb of that town, where an extensive wharf is formed for supplying the town with coal from the Ripley district, for which purpose the branch itself is constructed This Line is half a mile in length—double line. The Act for these two lines was obtained in 1848, and by it also several coal branches were authorized, to communicate between the Ripley branch and various collieries in the district, none of which however have as yet been carried out, and though, as above stated, the Act was obtained in 1848, the whole undertaking was allowed to rest until the close of 1850, when further parliamentary powers were necessary for extending the time originally allowed for the compulsory purchase of lands. These were however obtained on the 24th July, 1851, but even then the works were not commenced until August, 1853, and after some further delay, were completed in August, 1855. In September of the same year, the lines were opened for goods and mineral traffic, but owing to a disagreement between the Company and the Government Inspector, the Ripley branch was not opened for passenger traffic until the 1st of September, 1856. The cost of this undertaking, up to the time of the opening for passenger traffic, was about £70,000, although the original estimate was much less, the increased expenditure being probably, almost wholly owing to the delays which occurred in the prosecution of the undertaking. The Little Eaton Branch is 25 chains in length, and up to the time of the construction of the Ripley branch had its termination near the stone quarries and canal at Little Eaton. It was completed in the early part of 1848, at the cost of £4,200. It is now merged in the Ripley branch. The distance from Little Eaton Junction to Ripley is nearly seven miles.

The Manchester, Buxton, Matlock, and Midland Junction Railway.—This Railway was originally projected to run from the Ambergate Station of the Midland Railway, by Matlock and Buxton to the London and North Western Railway near Manchester, length 45 miles; and the Act for the purpose was obtained 16th July, 1846. The line was, however, only constructed to a distance of 11½ miles from Ambergate, that is, to Rowsley, 4 miles from Bakewell and 3 from Chatsworth. This was opened 4th June 1849. The Cromford Canal, 17 miles long, was subsequently purchased by this Company, by powers conferred by their Act of Incorporation and the Cromford Canal Sale Act, 1846.

The price was £101,200, and in 1852 the whole concern, Railway and Canal, was leased for 19 years to the Midland and London and North Western Companies jointly, at a rent of 2½ per cent. per annum upon the paid up Capital of the Railway, the two Companies also paying the interest on the Capital of the Canal. The lease dates from the 1st of July, 1852, and the Midland Company work and maintain the line on the joint account. The Railway runs from Ambergate in a north westerly direction up the valley of the River Derwent, to Rowsley. In its course it has no less than 6 tunnels, two of which pass under the celebrated Matlock High Tor. This Railway, still more than the North Midland, is an exception to the rule which holds good with most others, in respect to the uninteresting scenery generally met with along them. Throughout its whole course the scenery is of the most romantic description, the valley being bounded on each side by stupendous hills, flanked here and there with high rocks and clothed in many places with luxuriant masses of wood descending frequently almost to the edge of the river, so as to completely conceal the Railway. This is more remarkable in the first or lower half of its course, where nearly all the tunnels are met with, and where the valley often is so narrow that it has been found absolutely necessary to carry the Railway under or along the sides of the hills and rocks. The upper half is more open, and from that cause, though still presenting scenes of great beauty, the valley loses that appearance of wildness and seclusion which distinguishes the lower half. The view of Matlock Bath from the Station is remarkably fine, being decidedly the most imposing on the whole line. In addition to the tunnels before mentioned there are some very expensive works on this line, consisting chiefly of extensive embankments, cuttings, and retaining walls, substantial bridges, and station buildings, chiefly built of stone. The cost of the line was about £453,750.

The foregoing are the only branches of the Midland Railway connected with Derbyshire, if we except the Leicester and Burton, extending from Leicester by Ashby-de-la-Zouch to Burton-on-Trent, which crosses for a few miles the extreme southern portion of the county, between Ashby and Burton. There is nothing, however, in connection with it worth mentioning, and the only other railways in or connected with the county are as follow, viz.:—

The North Staffordshire Railway.—This railway is composed of numerous lines and branches, lying chiefly in the northern portion of Staffordshire, but partly along the borders of that county and Derbyshire, at the south-western edge of the latter. The various lines and branches composing this railway make a total length of 122 miles. It is, however, only necessary to mention here the following portions, as they only are connected with this county. They are as follows, viz.—that portion of the main line from Uttoxeter to Burton and Derby (Willington),—that portion of the Churnet Valley from Rocester Junction to Uttoxeter and the Ashbourne Branch.

The Main Line, coming from Crewe, through the densely populated district of the Potteries, first approaches the confines of Staffordshire, at Uttoxeter, where it enters the valley of the river Dove, and from whence it continues in a direction rather to the south of east, following the course of that river, and terminating by junctions with the Midland Railway by two separate branches respectively at, Willington (6 miles from Derby) and Burton-upon-Trent. The portion from Uttoxeter to Burton was opened for traffic September 11th, 1848, the Willington Branch July 13th, 1849.

The Churnet Valley Line, which, descending the romantic valley of the river Churnet (a tributary of the Dove,) from the direction of Macclesfield, by Leek and Alton Towers, approaches Derbyshire at Rocester, 3½ miles from Uttoxeter, at which place it is joined by the Ashbourne Branch. It was opened on the 13th of July, 1849.

The Ashbourne Branch.—This branch commences from a junction with the Churnet Valley Line as already mentioned at Rocester, 3½ miles from Uttoxeter, and proceeding in a north-easterly direction for a distance of 6¾ miles, chiefly also up the valley of the Dove, terminating at the market-town of Ashbourne, in this county. This branch was constructed in a great measure for the accommodation of visitors to the celebrated scenery of Dovedale, about 4 miles from Ashbourne. The works were commenced July 2nd, 1851, and the branch was opened for traffic on the 31st of May, 1852. The Act was obtained in 1848, and its cost was about £60,000.

The foregoing are the only lines of railway in or along the borders of the county of Derbyshire. Those branches of the Midland not in Derbyshire are as follows, viz. :—

The Sheffield and Rotherham Branch, purchased from the Sheffield & Rotherham Company, at a price of a guaranteed dividend of 6 per Cent. upon the capital of the line £150,000. Length of line, 6 miles.

The Leeds and Bradford Branch and Extension to Colne—extending from Leeds by Shipley to Bradford, and from Shipley, 3 miles from the latter place, to Colne in Lancashire, with a branch of a mile in length to the North Midland at Leeds. Total length 42 miles; Act obtained 1844; capital £400,000. Extension Act 1845; capital £500,000. Leased of the Leeds and Bradford Railway Company at a rent of 10 per Cent. upon their total capital of £900,000. Since, however, purchased outright by the Midland Company.

The Nottingham and Mansfield and Mansfield and Pinxton Branches.—The former extending from Nottingham to Kirkby-in-Ashfield and Mansfield, and the latter from Kirkby to Pinxton, where it forms a junction with the Erewash Valley Branch as already mentioned. The cost of the works was about £70,000. The cost of the Nottingham and Mansfield Branch was about £200,000. Length of line, Nottingham to Mansfield 17 miles, Kirkby Junction to Pinxton 3¼. Total, 20¼ miles.

The Nottingham and Lincoln Branch, with branch to Southwell, &c., extends from Nottingham to Newark and Lincoln, a distance of 33 miles. Total length of Nottingham and Lincoln and branches, about 36 miles. Cost, upwards of £600,000.

The Syston and Peterboro' Branch, extending from Syston, by Melton, Oakham, and Stamford to Peterboro'. Syston is 4½ miles from Leicester, on the South Branch of the Midland Railway. Length of line, 48¼ miles. Cost, nearly £1,000,000.

The Leicester and Burton Branch, composed partly of the Old Leicester and Swannington Line. Single line, opened 1832, and leased by the Midland Company at a price of a guarantee of 8 per cent. upon their capital of £140,000, this Company taking also to their debt of £70,000; and partly of new lines constructed by the Midland Company themselves. This line, when the Leicester and Hitchin is opened, will form a through line between the South of England and the North Staffordshire districts. The new portions, with the altered portions of the old, line were opened for passengers, 1st of August, 1849. The cost of those works was a little more than £600,000.

The Bristol & Birmingham Branch, composed of the former Birmingham & Gloucester, and Gloucester & Bristol Railways, with their branches, taken on lease 1st of July, 1845, but afterwards purchased outright, for a guarantee of 6 per cent. upon the amount of capital expended; and the recently constructed Gloucester and Stonehouse Junction Line. Length nearly 7 miles, running from Gloucester to the point where the former Gloucester and Bristol Railway branches off from the Great Western Railway at Stonehouse. The length of the Bristol and Birmingham, with branches, is 102 miles. The Act for the Gloucester and Stonehouse, was obtained in 1848, and the line opened for traffic on the 29th of May, 1854. Its cost, including that of laying a third line of rails from Stonehouse to Bristol, 30 miles, was about £141,000. In addition to the foregoing, the Midland Company have leased for 21 years, commencing from the 5th of April, 1852, the (Yorkshire) North Western Line, running from Skipton to Settle, Ingleton, and Lancaster—length 44 miles; and have also acquired the Ashby Canal (30 miles) and tramways (13½ miles), purchased for £109,900. Making a Grand Total of upwards of 560 miles of Railway, 47 miles of Canal (including the Cromford), and 13½ miles of tramway, owned or maintained by the Midland Railway Company.
